Could we, sister Graces, of the skies
Put up those same steps descending, methinks of late
With angelic hands on earth.
FESTUS A POEM.

New York
JAMES MILLER, PUBLISHER
647 Broadway
FESTUS

A POEM

BY

PHILIP JAMES BAILEY.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY HAMMETT BILLINGS.

FROM THE THIRD LONDON EDITION.

NEW YORK:
JAMES MILLER, PUBLISHER, 647 BROADWAY.
1872.
Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1852, by

Benjamin B. Mussey & Company, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the District of Massachusetts DEDICATION.

My Father! unto thee, to whom I owe
All that I am, all that I have and can,
Who madest me in thyself the sum of man
In all his generous aims and powers to know,
These first fruits bring I; nor do thou forego
Marking when I the boyish feat began,
Which numbers now near three years from its plan,
Not twenty summers had imbrowned my brow.
Life is at blood-heat every page doth prove.
If there be aught which thou canst love, it springs
Out of the hope that I might earn that love,
More unto me than immortality,
Or to have strung my harp with golden strings.

1839

365984
PREFACE

TO THE AMERICAN EDITION.

We here present to the American public a book which has produced no little sensation in England, and which has been, for some time, known to many in this country. But although the first edition was issued six years since, it has had but a limited circulation among us; and it is believed that, in republishing "Festus," we not only perform a work which its merits demand, but open, for the first time, to many who will appreciate it, a great and original poem. The peculiar value of the second English edition, from which this is printed, consists in the "Proem," which was not attached to the first.

With many minds, it will be difficult to acquit the author from the charge of irreverence. For this purpose, we refer to his vindication in the Proem and in the body of the work; by which the reader will perceive that he is free from irreverence in spirit, whatever question there may be as to the propriety of certain forms of expression. As to the extravagances, which all will discover they are the extravagances of deep and eloquent passion — the luxuriant overgrowth of a profoundly rich soil. With all its faults, "Festus" is a great poem — a mine of thought and imagery. It is perfectly safe to pronounce it one of the most powerful and splendid productions of the age.
PROEM.

This time is equal to all time that's past
Of like extent, nor needs to hide its face
Before the future. Each is missioned here.
Our God is still as kind, and all His gifts
Like wondrous, like unlimited, like fair,
As when the wind first blew. Man is to God
That he hath ever been. Still shines the sun
As keen and pure on the gray rotting rock,
As on the universal matter once,
Ere now marmoreal floods had spread their couch
Of purdurable snow, or granite wrought
Its skyward impulse from earth's hearth of fire
Up to insanest heights. And still to them
Who live alone with nature and with God,
Smile with the sun, and sadden with the moon,
The elements their brethren, e'en as men,
Come gifts unasked, unmeasured like the light
Which lights at countless points the formless whole.
Wherefore let us too bless God and take heart;
All ages are His children, and all worlds
Form from His breath like dew-drops out of air;
He life in all infusing. Nor is this
An outlawed orb nor excommunicate.
All things He makes, He loves and blesses too,
And renders rich with gifts and powers; that each
Teaching themselves and others, Him may learn.
One gift to some, to some another. Thus
Nature is justly deemed of but by few,
And wisdom scantily welcomed; for her fare
Lacks dainties, though to all she setteth forth
Her homely bread, and hospitable wine,
And sacred salt. And though we should by art
Bring earth to gas, and desiccate the sea
To a thin sheet of vapor, we shall yet
Find, in the end, the volume of the world
Is legible alone to those who use
The interlinear version of the light;
Which is the spirit's and given within ourselves.

Poetry is itself a thing of God;
He made His prophets poets: and the more
We feel of poesie do we become
Like God in love and power,—under-makers.
And song is of the supernatural
Natural utterance; and solely can
Speak the unbounded beauty of the world,
And the premortal concords of pure mind.
All great lays, equals to the minds of men,
Deal more or less with the Divine, and have
For end some good of mind or soul of man.
The mind is this world's, but the soul is God's;
The wise man joins them here all in his power.
The high and holy works, amid lesser lays,
Stand up like churches among village cots;
And it is joy to think that in every age,
However much the world was wrong therein,
The greatest works of mind or hand have been Done unto God. So may they ever be!
It shows the strength of wish we have to be great,
And the sublime humility of might.

True fiction hath in it a higher end
Than fact; it is the possible compared
With what is merely positive, and gives
To the conceptive soul an inner world,
A higher, ampler Heaven than that wherein
The nations sun themselves. In that bright state
Are met the mental creatures of the men
Whose names are writ highest on the rounded crown
Of Fame's triumphal arch; the shining shapes
Which star the skies of that invisible land,
Which, whosoe'er would enter, let him learn;—
'Tis not enough to draw forms fair and lively.
Their conduct likewise must be beautiful;
A hearty holiness must crown the work,
As a gold cross the minster-dome, and show,
Like that instonement of divinity,
That the whole building doth belong to God.
And for the book before us, though it were,
What it is not, supremely little, like
The needled angle of a high church spire,
Its sole end points to God the Father's glory,
From all eternity seen; making clear
His might and love in saving sinful man.
For though sin-saturated like a wick
In wax, consuming with cathartic fire,
The spirit yet enshrined in Heaven shall shine,
A burning glory dedicate to God.
One bard shows God as He deals with states and kings;
Another, as He dealt with the first man;
Another, as with Heaven and earth and hell;
Ours, as He loves to order a chance soul
Chosen out of the world, from first to last.
All points are central to the Infinite:
Therefore it is that Deity which fills
The spheres, unnumbered but of Him who made
The space-existent whole, one human heart
With equal power and specialty inspires.
And all along it is the heart of man
Emblemed, created and creative mind.
It is a statued mind and naked heart
Which is struck out. Other bards draw men dressed
In manners, customs, forms, appearances,
Laws, places, times, and countless accidents
Of peace or polity: to him these are not;
He makes no mention, takes no compt of them:—
But shows, however great his doubts, sins, trials,
Whatever earthborn pleasures soil man's soul,
What power soever he may gain of evil,
That still, till death, time is; that God's great Heaven
Stands open day and night to man and spirit;
For all are of the race of God, and have
In themselves good. The life-writ of a heart,
Whose firmest prop and highest meaning was
The hope of serving God as poet-priest,
And the belief that He would not put back
Love-offerings, though brought to Him by hands
Unclean and earthy, even as fallen man's
Must be; and most of all, the thankful show
Of His high power and goodness in redeeming
And blessing souls that love Him, spite of sin
And their old earthy strain,—these are the aims,
The doctrines, truths, and staple of the story.
What theme sublimer than soul being saved?
'Tis the bard's aim to show the mind-made world
Without, within; how the soul stands with God,
And the unseen realities about us.
It is a view of life spiritual
And earthly. Let all look upon it, then,
In the same light it was drawn and colored in;
In faith, in that the writer too hath faith,
Albeit an effect, and not a cause.
Faith is a higher faculty than reason,
Though of the brightest power of revelation;
As the snow-headed mountain rises o'er
The lightning, and applies itself to Heaven.
We know in daytime there are stars about us,
Just as at night, and name them what and where
By sight of science; so by faith we know,
Although we may not see them till our night,
That spirits are about us, and believe,
That, to a spirit's eye, all Heaven may be
As full of angels as a beam of light
Of motes. As spiritual, it shows all
Classes of life, perhaps, above our kind,
Known to tradition, reason, or God's word,
Whose bright foundations are the heights of Heaven.
As earthly, it embodies most the life
Of youth, its powers, its aims, its deeds, its failings;
And, as a sketch of world-life, it begins
And ends, and rightly, in Heaven and with God;
While Heaven is also in the midst thereof.

God, or all good, the evil of the world,
And man, wherein are both, are each displayed.
The mortal is the model of all men.
The foibles, follies, trials, sufferings—
And manifest and manifold are they—

Of a young, hot, unworld-schooled heart that has
Had its own way in life, and wherein all
May see some likeness of their own,—'tis these Attract, unite, and, sunlike, concentrate
The ever-moving system of our feelings.
The hero is the world-man, in whose heart
One passion stands for all, the most indulged.
The scenes wherein he plays his part are life,
A sphere whose centre is co-heavenly
With its divine original and end.
Like life, too, as a whole, the story hath
A moral, and each scene one, as in life,—
One universal and peculiar truth—
Shining upon it like the quiet moon
Illustrating the obscure unequal earth;—
And though these scenes to careless eyes may seem
Irregular and rough and unconnected,
Like to the stones at Stonehenge,—though convolved,
And in primeval mystery,—still a use,
A meaning, and a purpose may be marked
Among them of a temple reared to God:—
The meaning alway dwelling in the word,
In secret sanctity, like a golden toy
Mid Beauty’s orbéd bosom. Scenes of earth
And Heaven are mixed, as flesh and soul in man

Eternity pertains alone to God;
And immortality to man; to those
Which reason lack, life only. Laws there are Twain in the which man walks; the law of law
Of custom, conscience, creed, time, circumstance;
Law superficial this; the other is
To those which breathe the light, the law of laws,
Eternal, spiritual, central. These
To mix breeds chaos, and yet not to mix
Impossible to cultivated man.
The more developed the interior law
The clearer things will brighten, till at last
The whole world shines translucent, and we live
Priests, prophets, princes, all predestinate
Coeval with the eldest of the Heavens.
Earth is the floor of Heaven; in all we see
The great world-worker, the eternal Lord,
And operative Omnipotent, in all
Sunlike the sole inhabitant of Heaven,
The dweller in each fairy orb of dew.
He, the all Parent of the seed Divine;
He, the eternal elements of Heaven,
The golden generations of the light,
Begets, brings forth. The world is God's great will
In action, Heaven in repose. The soul
Breathed into time, He, aye at last translates
Into celestial bliss, the life divine,
The primal, final, total state of Heaven
And normal perfectness in Deity.
All that is good is deathless, as of God.
E'en in the petty segment of this life
Our will involves our capability;
And in the vast conditions of the eterne
The possible, the probable, and that,
The infinite becoming definite,
The pure conclusive certainty of Truth.

Necessity, like electricity,
Is in ourselves and all things, and no more
Without us than within us; and we live,
We of this mortal mixture, in the same law
As the pure colorless intelligence
Which dwells in Heaven, and the dead Hadëan shades.

We will and act and talk of liberty;
And all our wills and all our doings both
Are limited within this little life.
Free will is but necessity in play,—
The clattering of the golden reins which guide
The thunder-footed coursers of the sun.
The ship which goes to sea informed with fire,
Obeying only its own iron force,
Reckless of adverse tide, breeze dead, or weak
As infant's parting breath, too faint to stir
The feather held before it,—is as much
The appointed thrall of all the elements,
As the white-bosomed bark which woos the wind,
And when it dies desists. And thus with man;
However contrary he sets his heart
To God, he is but working out His will;
And, at an infinite angle, more or less
Obeying his own soul's necessity.
He only hath free will whose will is fate.
   Evil and good are God's right hand and left.
By ministry of evil good is clear,
And by temptation virtue: as of yore
Out of the grave rose God. Let this be deemed Enough to justify the portion weighed
To the great spirit Evil, named herein.
If evil seem the most, yet good most is:
As water may be deep and pure below,
Although the face be filmy for a time.
And if the spirit of evil seem more in
The work than God, it is but to work His will,
Who therefore is all that the other seems.
And evil is in almost every scene
Of life more or less forward. Above all
The mystery of the Trinity is held,
Whose mystery is its reasonableness.
All that is said of Deity is said
In love and reverence. Be it so conceived
What comes before and after the great world,—
Deep in the secretest abyss of Light,
And Being's most reserved immensity,—
God alone knows eternally; but with
The present is communion creatural:
He liveth in the sacrament of life.
And for the soul of man delineate here—
The outline half invisible—is shown
The self-sought grace, the self-aspiring truth
And natural religion of the heart
Contrasting Godhood with humanity
Ever; whereas the Spirit aye unites.
Temptation, and its workings in the heart
Whose faint and false resistance but assists,—
Ambition, thirst of secret lore, joy, love—
River-like, doubling sometimes on itself—
Adventure, pleasure, travel heavenly
And earthly, friendship, passion, poesie,
Viewed ever in their spiritual end—
And power, celestial happiness and earth's
Millennial foretaste, ill annihilate,
The restoration of the angels lost,
And one salvation universal given
To all create,—all these, related, form,
With much beside, the body of the work;—
The islands, seas, and mainland of its orb.

Thus much then for this book. It aims to mark
The various beliefs as well as doubts
Which hold or search by turns the mind of youth
Unresting any where. Its heresies,
If such they be, are charitable ones;—
For they who read not in the best belief
That all souls may be saved, read to no end.
We were made to be saved. We are of God.
Nor bates the book one tittle of the truth,
To smooth its way to favor with the fearful.

It is not moral standards which the bard
Is called on to inculcate; such pertain
To other ministries; the law of life
His all-comprising province. Yet he errs
Who faithful may be to his higher end,
Unites not both in one symmetric plan,
Lofty and plain and pure as are the skies;
All forms resolving to one element.

All rests with those who read. A work or thought
Is what each makes it to himself, and may
Be full of great dark meanings, like the sea,
With shoals of life rushing; or like the air,
Benighted with the wing of the wild dove,
Sweeping miles broad o'er the far western woods,
With mighty glimpses of the central light—
Or may be nothing—bodiless, spiritless.

Above all fear, without presumption, he
Who wrote this work hath said respecting it
These few brief words, to face his friend the world;
Revising, not reversing, what hath been.
Now therefore to his work and to the world
The writer bids God speed! It matters not
If they agree or differ. Each perchance
May bear true witness to another end.
Let then what hath been, be. It boots not here
To palliate misdoings. 'Twere less toil
To build Colossus than to hew a hill
Into a statue. Hail and farewell, all!
FESTUS.

Scene—Heaven.

God.

Eternity hath snowed its years upon them;
And the white winter of their age is come,
The world and all its worlds; and all shall end

Seraphim. God! God! God!
As flames in skies
We burn and rise
And lose ourselves in Thee:
Years on years!
And nought appears
Save God to be.
God! God! God!
To us—no thought
Hath Being brought
Toward Thee that doth not move.
Years on years!
And what appears
Save God to love?
God! God! God!
All Thou dost make
Lies like a lake
Below Thine infinite eye
Years on years!
And all appears
Save God to die.

Cherubim. As sun and star,
How high or far,
Show but a boundless sky;
So creature mind
Is all confined
To show Thee, God, most High!
The sun still burns,
The sun still turns
Round, round himself and round
So creature mind
To self's confined,
But Thou, God, hast no bound!
Systems arise,
Or a world dies,
Each constant hour in air;
But creature mind,
In Heaven confined,
Lives on like Thee, God! there.
FESTUS.

SERAPHIM AND CHERUBIM. God! God! God!
Thou fill'st our eyes
As were the skies
One burning, boundless sun;
While creature mind,
In path confined,
Passeth a spot thereon.
God! God! God!

LUCIFER. Ye thrones of Heaven, how bright, how pure ye are!
How have ye brightened since I saw ye first!
How have I darkened since ye saw me last!
What is the dark abyss of fire, and what
The ravenous heights of air, o'er which I reign,
In agony of glory, to these seats?
The loathsome cavern of the oracle,
O'er which ye rise in templed majesty,
Filled with the incense of all worshippers,
And echoing with the eloquence of God,
Which rolls in sunny clouds around the Heavens.
Yet must I work through world and life my fate:
And winding through the wards of human hearts,
Steal their incarnate strength. Death does his work
In secret and in joy intense, untold:
As though an earthquake smacked its mumbling lips
O'er some thick-peopled city. But for me,
Exists not peace nor pleasure, even here,
Where all beside, the very faintest thought,
Is rapture. I will speak to God as erst.
Father of spirit, as the sun of air!
Beginning of all ends, and end of all
Beginnings, throughout whole Eternity;
From whom Eternity and every power
Perfect, and pure cause, is and emanates;
Originator without origin!
End without end! Creator of all ages,
And sabbath of all Being; who hast made
All numbers sacred, who art all and one!
At whose right hand the wisdom of all worlds
Combined, is only fearful foolishness
Or inarticulate madness,—and Thou, Lord!
Maker and Perfecter of all, the one!
Being above all Being, God the Life!
Who art the way whereon the world proceeds
From God, all-making, and whereby returns
The ever generated universe!—
Who rulest all worlds in the law of light,
Thy nature and their own; who art before
All ages, angels, blessed, times and worlds;
Word that in every world art safe to save
All souls, impregned with spirit, God-begot!
And Thou eternal spirit-Deity!
The sanctifier of the universe!
Being, and Life, and Spirit, who dost make,
Destroyest, recreatest, makest God!
God one and Trine! thou seest me here again!
Still, sunlike, though eclipsed, of blinding power
And fiery cause, and everness of ill;
Behold I bow before Thee; hear Thou me!

God.

What wouldst thou, Lucifer?

Lucifer. There is a youth

Among the sons of men I fain would have Given up wholly to me.

God.

He is thine,

To tempt.

Lucifer. I thank Thee, Lord!

God.

Upon his soul

Thou hast no power. All souls are mine for aye.

And I do give thee leave to this that he

May know my love is more than all his sin,

And prove unto himself that nought but God

Can satisfy the soul He maketh great.

Lucifer. Thou, God, art all in one! Thy infinite

Bounds being. Thou hast said the world shall end.

The world is perfect, as concerns itself,

And all its parts and ends; not as towards Thee.

So man is likest and unlikest God,

Of all existence; therefore doth as much

Resemble Thee as any act a mind.

In him of whom I ask, I seek once more

To tempt the living world, and then depart.

The Holy Ghost. And I will hallow him to the ends of Heaven,

That though he plunge his soul in sin like a sword
In water, it shall no wise cling to him.

He is of Heaven. All things are known in Heaven,
Ere aimed at upon earth. The child is chosen.

SAINTS. Another soul
The Holy One
Hath chosen out of earth;
And there is none
Throughout the whole
Like worthy of his birth.

GUARDIAN ANGEL. Oh! who hath joy like mine?
was I not here

When from Thy boundless bosom, as a star
Out of the air, that soul was kindled, Lord!
And to me given to guard and guide—while both,
Mid starry strains out of the depths of Heaven,
Fell at Thy feet in worship?—joy of joys!
To you, ye saints and angels, let me speak;
For ye I see rejoice with me. Ye know
What 'tis to triumph o'er temptation, what
To fall before it; how the young spirit faints—
The virgin tremor, the heart's ebb and flow,
When first some vast temptation calmly comes
And states itself before it, like the sun
Low looming in the west, above the wave
Of wimpling streamlet, ere its waters grow
To size aortal. Than the Fiend himself
There is no greater evil. Less the shame
Of yielding, more the glory of conquering,
In him, to whom he goes, this soul elect.
From infancy through childhood, up to youth, Have I this soul attended; marked him blest With all the sweet and sacred ties of life; — The prayerful love of parents, pride of friends, Prosperity, and health and ease, the aids Of learning, social converse with the good And gifted, and his heart all lit with love, Like to the rolling sea with living light; — Hopeful and generous and earnest; rich In commune with high spirits, loving truth And wisdom for their own divinest selves: Tracking the deeds of the world’s glory, or Conning the words of wisdom, Heaven-inspired, As on the soul, in pure effectual ray, The bright, transparent atoms, thought by thought, Fall fixed forevermore. And thus his days, Through sunny noon, or moonéd eve, or night Star-armied, shining through the deathless air, All radiant­ly elapsed, in good or joy. All this for long I marked. There grew, at length, A change within his spirit, and I feared A fatal and a final fall from good. God’s love seemed lost upon him. He became Heart-deadened. Watching, warning, vain, I fled Hither to intercede with God our Lord, To bless him with salvation. We may plead Alway for those we love, by leave divine. Nor knew I till this moment, with all Heaven, That, in the righteous providence of God,
That soul was saved. Thou knowest, Lord! the mould
Of mortals, and the infinite end whereto
The souls Thou savest are predestinate;
Oh! be Thy mercy mighty to this soul,
Fiend threatened; nor permit him who presides
O'er hell's eternal holocaust, too far
To tempt or tamper with the heart of man!—

God.

My mercy doth outstretch the universe;
Shall it not be sufficient for one soul?

Lucifer. I am the wrath of God unto myself,
And by him made to do my part. Do thou
Thine. They are far enough apart, I ween.

Guardian Angel. The heaven-strung chords of man's immortal soul
Are not for thee to wither at thy will.
Bear witness, all ye blessed, to the word;—
Angels, intelligences, sons of God!
Ye who know nought but truth, feel nought but love,
Will nought but bliss, do nought but righteousness!
Whose life was ere the Heavens were conceived,
The stars begotten, or the ages born;
Ye many-ordered hierarchies, which are
The love, truth, justice, majesty and might,
Dominion, glory, wisdom, bliss of God;
Ye through whose ministry of mercy—His Immediate, ever instant, active, all
Spirits and worlds are governed—age by age
Gazing and gaining glory; ye who stand,
Stirless, before the throne, entranced in joy;
Or ye, whose life is to present all souls
Reborn to their Creator; or to search
The golden-globed skies for deeds of grace;
And ye who move all Heavens, in whose names
The name of God is, as in angels' all;
The crown, the wisdom, the intelligence,
Kindness, and strength and beauty, splendor, worth,
Original and rule; and ye who move
Restless around the throne, the burning seven,
The virtue, power, salvation, fire and rest,
Blessing and praise of God; and ye who rule
Regions or kingdoms, states, tribes, families,
Ages and times, and seasons, and events;
Systems and elements, material powers,
Mental and spiritual; or ye who bear
Souls from the Heaven to earth, from earth to Heaven;
Ye tenants of the archetypal worlds
And spiritual spheres; and you, ye saints!
Freed once on earth into the liberty
Of the necessity which is of God;
Yours are the many multitudes of stars,
And bliss and power forever, ye are gods!
And live an endless life, bespoken here;
Bear witness, all, that happiness succeeds
To godliness; and that, despite of sin,
The world may recognize in all time's scenes,
Though belts of clouds bar half its burning disk,
The overruling, overthrowing power,
Which by our creature purposes works out
Its deeds, and by our deeds its purposes.

Lucifer. God! for Thy glory only can I act,
And for Thy creatures' good. When creatures stray
Farthest from Thee, then warmest towards them burns
Thy love, even as yon sun beams hotliest on
The earth when distant most.

God.

The earth whereon
He dwells, this grain selected from the sands
Of life, dies with him.

Lucifer. God! I go to do
Thy will.

God.

Thou, too, who watchest o'er the world
Whose end I fix, prepare to have it judged.

Angel of Earth. Let me not then have watched o'er it in vain.
From age to age, from hour to hour I still
Have hoped it would grow better—hope so now;
'Tis better than it once was, and hath more
Of mind and freedom than it ever had.
I love it more than ever. Thou didst give
It to me as a child. To me earth is Even as the boundless universe to Thee;
Nay, more! for Thou couldst make another. It is My world. Take it not from me, Lord! Thou, Christ!
Mad'st it the altar where Thou offeredst up
Thyself for the creation. Let it be Immortal as Thy love. And altars are Holy; and sister angels, sister orbs
Hail it afar as such. Oh! I have heard
World question world and answer; seen them weep
Each other if eclipsed for one red hour,
And of all worlds most generous was mine,
The tenderest and the fairest.

LUCIFER. Knowest thou not
God's Son to be the brother and the friend
Of spirit every where? Or hath thy soul
Been bound forever to thy foolish world?

ANGEL. Star unto star speaks light, and world to world
Repeats the password of the universe
To God; the name of Christ—the one great word
Well worth all languages in earth or Heaven.

SON OF GOD. Think not I lived and died for thine alone,
And that no other sphere hath hailed me Christ.
My life is ever suffering for love.
In judging and redeeming worlds is spent
Mine everlasting being.

LUCIFER. Earth He next
Will judge; for so saith God.

ANGEL OF EARTH. Be it not, Lord!
Thou art a God of goodness and of love;
He is the evil of the universe,
And loveth not the earth, Thy Son, nor Thee.
Thou knowest best.

Lucifer. Behold now all yon worlds!
The space each fills shall be its successor.
Accept the consolation.

Angel of Earth. Earth! Oh, Earth!
Lucifer. 'Tis earth shall lead destruction; she shall end.

The stars shall wonder why she comes no more
On her accustomed orbit, and the sun
Miss one of his apostle lights; the moon,
An orphan orb, shall seek for earth for aye,
Through time's untrodden depths, and find her not;
No more shall morn, out of the holy east,
Stream o'er the amber air her level light;
Nor evening, with the spectral fingers, draw
Her star-sprent curtain round the head of earth;
Her footsteps never thence again shall grace
The blue sublime of Heaven. Her grave is dug.
I see the stars, night-clad, all gathering
In long and sad procession. Death's at work.
And, one by one, shall all yon wandering worlds,
Whether in orbed path they roll, or trail,
In an inestimable length of light,
Their golden train of tresses after them,
Cease; and the sun, centré and sire of light,
The keystone of the world-built arch of Heaven,
Be left in burning solitude. The stars,
Which stand as thick as dewdrops on the fields
Of Heaven, and all they comprehend, shall pass.
The spirits of all worlds shall all depart
To their great destinies; and thou and I,
Greater in grief than worlds, shall live as now.
In hell's dark annals there is something writ,
Which shall amaze man yet. There! to thy earth!

Angel of Earth. There is a blind world, yet unlit
by God,
Rolling around the extremest edge of light;
Where all things are disaster and decay,
The outcast of all being; no one thing
Fitting another: that is fit for thee.
Be that thy world, but not the living earth.
Stretch forth Thy shining shield, O God! the Heavens,
Over the prostrate earth, an armed friend,
And save her from the swift and violent hell
Her beauty hath enchanted! from the wrath
Of love like his, Oh save her, though by death!

God.
Destruction and salvation are the hands
Upon the face of time. When both unite,
The day of death dawns. Every orb exists
Unto its preappointed end: and earth,
My creature, the elect of worlds, ere all
Is saved. The world shall perish as a worm
Upon destruction's path; the universe
Evanish like a ghost before the sun,
Yea, like a doubt before the truth of God,
Yet nothing more than death shall perish. Then,
Rejoice, ye souls of God regenerate,
Ye indwellers divine of Deity;
In Him ye are immortal as Himself.

Son of God. O'er all things are eternity and change,
And special predilection of our God.
Thou who createst souls, as the sun clouds,
Out of the sea of spirit, sire of both
The first and second natures of Thy Son,
In whom the maker and the made make one,
Deific spirit! who in every world
Payeth creation's penalties; in all,
Is heir of God and nature, and in Thee,
And in self-worship deifies himself.
And you blest spirits for whom I died, for whom.
Fore-fated, fore-atoned for from the first,
All Heaven reserves the fulness of its bliss;
Creator and created! witness, both,
How I have loved ye, as God-natured life
Alone can love and suffer. Let the earth
And every orb, the offspring of all air,
Perish; but all I die for, live for me.

God.
The earth shall not be when her sabbath ends,
In the high close of order.

Lucifer. Heaven, farewell!
Hell is more bearable than nothingness.

Thrones. Thou, God, art Lord of mercy! and Thy thoughts
Are high above the star-dust of the world!

Dominations. Yet o'er the meanest atom reignest

Thou

Omnipotent, as o'er the universe!

Powers. Thy might is self-creative, and Thy works, Immortal, temporal, destructible, Are ever in Thy sight and blessed there. The Heavens are Thy bosom, and Thine eye Is high o'er all existence; yea, the worlds Are but Thy shining footprints upon space.

Princedoms. Eternal Lord! Thy strength compels the worlds, And bows the heads of ages; at Thy voice Their unsubstantial essence wears away.

Virtues. All-favoring God! we glory but in Thee. Ye Heavens exalt, expand yourselves! they come, The infinite generations, all Divine, Of Deity, our brethren and our friends!

Archangels. Thou who hast thousand names, as night hath stars, Which light Thee up to eye create, yet not One thousandth part illume Thy boundlessness, Nor that abyss of Being 'midst of which Thy countless wonders constellate themselves; Thy light, the light we dwell in shall at last Fulfil the universe, and all be bliss; The consummation of all ages come. We praise Thee for Thy mercies, and for this, The first, and last, the greatest of all boons.
FESTUS.

ANGELS. Thee, God! we praise
Through our ne'er sunsetting days,
And Thy just ways,
Divine:
In Thy hand is every spirit,
And the meed the same may merit;
All which all the worlds inherit
Are Thine.
It is not unto creatures given
To scale the purposes of Heaven,
Alway just and kind;
But before Thy mighty breath,
Life and spirit, dust and death,
The boundless All is driven,
Like clouds by wind.

ANGEL OF EARTH. Woe! woe at last in Heaven!
Earth to death is given;
The ends of things hang still
Over them as a sky;
Do what we will,
All's for eternity!

Scene—Wood and Water—Sunset.

Festus alone.

Festus. This is to be a mortal and immortal!
To live within a circle,—and to be
That dark point where the shades of all things around
Meet, mix and deepen. All things unto me
Show their dark sides. Somewhere there must be light.
Oh! I feel like a seed in the cold earth;
Quickening at heart, and pining for the air.
Passion is destiny. The heart is its own
Fate. It is well youth's gold rubs off so soon.
The heart gets dizzy with its drunken dance,
And the voluptuous vanities of life
Enchain, enchant, and cheat my soul no more.
My spirit is on edge. I can enjoy
Nought which has not the honeyed sting of sin;
That soothing fret which makes the young untried
Longing to be beforehand with their nature,
In dreams and loneliness cry, they die to live;
That wanton whetting of the soul, which, while
It gives a finer, keener edge for pleasure,
Wastes more and dulls the sooner. Rouse thee, heart;
Bow of my life thou yet art full of spring!
My quiver still hath many purposes.
Yet what is worth a thought of all things here?
How mean, how miserable every care;
How doubtful, too, the system of the mind!
And then the ceaseless, changeless, hopeless round
Of weariness, and heartlessness and woe,
And vice and vanity! Yet these make life;
The life at least I witness, if not feel.
No matter—we are immortal. How I wish
I could love men! for amid all life's quests
There seems but worthy one—to do men good
It matters not how long we live, but how.
For as the parts of one manhood while here
We live in every age: we think and feel
And feed upon the coming and the gone
As much as on the now time. Man is one:
And he hath one great heart. It is thus we feel,
With a gigantic throb athwart the sea,
Each others' rights and wrongs; thus are we men.
Let us think less of men and more of God.
Sometimes the thought comes swiftening over us,
Like a small bird winging the still blue air;
And then again, at other times, it rises
Slow, like a cloud which scales the skies all breathless,
And just overhead lets itself down on us.
Sometimes we feel the wish across the mind
Rush like a rocket tearing up the sky,
That we should join with God and give the world
The slip: but while we wish, the world turns round,
And peeps us in the face—the wanton world;
We feel it gently pressing down our arm—
The arm we had raised to do for truth such wonders;
We feel it softly bearing on our side—
We feel it touch and thrill us through the body—
And we are fools, and there's an end of us.
'Tis a fine thought that sometime end we must.
There sets the sun of suns! dies in all fire,
Like Ashur's death-great monarch. God of might!
We love and live on power. It is spirit's end.
Mind must subdue. To conquer is its life.
Why mad'st Thou not one spirit, like the sun,
To king the world? And Oh! might I have been
That sun-mind, how I would have warmed the world
To love and worship and bright life!

Lucifer, suddenly appearing. Not thou!
Hadst thou more power, the more wouldst thou misuse.
It seems as thou hadst grown out of the air.
Lucifer. Thou know'st me well. Though stranger to thine eye,
I am not to thy heart.
Festus. I know thee not.
Lucifer. Come nearer. Look on me. I am above thee;
Beneath thee, and around thee, and before thee.
Festus. Why, art thou all things, or dost go through all?
A spirit, or embodied blast of air?
I feel thou art a spirit.
Lucifer. Yea, I am.
Festus. I knew it. I am glad, yet tremble so.
What hours upon hours have I longed for this,
And hoped that thought or prayer might produce.
I have besought the stars, with tears, to send
A power unto me; and have set the clouds
Until I thought I saw one coming: but
The shadowy giant alway thinned away,
And I was fated unimmortalized.
What shall I do? Oh! let me kneel to thee!
   Lucifer. Nay, rise! and I'll not say, for thine own sake,
That thou dost pray in private to the Devil.
   Festus. Father of lies, thou liest!
   Lucifer. I am he!
It is enough to make the Devil merry,
To think that men call on me momentarily,
Deeming me ever dungeoned fast in Hell;
Swearer and swaggerer jeer at my name;
And oft indeed it is a special jest
With witling gallants. Let me once appear!
Woe's me! they faint and shudder—pale and pray;
The burning oath which quivered on the lip
Starts back, and sears and blisters up the tongue;
Confusion ransacks the abandoned heart,
Quells the bold blood, and o'er the vaulted brow
Slips the white woman-hand. To judgment, ho!
The very pivot of the earth seems snapped;
And down they drop like ruins to repent.
Such be the bravery of mighty man!
   Festus. I must be mad; or mine eye cheats my brain;
And this strange phantom comes from over-thought,
Like the white lightning from a day too hot.
It must be so. But I will pass it.
   Lucifer. Stay!
Festus. Oh save me, God! He is reality!
Lucifer. And now thou kneel'st to Heaven. Fye, graceless boy!
Mocking thy Maker with a cast-off prayer;
For had not I the first fruits of thy faith?
Festus. Tempter, away! From all the crowds of life
Why single me? Why score the young green bole
For fellage? Go! Am I the youngest, worst?
No! Light the fires of hell with other souls;
Mine shall not burn with thee.
Lucifer. Thou judgest harshly.
Can I not touch thee without slaying thee?
Festus. Why art thou here? What wouldst thou have with me?
Lucifer. 'Fore all I would have gentle words and looks.
Festus. I pray thee, go.
Lucifer. I cannot quit thee yet.
But why so sad? Wilt kneel to me again?
This leafy closet is most apt for prayer.
Festus. Yes; I will pray for thee and for myself.
Lucifer. Waste not thy prayers; I scatter them:
they reach
No farther than thy breath—a yard or so.
And as for me, I heed them, need them not.
My nature God knows and hath fixed; and He
Recks little of the manners of the world;
Wicked He holdeth it and unrepentant.
Festus. Therefore the more some ought to pray.

Lucifer. To blow

A kiss, a bubble and a prayer hath like
Effect and satisfaction.

Festus. Let me hence!

Go tell thy blasphemies and lies elsewhere.

Thou scatter prayer! Make me Thy minister

One moment, God! that I may rid the world

Forever of its evil. Oh! Thine arm!

Lucifer. Canst rid thyself?

Festus. Alas! no. Get thee gone!

Can nought insult thee nor provoke thy flight?

Lucifer. I laugh alike at ruin and redemption.

I am the one which knows nor hope nor fear;

Which ne'er knew good nor e'er can know the worst.

What thinkest thou can anger me, or harm?

Festus. Wherefore didst thou quit Hell? To drag me there?

Lucifer. Thou wilt not guess mine errand.

Deem'st thou aught

Which God hath made all evil? Me He made.

Oft I do good; and thee to serve I come.

Festus. Did I not hear the boast with thy last breath

Not to have known what good was?

Lucifer. From myself

I know it not; yet God's will I must work.

I come, I say, to serve thee.

Festus. Well, I would
Thou never hadst; but speak thy purpose straight.

Lucifer. I heard thy prayer at sunset. I was here. I saw thy secret longings, unsaid thoughts, Which pray upon the breast like night-fires on A heath. I know thy heart by heart. I read The tongue when still as well as when it moves. And thou didst pray to God. Did He attend? Or turn His eye from the great glass of things, Wherein He worshippeth eternally Himself, to thee one moment? He did not. I tell thee, nought He cares for men. I came And come to proffer thee the earth; to set Thee on a throne—the throne of will unbound— To crown thy life with liberty and joy, And make thee free and mighty even as I am.

Festus. I would not be as thou art for Hell's throne;
Add Earth's—add Heaven's.

Lucifer. I knew thy proud, high heart. To test its worth and mark I held it brave, In shape and being thus myself I came; Not in disguise of opportunity— Not as some silly toy which serves for most— Not in the mask of lucre, lust, nor power— Not in a goblin size nor cherub form— But as the soul of Hell and evil came I With leave to give the kingdom of the world— The freedom of thyself.

Festus. Good: prove thy powers.
FESTUS.

Lucifer. Do I not prove them? Who but I, that have Immortal might o'er mine own mind, and o'er
All hearts and spirits of the living world,
Would share it with another, or forego,
One hour, the great enjoyment of the whole?
And who but I give men what each loves best?

Festus. Open the Heavens and let me look on God.
Open my heart and let me see myself.
Then I'll believe thee.

Lucifer. Thou shalt not believe
For that I give thee, but for that I am.
Believe me first; then I will prove myself.
Though sick I know thee of the joy of sense,
Yet those thou lovest most I will make pure,
And render worthy of thy love; unfilm them,
That so thou mayst not dally with the blind.
Thou shalt possess them to their very souls.
Pleasure and love and unimagined beauty;
All, all that be delicious, brilliant, great,
Of worldly things are mine, and mine to give.

Festus. What can be counted pleasure after love?
Like the young lion which has once lapped blood,
The heart can ne'er be coaxed back to aught else.

Lucifer. I will sublime it for thee all to bliss:
As yet it hath but made thee wretched.

Festus. Spirit,
It is not bliss I seek; I care not for it.
I am above the low delights of life.
The life I live is in a dark, cold cavern,
Where I wander up and down, feeling for something
Which is to be—and must be—what I know not;
But the incarnation of my destiny
Is nigh.

Lucifer. It is thy fate which weighs upon thee.
Necessity sits on humanity,
Like to the world on Atlas' neck. 'Tis this,
And the sultry sense of overdrawn life.

Festus. True;
The worm of the world hath eaten out my heart.

Lucifer. I will renew it in thee. It shall be
The bosom favorite of every beauty,
Even like a rosebud. Thou shalt render happy,
By naming who may love thee. Come with me.

Festus. I have a love on earth, and one in Heaven.

Lucifer. Thou shalt love ten as others love but one!

Festus. Oh! I was glad when something in me said,
Come, let us worship beauty! and I bowed;
And went about to find a shrine; but found
None that my soul, when seeing, said enough to.
Many I met with where I put up prayers,
And had them more than answered; some where love
Filled the whole place as 'twere oppressed with Heaven,
And I worshipped, partly because others did;
Partly because I could not help myself.
But none of these were for me; and away
I went champing and choking in proud pain,
In a burning wrath that not a sea could slake.
So I betook me to the sounding sea;
And overheard its slumberous mutterings
Of a revenge on man; whereat almost
I gladdened, for I felt savage as the sea.
I had only one thing to behold—the sea;
I had only one thing to believe—I loved;
Until that lonesome sameness grew sublime
And darkly beautiful as death, when some
Bright soul regains its star-home, or as Heaven
Just when the stars falter forth, one by one,
Like the first words of love from a maiden's lips.
There are points from which we can command our life:
When the soul sweeps the future like a glass;
And coming things, full freighted with our fate,
Jut out, dark, on the offing of the mind.
Let them come! Many will go down in sight;
In the billow's joyous dash of death go down.
At last came love; not whence I sought nor thought it;
As on a ruined and bewildered wight
Rises the roof he meant to have lost forever.
On came the living vessel of all love;
Terrible in its beauty as a serpent,
Rode down upon me like a ship full sail
And bearing me before it, kept me up
Spite of the drowning speed at which we drove
On, on, until we sank both. Was not this love?
Lucifer. Why, how can I tell? I am not in love; But I have ofttimes heard mine angels call Most piteously on their lost loves in Heaven; And, as I suffer, I have seen them come; Seen starlike faces peep between the clouds, And Hell become a tolerable torment. Some souls lose all things but the love of beauty; And by that love they are redeemable; For in love and beauty they acknowledge good; And good is God—the great Necessity.

Festus. I loved her for that she was beautiful; And that to me she seemed to be all nature And all varieties of things in one: Would set at night in clouds of tears, and rise All light and laughter in the morning: fear No petty customs nor appearances, But think what others only dreamed about, And say what others did but think, and do What others would but say, and glory in What others dared but do; so pure withal In soul, in heart and act such conscious, yet Such careless innocence, she made round her A halo of delight; 'twas these which won me;— And that she never schooled within her breast One thought or feeling, but gave holiday To all; and that she made all even mine In the communion of love: and we Grew like each other, for we loved each other— She, mild and generous as the sun in spring;
And I, like earth all budding out with love.

Lucifer. And then, love's old end, falsehood: nothing worse

I hope?

Festus. What's worse than falsehood? to deny
The god which is within us, and in all
Is love? Love hath as many vanities
As charms; and this, perchance, the chief of both:
To make our young heart's track upon the first,
And snowlike fall of feeling which overspreads
The bosom of the youthful maiden's mind,
More pure and fair than even its outward type.
If one did thus, was it from vanity?
Or thoughtlessness, or worse? Nay, let it pass.
The beautiful are never desolate;
But some one alway loves them—God or man.
If man abandons, God himself takes them.
And thus it was. She whom I once loved died.
The lightning loathes its cloud—the soul its clay.
Can I forget that hand I took in mine,
Pale as pale violets; that eye, where mind
And matter met alike divine? ah, no!
May God that moment judge me when I do:
Oh! she was fair: her nature once all spring,
And deadly beauty like a maiden sword;
Startlingly beautiful. I see her now!
Whatever thou art, thy soul is in my mind:
Thy shadow hourly lengthens o'er my brain,
And peoples all its pictures with thyself.
Gone, not forgot — passed, not lost — thou shalt shine
In Heaven like a bright spot in the sun!
She said she wished to die, and so she died;
For, cloudlike, she poured out her love, which was
Her life, to freshen this parched heart. It was thus:
I said we were to part, but she said nothing.
There was no discord — it was music ceased —
Life's thrilling, bounding, bursting joy. She sate
Like a house-god, her hands fixed on her knee;
And her dark hair lay loose and long around her,
Through which her wild bright eye flashed like a flint.
She spake not, moved not, but she looked the more.
As if her eye were action, speech and feeling.
I felt it all; and came and knelt beside her.
The electric touch solved both our souls together.
Then comes the feeling which unmakes, undoes;
Which tears the sealike soul up by the roots
And lashes it in scorn against the skies.
Twice did I madly swear to God, hand clenched,
That not even He nor death should tear her from me.
It is the saddest and the sorest sight
One's own love weeping; — but why call on God,
But that the feeling of the boundless bounds
All feeling, as the welkin doth the world?
It is this which ones us with the whole and God.
Then first we wept; then closed and clung together;
And my heart shook this building of my breast,
Like a live engine booming up and down.
She fell upon me like a snow-wreath thawing.
Never were bliss and beauty, love and woe,
Ravelled and twined together into madness,
As in that one wild hour; to which all else,
The past, is but a picture—that alone
Is real, and forever there in front;
Making a black blank on one side of life
Like a blind eye. But after that I left her:
And only saw her once again alive.
And now I am alone. Say on! What more
Can tempt save union of love with death?
But yestereve it was she died, and now
Scarce hath the spirit yet aspired to Heaven.
I feel it hovering round me. Let mine eyes
But realize their faith, and I am thine.
The soul first, then the body and the grave
Are welcome or indifferent as may be.

Lucifer. With those whom Death hath drawn I meddle not.
My part is with the living solely here.
I have not told the half I will do for thee.
All secrets thou shalt ken—all mysteries construe;
At nothing marvel. All the veins which stretch,
Unsearchable by human eyes, of lore
Most precious, most profound, to thine shall bare
And vulgar lie like dust. The world within,
The world above thee, and the dark domain,
Mine own thou shalt o'errule; and he alone
Who rightly can esteem such high delights,
He only merits—he alone shall have.
Festus. And if I have, shall I be happier? What is pleasure? What, happiness?

Lucifer. It is that I vouchsafe to thee.

Festus. Am I tempted thus unto my fall?

Lucifer. God wills or lets it be.

How thinkest thou?

Festus. That I will go with thee.

Lucifer. From God I come.

Festus. I do believe thee, spirit. He will not let thee harm me. Him I love, And thee I fear not. I obey Him.

Lucifer. Good. Both time and case are urgent. Come away.

Festus. Give me a breathing-time to fortify, Within myself, the promise I have made.

Lucifer. Expect me, then, at midnight, here. Remember, That thou canst any time repent.

Festus. Ay, true. [Goes.

Lucifer. Repentance never yet did aught on earth; It undoes many good things. Of all men, Heaven shield me from the wretch who can repent!

E*
Scene — Water and Wood — Midnight.

Festus, alone.

All things are calm, and fair, and passive. Earth
Looks as if lulled upon an angel's lap
Into a breathless, dewy sleep: so still
That we can only say of things, they be!
The lakelet now, no longer vexed with gusts,
Replaces on her breast the pictured moon
Pearled round with stars. Sweet imaged scene of time
To come, perchance, when, this vain life o'erspent,
Earth may some purer beings' presence bear;
Mayhap even God may walk among His saints,
In eminence and brightness like yon moon,
Mildly outbeaming all the beads of light
Strung o'er night's proud, dark brow. How strangely fair
Yon round, still star, which looks half suffering from,
And half rejoicing in, its own strong fire;
Making itself a loneliness of light,
Like Deity, where'er in Heaven it dwells.
How can the beauty of material things
So win the heart and work upon the mind,
Unless like-natured with them? Are great things
And thoughts of the same blood? They have like effect.

Lucifer. Why doubt on mind? What matter how we call
That which all feel to be their noblest part?
Even spirits have a better and a worse:
For every thing created must have form.
Passions they have, somewhat like thine; but less
Of grossness and that downwardness of soul
Which men have. It is true, they have no earth;
For what they live on is above themselves.

Festus. There seems a sameness among things; for mind
And matter speak, in causes, of one God.
The inward and the outward worlds are like;
The pure and gross but differ in degree.
Tears, feeling's bright embodied form, are not
More pure than dew-drops, Nature's tears, which she Sheds in her own breast for the fair which die.
The sun insists on gladness; but at night,
When he is gone, poor Nature loves to weep.

Lucifer. There is less real difference among things
Than men imagine. They overlook the mass,
But fasten each on some particular crum,
Because they feel that they can equal that,
Of doctrine, or belief, or party cause.

Festus. That is the madness of the world—and that Would I remove.

Lucifer. It is imbecility,
Not madness.

Festus. Oh! the brave and good who serve
A worthy cause can only one way fail;
By perishing therein. Is it to fail?
No; every great or good man's death is a step
Firm set toward their end— the end of being,
Which is the good of all and love of God.
The world must have great minds, even as great spheres
Or suns, to govern lesser restless minds,
While they stand still and burn with life; to keep Them in their places, and to light and heat them.
If I desire immortal life for aught,
It is to learn the mystery of mind
And somewhat more of God. Let others rule
Systems or succor saints, if such things please;
To live like light or die in light like dew,
Either! I should be blest.

Festus. Men have a claim on God; and none who hath
A heart of kindness, reverence, and love,
But dare look God in the face and ask His smile.
He dwells in no fierce light—no cloud of flame;
And if it were, Faith's eye can look through hell;
And through the solid world. We must all think
On God. Yon water must reflect the sky.
Midnight! Day hath too much of light for us,
To see things spiritually. Mind and Night
Will meet, though in silence, like forbidden lovers,
With whom to see each other's sacred form
Must satisfy. The stillness of deep bliss,
Sound as the silence of the high hill-top
Where thunder finds no echo — like God's voice
Upon the worldling's proud, cold, rocky heart —
Fills full the sky; and the eye shares with Heaven
That look, so like to feeling, which the bright
And glorious things of Nature ever wear.
There is much to think and feel of things beyond
This earth; which lie, as we deem, upwards — far
From the day's glare and riot — they are Night's!
Oh! could we lift the future's sable shroud!

Lucifer. Behind a shroud what shouldst thou see but death?

Festus. Spirit is like the thread whereon are strung
The beads or worlds of life. It may be here,
It may be there that I shall live again;
In yon strange world whose long nights know no star,
But seven fair maidlike moons attending him
Perfect his sky — perchance in one of those —
But live again I shall, wherever it be.
We long to learn the future — love to guess.

Lucifer. The science of the future is to man,
But what the shadow of the wind might be.
Such thoughts are vain and useless.

Festus. Forced on us.
Lucifer. All things are of necessity.

Festus. Then best.

But the good are never fatalists. The bad
Alone act by necessity, they say.

Lucifer. It matters not what men assume to be;
Or good, or bad, they are but what they are.

Festus. What is necessity? Are we, and thou,
And all the worlds, and the whole infinite
We cannot see, but working out God's thoughts?
And have we no self-action? Are all God?

Lucifer. Then hath He sin and all absurdity.

Festus. Yet, if created Being have free will,
Is it not wrong to judge it may traverse
God's own high will, and yet impossible
To think on't otherwise?

Lucifer. It may be so.

All creature wills, and all their ends and powers
Must come within the boundless scope of God's.

Festus. And all our powers are but weaknesses
To what we shall have, and to that God hath.
Doth not the wish, too, point the likelihood
Of life to come?

Lucifer. Boys wish that they were kings.
And so with thee. A deathless spirit's state,
Freed from gross form and bodily weightiness,
Seems kingly by the side of souls like thine.
And boys and men will likely both be balked.
What if it be, that spirit, after death,
Is loosed like flesh into its elements?
The worlds which man hath constellated hold
No fellowship in nature; nor perchance
As he hath systematized life, mind and soul.
But sooth to say, I know not aught of this.
I have no kind. No nature like to me
Exists; and human spirits must at least
Sleep till the day of doom—if it ever be.

Festus. Hast never known one free from body?

Lucifer. None.

Festus. Why seek then to destroy them?

Lucifer. It is my part.

Let ruin bury ruin. Let it be
Woe here, woe there, woe, woe, be every where!
It is not for me to know, nor thee, the end
Of evil. I inflict, and thou must bear.
The arrow knoweth not its end and aim.
And I keep rushing, ruining along
Like a great river rich with dead men's souls.
For if I knew, I might rejoice; and that
To me by Nature is forbidden. I know
Nor joy nor sorrow; but a changeless tone
Of sadness like the night wind's is the strain
Of what I have of feeling. I am not
As other spirits,—but a solitude
Even to myself; I the sole spirit sole.

Festus. Can none of thine immortals answer me?

Lucifer. None, mortal!

Festus. Where, then, is thy vaunted power?

Lucifer. It is better seen as thus I stand apart
From all. Mortality is mine—the green,
Unripened universe. But as the fruit
Matures, and world by world drops mellowed off
The wrinkling stalk of Time, as thine own race
Hath seen of stars now vanished—all is hid
From me. My part is done. What after comes
I know not more than thou.

Festus. Raise me a spirit!
Awake, ye dead! out with the secret, death!
The grave hath no pride nor the rise-again.
Let each one bring the bane whereof he died.
Bring the man his, the maiden hers! Oh! half
Mankind are murderers of themselves or souls.
Yea, what is life but lingering suicide?
Wake, dead! Ye know the truth; yet there ye lie
All mingling, mouldering, perishing together
Like run sand in the hour-glass of old Time.
Death is the mad world's asylum. There is peace;
Destruction's quiet and equality.

Night brings out stars as sorrow shows us truths:
Though many, yet they help not; bright, they light not.
They are too late to serve us: and sad things
Are aye too true. We never see the stars
Till we can see nought but them. So with truth.
And yet if one would look down a deep well,
Even at noon, we might see those same stars
Far fairer than the blinding blue—the truth.
Probe the profound of thine own nature, man;
And thou mays't see reflected, e'en in life,
The worlds, the Heavens, the ages; by and by,
The coming come. Then welcome, world-eyed Truth!
But there are other eyes men better love
Than Truth's: for when we have her she is so cold,
And proud, we know not what to do with her.
We cannot understand her, cannot teach;
She makes us love her, but she loves not us;
And quits us as she came and looks back never.
Wherefore we fly to Fiction's warm embrace,
With her to relax and bask ourselves at ease;
And, in her loving and unhindering lap
Voluptuously lulled, we dream at most
On death and truth: she knows them, loves them not;
Therefore we hate them and deny them both.
Call up the dead!

Lucifer. Let rest while rest they may!
For free from pain and from this world's wear and tear
It may be a relief to them to rot;
And it must be that at the day of doom,
If mortals should take up immortal life,
They will curse me with a thunder which shall shake
The sun from out the socket of his sphere.
The curse of all created. Think on it!

Festus. Those souls thou mean'st whom thou hast ruined, damned.

Lucifer. Nor only those; when once the virgin bloom
Of soul is soiled—and rudely hath my hand
Swept o'er the swelling clusters of all life—
Little it matters whether crushed or touched
Scarcely: each speaks the spoiler hath been there.
The saved, the lost, shall curse me both alike:
God too shall curse me, and I, I, myself.
That curse is ever greatening—quick with hell;
The coming consummation of all woe.

Festus. O man, be happy! Die and cease forever!

Why wear we not the shroud alway, that robe
Which speaks our rank on earth, our privilege?
To know I have a deathless soul, I would lose it.

Lucifer. Believest thou all I tell thee?

Festus. All, I do.

Stringing the stars at random round her head,
Like a pearl network, there she sits—bright night!
I love night more than day—she is so lovely.
But I love night the most because she brings
My love to me in dreams which scarcely lie;
Oh! all but truth and lovelier oft than truth!
Let me have dreams like these, sweet Night, forever,
When I shall wake no more; an endless dream
Of love and holy beauty 'mid the stars;
And earth and Heaven for me may share between them

The rough realities of other bliss.

Lucifer. I see thy heart, and I will grant thy wish.
I have lied to thee. I have command over spirits.
I have beheld them bodiless as space.
Whom wilt thou that I call?

Festus. Mine Angela!

Lucifer. There is an Angel ever by thine hand
What seest thou?

Festus. It is my love! It is she!

My glory! spirit! beauty, let me touch thee.
Nay, do not shrink back: well, then, I am wrong:
Thou didst not use to shrink from me, my love.
Angela! dost thou hear me? Speak to me.
And thou art there—looking alive and dead.
Thy beauty is then incorruptible.
I thought so, oft as I have looked on thee.
Thou art too much even now for me as once.
I cannot gather what I raved to say;
Nor why I had thee hither. Stay, sweet sprite!
Dear art thou to me now, as in that hour
When first Love's wave of feeling, spray-like, broke
Into bright utterance, and we said we loved.
Yea, but I must come to thee. Move no more!
Art thou in death or Heaven, or from the stars;
Have I done wrong in calling for thee thus?
What art thou? Speak, love; whisper me as wont
In the dear times gone by; or durst thou not
Unfold the mystery of thine and mine
Own being? Was it Death who hushed thy lips?
Is his cold finger there still? Let me come!
She is not!

Lucifer. And thou canst not bring her back.

Festus. I will not, cannot be without her. Call her.
Lucifer: I call on spirits, and I make them come. But they depart according to their own will. Another time and she shall speak with thee—Ere long—and she shall show thee where she dwells, And how doth pass her immortality;—If lengthening decay can so be called. Can lines finite one way be infinite Another? And yet such is deathlessness. Festus: It is hard to deem that spirits cease, that thought And feeling, flesh-like, perish in the dust. Shall we know those again in a future state Whom we have known and loved on earth? Say yes! Lucifer. The mind hath features as the body hath. Festus. But is it mind which shall rerise? Lucifer. Man were Not man without the mind he had in life. Festus. Shall all defects of mind and fallacies Of feeling be immortalized? all needs, All joys, all sorrows, be again gone through, Before the final crisis be imposed? Shall Heaven but be old earth created new? Or earth, treelike, transplanted into Heaven, To flourish by the waters of all life, And we within its shade, as heretofore, Cropping its fruit, with life-seeds cored at heart? Lucifer. Man's nature, physical and psychical, Will be together raised, changed, glorified; And all shall be alike, like God; and all
Unlike each other and themselves. The earth
Shall vanish from the thoughts of those she bore,
As have the idols of the olden time
From men's hearts of the present. All delight
And all desire shall be with heavenly things,
And the new nature God bestowed on man.

Festus. Then man shall be no more man, but an angel.

Lucifer. When he is dead and buried, what remains,—
That such an obscure, contradictory thing
Should be perpetuated anywhere?

Festus. Oh! if God hates the flesh, why made
He it
So beautiful that e'en its semblance maddens?
Am I to credit what I think I have seen?
Or am I suffering some deceit of thine?

Lucifer. I am explaining, not deluding.

Festus. True.

Defining night by darkness, death by dust.
I run the gantlet of a file of doubts,
Each one of which down hurls me to the ground.
I ask a hundred reasons what they mean,
And every one points gravely to the ground
With one hand, and to Heaven with the other.
In vain I shut mine eyes. Truth's burning beam
Forces them open, and when open, blinds them.

Lucifer. Doubly unhappy!

Festus. I am too unhappy
To die; as some too way-worn cannot sleep.
Planets and suns, that set themselves on fire
By their own rapid self-revolvements, are
But like some hearts. Existence I despise.
The shape of man is wearisome; a bird's—a
A worm's—a whirlwind's—I would change with aught.

Time! dash thine hour-glass down. Have done with this!
The course of Nature seems a course of Death,
And nothingness the sole substantial thing.

Lucifer. Corruption springs from light: 'tis the same power
Creates, preserves, destroys: the matter which
It works on, being one ever-changing form,—
The living, and the dying, and the dead.

Festus. I'll not believe a thing which I have known.
Hell was made hell for me, and I am mad.

Lucifer. True venom churns the froth out of the lips;
It works, and works like any water-wheel.
And she, then, was the maiden of thy heart.
Well, I have promised. Ye shall meet again.
Now, shall we go?

Festus. This moment. I am ready.
Farewell ye dear old walks and trees! farewell
Ye waters! I have loved ye well. In youth
And childhood it hath been my life to drift
Across ye lightly as a leaf; or skim
Your waves in yon skiff, swallowlike; or lie.
Like a loved locket on your sunny bosom.
Could I, like you, by looking in myself
Find mine own Heaven—farewell! Immortal come!
The morning peeps her blue eye on the east.

Lucifer. Think not so fondly as thy foolish race,
Imagining a Heaven from things without;
The picture on the passing wave call Heaven—
The wavelet, life—the sands beneath it, death;
Daily more seen, till, lo! the bed is bare.
This fancy fools the world.

Festus. Let us away!

Scene—A Mountain—Sunrise.

Festus and Lucifer.

Festus. Hail, beauteous Earth! Gazing o'er thee,
I all
Forget the bounds of being; and I long
To fill thee, as a lover pines to blend
Soul, passion, yea, existence, with the fair
Creature he calls his own. I ask for nought
Before or after death but this,—to lie,
And look, and live, and bask, and bless myself
Upon thy broad, bright bosom. From thee I
Sprang, and to thee I turn, heart, arm, and brain.
Yes, I am all thine own. Thou art the sole Parent. To rock and river, plain and wood, I cry, ye are my kin. While I, O Earth! Am but an atom of thee, and a breath, Passing unseen and unrecorded, like The tiny throb here in my temple's pulse, Thou art forever and the sacred bride Of Heaven,—worthy the passion of our God, Oh! full of light, love, grace!—the grace of all Who owe to thee their life; thy Maker's love; His face's light. All thine rejoice in thee; Thou in thyself for aye; rolling through air As seraphs' song out of their trumpet lips Rolls round the skies of Heaven. See the sun! God's crest upon His azure shield the Heavens. Canst thou, a spirit, look upon him?

Lucifer.

Ay.

I led him from the void, where he was wrought, By this right hand, up to the glorious seat His brightness overshadows; built his throne On piles of gold, and laid his chambers on Beams of gold; wrapped a veil of fire around His face, and bade him reign and burn like me. There, ever since, sat warming into life These worlds as in a nest, he has and is. But fall he must. I have done, do, nought else From my first thought to this, and to my last. No matter; it is beneath this mind of mine To reck of aught. I bear, have borne, the ill
Of ages, of eternities—and must.
I care not. I shall sway the world as now,
Which worse and worse sinks with me as I sink.
Till finite souls evanish as a vapor;
Till immortality, the proud thing, perish;
And God alone be and eternity.
Then will I clap my hands and cry to Him,
I have done! Have Thy will now! There is none but Thee.
I am the first created being. I
Will be the last to perish and to die.

Festus. Thou art a fit monitor, methinks, of pleasure.
Lucifer. To the high air sunshine and cloud are one;
Pleasure and pain to me. Thou and the earth
Alone feel these as different—for ye
Are under them—the Heavens and I above.

Festus. But tell me, have ye scenes like this in hell?
Lucifer. Nay, nor in Heaven.

Festus. What is Heaven? not the toys
Of singing, love, and music? Such a place
Were fit for women only.

Lucifer. Heaven is no place;
Unless it be a place with God, allwhere.
It is the being good—the knowing God—
The consciousness of happiness and power;
With knowledge which no spirit e'er can lose
But doth increase in every state; and aught
It most delights in the full leave to do.
But why consume me with such questions? Why
Add earth to hell, in the great chain of worlds
Which God in wrath hath bound about me?

Festus.

Why!
'Twas therefore that I closed with thee, great Fiend!
That thou might'st answer all things I proposed,
Or bring me those who would do.

Lucifer.

All these things
Thou wilt know sometime, when to see and know
Are one; to see a thing and comprehend
The nature of it essentially; perceive
The reason and the science of its being,
And the relations with the universe
Of all things actual or possible,
Mortal, immortal, spiritual, gross.
This, when the spirit is made free of Heaven,
Is the divine result; proportioned still
To the intelligence as human; for
There are degrees in Heaven as every thing,
By God's will. Unimaginable space
As full of suns as is earth's sun of atoms,
Faileth to match His boundless variousness;
And ever must do, though a thousand worlds,
As diverse from each other as is thine
From any of thy systems, were elanced
Each minute into life unendingly.
All of yon worlds, and all who dwell in them,
Stand in diverse degrees of bliss and being.
Through the ten thousand times ten thousandth grade
Of blessedness, above this world's and man's
Ability to feel or to conceive,
The soul may pass and yet know nought of Heaven,
More than a dim and miniature reflection
Of its most bright infinity; — for God
Makes to each spirit its peculiar Heaven; —
And yet is Heaven a bright reality,
As this or any of you worlds; a state
Where all is loveliness, and power, and love;
Where all sublimest qualities of mind
Not infinite are limited alone
By the surrounding Godhood, and where nought
But what produceth glory and delight
To creature and Creator is; where all
Enjoy entire dominion o'er themselves,
Acts, feelings, thoughts, conditions, qualities,
Spirit, and soul, and mind; all under God,
For spirit is soul deified; — while earth,
To the immortal vast, God-natured Spirit,
Is but a spell, which, having served to light
A lamp, is cast into consuming fire.

Festus. And Hell? Is it nought but pits, and chains, and flames?

Lucifer. An ever greatening sense of ill and woe,
Aye crushing down the soul, but filling never
Its infinite capacity of pain.

Festus. But human nature is not infinite,
And therefore cannot suffer endlessly.

Lucifer. God may create in time what shall endure
Unto eternity. With Him is no
Distinction, nor in that which is of Him.

Festus. Then is not soul of God, but man and earth.
Soul when made spirit is of earth no more,
Nor time, but of eternity and Heaven.
It is but when in the body, and bent down
To worldly ends, that human souls become
Objects of time, as most are, till the hour
Comes when the soul of man shall be made one
With God's spirit; and where shall woe be then?
Where, sin? where, suffering? when the mortal soul
Shall be divinized and eternized by
God's very spirit put upon it?

Lucifer. How
Can souls begotten to predestined doom,
From and before all worlds, be deemed of earth?

Festus. Things spiritual, as belonging God,
Are known unto Him, and predestined from
Eternity, nor these alone; but flesh
Forms not, nor does it need the care of Fate.

Lucifer. The object of eternal knowledge must Have like existence.

Festus. Then it cannot be Bound unto torment; that would be to bring
Torture on godlike essence.
Lucifer. Hast not heard, How thine existence here, on earth, is but The dark and narrow section of a life Which was with God, long ere the sun was lit, And shall be yet, when all the bold bright stars Are dark as death-dust—Immortality And Wisdom tending thee on either hand, Thy divine sisters? But do thou believe E'en what thou wilt. It matters not to me. Festus. Is it the nature or the deed of God To render finite follies infinite, Or to eternize sin and death in fire? For so long as the punishment endures, The crime lasts. Were it not for thy presence, Spirit! I would not deem hell were. Lucifer. Let not My presence pass for more than it is worth, I pray, nor yet my absence. Trust me, I Could wish, with thee, that hell were blotted out Of utmost space. 'Tis man himself aye makes His own God and his hell. But this is truth. Festus. The truth is perilous never to the true. Nor knowledge to the wise; and to the fool, And to the false, error and truth alike. Error is worse than ignorance. But say,— How can eternal punishment be due To temporal offences, to a pulse Of momentary madness? Lucifer. Pardon me.
Sin is not temporary. Nothing is,
Of spiritual nature, but hath cause
Immortal and immortal end in all;
As spirits. Therefore, till the soul shall be
By grace redeemed, as is the soul,
So is the sin, forever before God.

Festus. Sin is not of the spirit, but of that
Which blindeth spirit, heart, and brain.

Lucifer. Believe so.
The law of all the worlds is retribution.

Festus. But is it so of God?

Lucifer. The laws of Heaven
Are not of earth; there, law is liberty.

Festus. Thou thunder-cloud of spirits, darkening
The skies and wrecking earth! Could I hate men,
How I should joy with thee, even as an eagle,
Nigh famished, in the fellowship of storms;
But I still love them. What will come of men?

Lucifer. Whatever may, perdition is their meed.
Were Heaven dispeopled for a ministry
To warn them of their ways; were thou and I
To monish them; were Heaven, and Earth, and Hell
To preach at once, they still would mock and jeer
As now; but never repent until too late;
Until the everlasting hour had struck.

Festus. Men might be better if we better deemed
Of them. The worst way to improve the world
Is to condemn it. Men may overget
Delusion—not despair.
FESTUS.

Lucifer. Why love mankind?
The affections are thy system's weaknesses;
The wasteful outlets of self-maintenance.

Festus. The wild flower's tendril, proof of feebleness,
Proves strength; and so we fling our feelings out,
The tendrils of the heart, to bear us up.

O Earth! how drear to think to tear one self,
Even for an hour, from looks like this of thine;
From features, Oh! so fair; to quit for aye
The luxury of thy side. Why, why art thou
Thus glorious, and 'twere not to sate the soul,
And chide us for the senseless dream of Heaven?
The still, strong stream sweeps onward to its end,
Like one of the great purposes of God;
Or like, may be, a soul like mine to Him.
Along yon deep blue vein upon thy bosom,
Earth! I could float forever. See it there—
Winding among its green and smiling isles,
Like Charity amidst her children dear;
Or Peace, rejoicing in her olive wreaths,
And gladdening as she glides along the lands.

Lucifer. And yet all this must end—must pass;
    drop down
Oblivion like a pebble in a pit:
For God shall lay His hand upon the earth,
And crush it up like a red leaf.

Festus. Not be?
I cannot root the thought, nor hold it firm.
Festus. This same sweet world which thou wouldst fondly deem Eternal, may be; which I soon shall see
Destruction suck back as the tide a shell.

Festus. It will not be yet. I'll woo thee, world, again,
And revel in thy loveliness and love.
I have a heart with room for every joy:
And since we must part sometime, while I may,
I'll quaff the nectar in thy flowers, and press
The richest clusters of thy luscious fruit
Into the cup of my desires. I know
My years are numbered not in units yet.
But I cannot live unless I love and am loved;
Unless I have the young and beautiful
Bound up like pictures in my book of life.
It is the intensest vanity alone
Which makes us bear with life. Some seem to live,
Whose hearts are like those unenlightened stars
Of the first darkness—lifeless, timeless, useless—
With nothing but a cold night air about them;
Not suns—not planets—darkness organized:
Orbs of a desert darkness: with no soul
To light its watchfire in the wilderness,
And civilize the solitude one moment.
There are such seemingly; but how or why
They live I know not. This to me is life:
That if life be a burden, I will join
To make it but the burden of a song:
I hate the world's coarse thought. And this is life;
To watch young beauty's budlike feelings burst
And load the soul with love;—as that pale flower
Which opes at eve, spreads sudden on the dark
Its yellow bloom, and sinks the air down with sweets.
Let Heaven take all that's good—Hell all that's foul;
Leave us the lovely! and we will ask no more.

Lucifer. To me it seems time all should end.

The sky
Grows gray. It is not so bright nor blue as once.
Well I remember, as it were yesterday,
When Earth and Heaven went happy, hand in hand,
With all the morning dew of youth about them;
With the bright unworldly hearts of youth and truth
And the maiden bosoms of the beautiful:
Ere earth sinned, or the pure indignant Heavens
Retreated high, nigh God; when earth was all
A creeping mass, alive with shapeless things:
And when there were but three things in the world—
Monsters, mountains, and water: before age
Had thickened the eyes of stars; and while the sea,
Rejoicing like a ring of saints round God,
Or Heaven on Heaven about some newborn sun,
In its sublime same-soundingness, laughed out
And cried not I! Like God, I never rest.

Festus. God hath his rest; Earth hers. Let me have mine.
Yet must I look on thee, fair scene, again,
Ere I depart. The glory of the world
Is on all hands. In one encircling ken,
I gaze on river, sea, isle, continent,
Mountain, and wood, and wild, and fire-lipped hill,
And lake, and golden plain, and sun, and Heaven,
Where the stars brightly die, whose death is day.
City, and port, and palace, ships and tents,
Lie massed and mapped before me. All is here.
The elements of the world are at my feet,
Above me and about me. Now would I
Be and do somewhat beside that I am.
Canst thou not give me some ethereal slave,
Of the pure essence of an element—
Such as my bondless brain hath oftentimes drawn
In the divine insanity of dreams—
To stand before me and obey me, spirit?

Lucifer. Call out, and see if aught arise to thee.

Festus. Green, dewy Earth, who standest at my feet,
Singing and pouring sunshine on thy head,
As naiad native water, speak to me!
I am thy son. Canst thou not now, as once,
Bring forth some being dearer, liker to thee
Than is my race,—Titan or tiny fay,
Stream-nymph, or wood-nymph? She hath ceased to speak,
Like God, except in thunder, or to look
Unless in lightning. Miracles, with earth,
Are out of fashion, as with Heaven.

Lucifer. More's
The pity. Call elsewhere. Old Earth is hard
Of hearing, may be.
Festus. I beseech thee, Sea!
Tossing thy wavy locks in sparkling play,
Like to a child awakening with the light
To laughter. Canst not thou disgulf for me,
From thy deep bosom, deep as Heaven is high,
Of all thy sea-gods one, or sea-maids?
Lucifer. None!
Festus. I half despair. Fire! that art slumbering there,
Like some stern warrior in his rocky fort,
After the vast invasion of the world,
Hast not some flaming imp, or messenger
Of empyrean element, to whom,
In virtue of his nature, are both known
The secrets of the burning, central, void below,
And yon bright Heaven, out of whose aëry fire
Are wrought the forms of angels and the thrones?
Hast none at hand to do my bidding? Come!
Breathe out a spirit for me! One I ask
That shall be with me always, as a friend,
And not like thee, who despotizest o'er
The heart thou seek'st to serve. I must be free.
Lucifer. All finite souls must serve; their widest sway
Is but the rule of service. This fair earth
Which thou dost boast so much of, why, thou see'st
'Tis but the party-colored, scummy, dross
Of the original element wherefrom
The fiery worlds were framed.
Festus.

Air! and thou, Wind!
Which art the unseen similitude of God
The Spirit, His most meet and mightiest sign;
The earth, with all her steadfastness and strength,
Sustaining all, and bound about with chains
Of mountains, as is life with mercies, ranging round
With all her sister orbs the whole of Heaven,
Is not so like the unlikenable One
As thou. Ocean is less divine than thee;
For although all but limitless, it is yet
Visible, many a land not visiting.
But thou art, lovelike, every where; o'er earth,
O'er ocean triumphing, and aye with clouds,
That like the ghosts of ocean's billows roll,
Decking or darkening Heaven. The sun's light
Floweth and ebbeth daily like the tides;
The moon's doth grow or lessen, night by night;
The stirless stars shine forth by fits and hide,
And our companion planets come and go;—
And all are known, their laws and liberties.
But no man can foreset thy coming, none
Reason against thy going; thou art free,
The type impalpable of Spirit, thou.
Thunder is but a momentary thing,
Like a world's deathrattle, and is like death;
And lightning, like the blaze of sin, can blind
Only and slay. But what are these to thee,
In thine all-present variousness? Now,
So light as not to wake the snowiest down
Upon the dove's breast, winning her bright way
Calm and sublime as Grace unto the soul,
Towards her far native grove; now, stern and strong
As ordnance, overturning tree and tower;
Cooling the white brows of the peaks of fire,—
Turning the sea's broad furrows like a plough,—
Fanning the fruitening plains, breathing the sweets
Of meadows, wandering o'er blinding snows,
And sands like sea-beds, and the streets of cities,
Where men as garnered grain lie heaped together;
Freshening the cheeks, and mingling oft the locks
Of youth and beauty 'neath star-speaking eve;
Swelling the pride of canvas, or, in wrath,
Scattering the fleets of nations like dead leaves:
In all, the same o'er Mastering sightless force,
Bowing the highest things of earth to earth,
And lifting up the dust unto the stars;
Fate-like, confounding reason, and like God's Spirit, conferring life upon the world,—
Midst all corruption incorruptible;
Monarch of all the elements! hast thou
No soft Æolian sylph, with sightless wing,
To spare a mortal for an hour?

Lucifer. Peace, peace!
All nature knows that I am with thee here,
And that thou need'st no minor minister.
To thee I personate the world—its powers,
Beliefs, and doubts, and practices.

Festus. Are all
Mine invocations fruitless, then?
Lucifer. They are.
Let us enjoy the world!

Festus. If 'twas God's will
That thou shouldst visit me, He shall not send Temptation to my heart in vain. Sweet world!
We all still cling to thee. Though thou thyself
Passest away, yet men will hanker about thee,
Like mad ones by their moping haunts. Men pass,
Cleaving to things themselves which pass away,
Like leaves on waves. Thus all things pass forever,
Save mind and the mind's meed.

Lucifer. Let us, too, pass!

Lucifer and Festus.

Lucifer. These be the toils and cares of mighty men!
Earth's vermin are as fit to fill her thrones
As these high Heaven's bright seats.

Festus. Men's callings all
Are mean and vain; their wishes more so: oft
The man is bettered by his part or place.
How slight a chance may raise or sink a soul!

Lucifer. What men call accident is God's own part.
He lets ye work your will—it is His own:
But that ye mean not, know not, do not, He doth.
Festus. What is life worth without a heart to feel
The great and lovely, and the poetry
And sacredness of things? for all things are Sacred,—the eye of God is on them all,
And hallows all unto it. It is fine
To stand upon some lofty mountain thought
And feel the spirit stretch into a view;
To joy in what might be if will and power
For good would work together but one hour.
Yet millions never think a noble thought:
But with brute hate of brightness bay a mind
Which drives the darkness out of them, like hounds.
Throw but a false glare round them, and in shoals
They rush upon perdition: that's the race.
What charm is in this world-scene to such minds
Blinded by dust? What can they do in Heaven,
A state of spiritual means and ends?
Thus must I doubt—perpetually doubt.

Lucifer. Who never doubted never half believe.
Where doubt, there truth is—'tis her shadow. I
Declare unto thee that the past is not.
I have looked over all life, yet never seen
The age that had been. Why then fear or dream
About the future? Nothing but what is, is;
Else God were not the Maker that He seems,
As constant in creating as in being.
Embrace the present! Let the future pass.
Plague not thyself about a future. That
Only which comes direct from God, His spirit,
Is deathless. Nature gravitates without Effort; and so all mortal natures fall Deathwards. All aspiration is a toil; But inspiration cometh from above, And is no labor. The earth's inborn strength Could never lift her up to yon stars, whence She fell; nor human soul, by native worth, Claim Heaven as birthright, more than man may call Cloudland his home. The soul's inheritance, Its birthplace, and its deathplace, is of earth, Until God maketh earth and soul anew; The one like Heaven, the other like Himself. So shall the new Creation come at once; Sin, the dead branch upon the tree of Life, Shall be cut off forever; and all souls Concluded in God's boundless amnesty.

Festus. Thou windest and unwindest faith at will. What am I to believe?

Lucifer. Thou mayst believe But that which thou art forced to.

Festus. Then I feel That instinct of immortal life in me, Which prompts me to provide for it.

Lucifer. Perhaps.

Festus. Man hath a knowledge of a time to come— His most important knowledge: the weight lies Nearest the short end: and the world depends Upon what is to be. I would deny
The present, if the future. Oh! there is
A life to come, or all's a dream.

Lucifer.

And all
May be a dream. Thou seest in thine, men, deeds,
Clear, moving, full of speech and order; then
Why may not all this world be but a dream
Of God's? Fear not! Some morning God may waken.

Festus. I would it were. This life's a mystery.
The value of a thought cannot be told;
But it is clearly worth a thousand lives
Like many men's. And yet men love to live
As if mere life were worth their living for.
What but perdition will it be to most?
Life's more than breath and the quick round of blood:
It is a great spirit and a busy heart.
The coward and the small in soul scarce do live.
One generous feeling—one great thought—one deed
Of good, ere night, would make life longer seem
Than if each year might number a thousand days,—
Spent as is this by nations of mankind.
We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives
Who thinks most—feels the noblest—acts the best.
Life's but a means unto an end—that end,
Beginning, mean and end to all things—God.
The dead have all the glory of the world.
Why will we live and not be glorious?
We never can be deathless till we die.
It is the dead win battles. And the breath
Of those who through the world drive like a wedge,
Tearing earth's empires up, nears Death so close
It dims his well-worn scythe. But no! the brave
Die never. Being deathless, they but change
Their country's arms for more — their country's heart.
Give then the dead their due; it is they who saved us.
The rapid and the deep — the fall, the gulf,
Have likenesses in feeling and in life.
And life, so varied, hath more loveliness
In one day than a creeping century
Of sameness. But youth loves and lives on change
Till the soul sighs for sameness; which at last
Becomes variety, and takes its place.
Yet some will last to die out thought by thought,
And power by power, and limb of mind by limb,
Like lamps upon a gay device of glass,
Till all of soul that's left be dry and dark;
Till even the burden of some ninety years
Hath crashed into them like a rock; shattered
Their system as if ninety suns had rushed
To ruin earth — or Heaven had rained its stars;
Till they become, like scrolls, unreadable
Through dust and mould. Can they be cleaned and read?
Do human spirits wax and wane like moons?

Lucifer. The eye dims, and the heart gets old and slow;
The lithe limb stiffens, and the sun-hued locks
Thin themselves off, or whitely wither;—still
Ages not spirit, even in one point,
Immeasurably small; from orb to orb,
In ever-rising radiance, shining like
The sun upon the thousand lands of earth.
Look at the medley, motley throng we meet!
Some smiling—frowning some; their cares and joys
Alike not worth a thought—some sauntering slowly,
As if destruction never could o'ertake them;
Some hurrying on as fearing judgment swift
Should trip the heels of death and seize them living.

Festus. Grief hallows hearts even while it ages heads;
And much hot grief, in youth, forces up life
With power which too soon ripens and which drops.

[A funeral passes.

Whose funeral is this ye follow, friends?

Lucifer. Would ye have grief, let me come! I am woe.

Mourner. We want no grief: Festus! she died of grief.

Festus. Did ye say she died? Oh! I knew her then.
Set down the body; let me look upon her.
Now, Son of God! what dost Thou now in Heaven
While one so beautiful lies earthening here?
I will give up the future for the past;
The winged spirit and the starry home,
If Thou wilt let her live, and make me love.
Mourner. She was a lock of Heaven which Heaven gave earth,
And took again, because unworthy of her.

Festus. Her air was an immortal's; I have seen
Stars look on it with feeling; and her eye,
Wherever she went, it won her way like wine.
Men bowed to it as to the lifted Host.
How could I be so cruel? Who but I?
And now, corruption, come; sit; feast thyself!
This is the choicest banquet thou hast been at.
Thou art my happier, only rival: thou
Who takest love from the living—life from beauty—
Beauty from death—whole robber of the world!

Mourner. The moment after thou desertedst her
A cloud came over the prospect of her life;
And I foresaw how evening would set in,
Early, and dark, and deadly. She was true.

Festus. Did I not love thee, too? pure, perfect thing!
This is a soul I see, and not a body.
Go, beauty, rest for aye; go, starry eyes,
And lips like rosebuds peeping out of snow;
Go, breast love-filled as a boat's sail with wind,
Leaping from wave to wave, as leaps a child,
Thoughtless o'er grassy graves; go, locks, which have
The golden embrownment of a lion's eye.
Yet one more look; farewell, thou well and fair!
All who but loved thee shall be deathless. Nought
Named but with thee can perish. Thou and Death
Have made each other purer, lovelier seem,
Like snow and moonlight. Never more for thee
Let eyes be swollen like streams with latter rains!
To die were rapture, having lived with thee.
Thy soul hath passed out of a bodily Heaven
Into a spiritual. Rest for aye!—
Pure after love as e'er thou wast before;
Pure as the dead, in life; the dead are holy.
I would I were among them. Let us pass!
Living is but a habit; and I mean
To break myself of it soon.

Lucifer. Too soon thou canst not
Men heed not of the day, how nigh none knows,
Which brings the consummation of the world.
But in mine ear the old machine already
Begins to grate. They would not credit warning,
Or I would up and cry, Repent! I will.
Here's a fair gathering, and I feel moved.
Mortals, repent! the world is nigh to its end:
On its last legs and desperately sick.
See ye not how it reels round all day long?

Boys. Oh! here's a ranter. Come, here's fun.

Amen!

I know the church service by heart.

Bystander. Be off!
You'll serve the church by keeping out of it.

Lucifer. I am a preacher come to tell ye truth.
I tell ye, too, there is no time to be lost;
So fold your souls up neatly, while ye may;
Direct to God in Heaven; or some one else
May seize them, seal them, send them—you know where.
The world must end. I weep to think of it.
But you, you laugh! I knew ye would. I know
Men never will be wise till they are fools
Forever. Laugh away! The time will come,
When tears of fire are trickling from your eyes,
Ye will blame yourselves for having laughed at me.
I warn ye, men: prepare! repent! be saved!
I warn ye, not because I love, but know ye.
God will dissolve the world, as she of old
Her pearl, within His cup, and swallow ye
In wrath: although to taste ye would be poison,
And death and suicide to aught but God.
Again I warn ye. Save himself who can!
Do ye not oft begin to seek salvation?
You? you? and fail, as oft, to find? Sink? Cease?
And shall I tell ye, brethren, why ye fail
Once and forever? why, there is no past;
And the future is the fiction of a fiction;
The present moment is eternity;
It is that ye have sucked corruption from the world
Like milk from your own mothers: it is in
Your soul-blood and your soul-bones. Earth does not
Wean one out of a thousand sons to Heaven.
Beginnings are alike: it is ends which differ.
One drop falls, lasts, and dries up—but a drop;
Another begins a river: and one thought
Settles a life, an immortality:
And that one thought ye will not take to good.
Now I will tell ye just one other truth:
Ye hate the truth as snails salt—it dissolves ye,
Body and soul—but I don't mind. So, now:
Up to this moment ye are all, each, damned.
What are ye now? still damned! It will be the same
To-morrow—and the next day—and the next;
Till some fine morning ye will wake in fire.
Ye see I do not mince the truth for ye.
Belike you think your lives will dribble out
As brooks in summer dry up. Let us see!
Try: dike them up: they stagnate—thicken—scum.
That would make life worse than death. Well, let go!
Where are you then? for life, like water, will Find its last level; what level? The grave.
It is but a fall of five feet, after all;
That cannot hurt ye; it is but just enough
To work the wheel of life; so work away!
Ye may think that—I do not know the terms
And treasures whereupon ye live so high.
But I know more than most men, modestly
Speaking. I know I am lost, and you too. God
Could only save me by destroying me;
So that I have no advantage over you,
And therefore think ye will the rather bear
One of your own state to advise for ye.
Now don't you envy me, good folks, I pray,—
Envy's a coal comes hissing hot from hell.
'Twill be such coals will burn ye by the way.
Your other preachers first think they are safe.
Now I say, broadly, I am the worst among ye;
And God knows I have no need to wrong myself,
Nor you. I boast not of it, but as truth:
It is little to be proud of, credit me.
What is salvation? What is safety? Think!
Who wants to know? Does any?

The Crowd.  All of us.

Lucifer. Then I will not tell ye. You shall wait until

Some angel come and stir your stagnant souls:
Then plunge into yourselves and rise redeemed.
Come, I'll unroll your hearts and read them to ye.
To say ye live is but to say ye have souls,
That ye have paid for them and mean to play them.
Till some brave pleasure wins the golden stake,
And rakes it up to death as to a bank.
Ye live and die on what your souls will fetch;
And all are of different prices: therefore Hell
Cannot well bargain for mankind in gross;
But each soul must be purchased, one by one.
This it is makes men rate themselves so high:
While truly ye are worth little; but to God
Ye are worth more than to yourselves. By sin
Ye wreak your spite against God — that ye know;
And knowing, will it. But I pray, I beg,
Act with some smack of justice to your Maker,
If not unto yourselves. Do! It is enough
To make the very Devil chide mankind—
Such baseness, such unthankfulness! Why, he Thanks God he is no worse. You don't do that.
I say, be just to God. Leave off these airs:
Know your place; speak to God—and say, for once,
Go first, Lord! Take your finger off your eye.
It blocks the universe and God from sight.
Think ye your souls are worth nothing to God?
Are they so small? What can be great with God?
What will ye weigh against the Lord? Yourselves?
Bring out your balance: get in, man by man:
Add earth, heaven, hell, the universe; that's all.
God puts his finger in the other scale,
And up we bounce, a bubble. Nought is great
Nor small with God—for none but He can make
The atom indivisible, and none
But He can make a world: He counts the orbs,
He counts the atoms of the universe,
And makes both equal—both are infinite.
Giving God honor, never underrate
Yourselves: after Him, ye are every thing.
But mind! God's more than every thing; He is God.
And what of me? No, us? no! I mean the Devil?
Why, see ye not he goes before both you
And God? Men say—as proud as Lucifer—
Pray who would not be proud with such a train?
Hath he not all the honor of the earth?
Why Mammon sits before a million hearths
Where God is bolted out from every house.
Well might He say He cometh as a thief;
For He will break your bars and burst your doors
Which slammed against Him once, and turn ye out,
Roofless and shivering, 'neath the doom-storm; Heaven
Shall crack above ye like a bell in fire,
And bury all beneath its shining shards.
He calls: ye hear not. Lo! He comes — ye see not.
No; ye are deaf as a dead adder's ear:
No; ye are blind as never bat was blind,
With a burning, bloodshot blindness of the heart;
A swimming, swollen senselessness of soul.
Listen! Whom love ye most? Why, him to whom
Ye in your turn are dearest. Need I name?
Oh no! But all are devils to themselves;
And every man his own great foe. Hell gets
Only the gleanings: earth hath the full wain;
And hell is merry at its harvest-home.
But ye are generous to sin, and grudge
The gleaners nothing; ask them, push them in.
Let not an ear, a grain of sin, be lost;
Gather it, grind it up; it is our bread:
We should be ashamed to waste the gifts of God.
Why is the world so mad? Why runs it thus
Raving and howling round the universe?
Because the Devil bit it from the birth!
The fault is all with him. Fear nothing, friends!
It is fear which beds the far to-come with fire
As the sun does the west: but the sun sets;
Well: still ye tremble — tremble, first at light,
Then darkness. Tremble! ye dare not believe.
No, cowards! sooner than believe ye would die;
Die with the black lie flapping on your lips
Like the soot-flake upon a burning bar.
Be merry, happy, if ye can: think never
Of him who slays your souls, nor Him who saves.
There is time enough for that when ye are a dying.
Keep your old ways! It matters not this once.
Be brave! Ye are not men whom meat and wine
Serve to remind but of the sacrament;
To whom sweet shapes and tantalizing smiles
Bring up the Devil and the ten commandments—
And so on—but I said the world must end.
I am sorry; it is such a pleasant world;
With all its faults, it is perfect—to a fault;
And you, of course, end with it. Now how long
Will the world take to die? I know ye place
Great faith upon death-bed repentances;
The suddener the better. I know ye often
Begin to think of praying and repenting;
But second thoughts come, and ye are worse than ever:
As over new white snow a filthy thaw.
Ye do amaze me, verily. How long
Will ye take heart on your own wickedness,
And God's forbearance? Have ye cast it up?
Come now; the year and month, day, hour, and minute,
Sin's golden cycle. Do ye know how long
Exactly Heaven will grant ye? how long God,—
Who, when He had slain the world and wasted it.
Hung up His bow in Heaven, as in his hall
A warrior after battle—will yet bear
Your contumely and scorn of His best gifts,—
Man's mockery of man? But never mind!
Some of us are magnificently good,
And hold the head up high like a giraffe;
You, in particular, and you—and you.
Good men are here and there, I know; but then,—
You must excuse me if I mention this—
My duty is to tell it you—the world,
Like a black block of marble, jagged with white,
As with a vein of lightning petrified,
Looks blacker than without such; looks in truth,
So gross the heathen, gross the Christian too—
Like the original darkness of void space,
Hardened. Instead of justice, love, and grace,
Each worth to man the mission of a God,
Injustice, hate, uncharitableness,
Tri-equal reign round earth, a Trinity of Hell.
Ye think ye never can be bad enough;
And as ye sink in sin, ye rise in hope.
And let the worst come to the worst, you say,
There always will be time to turn ourselves,
And cry for half an hour or so to God:
Salvation, sure, is not so very hard—
It need not take one long; and half an hour
Is quite as much as we can spare for it.
We have no time for pleasures. Business! business!
No! ye shall perish sudden and unsaved.
The priest shall, dipping, die. Can man save man? Is water God? The counsellor, wise fool!
Drop down amid his quirks and sacred lies.
The judge, while dooming unto death some wretch,
Shall meet at once his own death, doom, and judge.
The doctor, watch in hand and patient's pulse,
Shall feel his own heart cease its beats—and fall.
Professors shall spin out, and students strain
Their brains no more; art, science, toil, shall cease.
The world shall stand still with a rending jar,
As though it struck at sea. The halls where sit
The heads of nations shall be dumb with death.
The ship shall after her own plummet sink,
And sound the sea herself and depths of death.
At the first turn Death shall cut off the thief,
And dash the gold bag in his yellow brain.
The gambler, reckoning gains, shall drop a piece:
Stoop down, and there see death;—look up, there God.
The wanton, temporizing with decay,
And qualifying every line which vice
Writes bluntly on the brow, inviting scorn,
Shall pale through plastered red: and the loose, low sot
See clear, for once, through his misty, o'erbrimmed eye.
The just, if there be any, die in prayer.
Death shall be every where among your marts,
And giving bills which no man may decline—
Drafts upon hell one moment after date.
Then shall your outcries tremble amid the stars:
Terrors shall be about ye like a wind;
And fears come down upon ye like a house.

FESTUS. Yon man looks frightened.
LUCIFER. Then it is time to stop.
I hope I have done no good. He will soon forget
His soul. Flesh soaks it up as sponge does water.
Now wait! I will rub them backwards like a cat;
And you shall see them spit and sparkle up.
Let us suppose a case, friends! You are men;
And there is God! and I will be the Devil.
Very well. I am the Devil.

ONE says. I think you are.
You look as if you lived on buttered thunder.
LUCIFER. Nay, be not wroth. Ye would crucify
the Devil,
I do believe, if he a moment vexed you.
I know well which ye choose; but choose again!
Time or eternity? Speak, Hell or Heaven?

THE CROWD. He's a mad ranter: down with him!—

FESTUS. Let him be!
LUCIFER. Stand by me, Festus! and I will by thee.

Why, God and man! this is the second time
That I have run for my life.

FESTUS. Nay, nay, come back!
They will not harm thee: they would chair thee round
The market-place, knew they but whom thou art
Peace there, my friends! one minute; let us pray!
Grant us, O God! that in Thy holy love
The universal people of the world
May grow more great and happy every day;
 Mightier, wiser, humbler, too, towards Thee.
And that all ranks, all classes, callings, states
Of life, so far as such seem right to Thee,
May mingle into one, like sister trees,
And so in one stem flourish; — that all laws
And powers of government be based and used
In good and for the people's sake; — that each
May feel himself of consequence to all,
And act as though all saw him; — that the whole,
The mass of every nation, may so do
As is most worthy of the next to God;
For a whole people's souls, each one worth more
Than a mere world of matter, make combined,
A something godlike — something like to Thee.
We pray Thee for the welfare of all men.
Let monarchs who love truth and freedom feel
The happiness of safety and respect
From those they rule, and guardianship from Thee
Let them remember they are set on thrones
As representatives, not substitutes
Of nations, to implead with God and man.
Let tyrants who hate truth, or fear the free,
Know that to rule in slavery and error,
For the mere ends of personal pomp and power,
Is such a sin as doth deserve a hell
To itself sole. Let both remember, Lord! They are but things like-natured with all nations; That mountains issue out of plains, and not Plains out of mountains, and so likewise kings Are of the people, not the people of kings. And let all feel, the rulers and the ruled, All classes and all countries, that the world Is Thy great halidom; that Thou art King, Lord! only owner and possessor. Grant That nations may now see, it is not kings Nor priests they need fear so much as themselves; That if they keep but true to themselves, and free, Sober, enlightened, godly—mortal men Become impassible as air, one great And indestructible substance as the sea. Let all on thrones and judgment seats reflect How dreadful Thy revenge through nations is On those who wrong them; but do Thou grant, Lord! That when wrongs are to be redressed, such may Be done with mildness, speed, and firmness, not With violence or hate, whereby one wrong Translates another—both to Thee abhorrent. The bells of time are ringing changes fast. Grant, Lord! that each fresh peal may usher in An era of advancement, that each change Prove an effectual, lasting, happy gain. And we beseech Thee, overrule, O God! All civil contests to the good of all; All party and religious difference
To honorable ends, whether secured
Or lost; and let all strife, political
Or social, spring from conscientious aims,
And have a generous, self-ennobling end,
Man's good and Thine own glory in view always!
The best may then fail, and the worst succeed
Alike with honor. We beseech Thee, Lord!
For bodily strength, but more especially
For the soul's health and safety. We entreat Thee
In Thy great mercy to decrease our wants,
And add autumnal increase to the comforts
Which tend to keep men innocent, and load
Their hearts with thanks to Thee, as trees in bearing:

The blessings of friends, families, and homes,
And kindnesses of kindred. And we pray
That men may rule themselves in faith in God,
In charity to each other, and in hope
Of their own soul's salvation:—that the mass,
The millions in all nations, may be trained,
From their youth upwards, in a nobler mode,
To loftier and more liberal ends. We pray,
Above all things, Lord! that all men be free
From bondage, whether of the mind or body;—
The bondage of religious bigotry,
And bald antiquity, servility
Of thought or speech to rank and power; be all
Free as they ought to be, in mind and soul,
As well as by state birthright;—and that Mind,
Time's giant pupil, may right soon attain
Majority, and speak and act for himself.
Incline Thou to our prayers, and grant, O Lord!
That all may have enough, and some safe mean
Of worldly goods and honors, by degrees,
Take place, if practicable, in the fitness
And fullness of Thy time. And we beseech Thee,
That Truth no more be gagged, nor conscience dungeoned,
Nor science be impeached of godlessness,
Nor faith be circumscribed, which, as to Thee,
And the soul's self affairs, is infinite;
But that all men may have due liberty
To speak an honest mind, in every land,
Encouragement to study, leave to act
As conscience orders. We entreat Thee, Lord!
For Thy Son's sake, to take away reproach
Of all kinds from Thy church, and all temptation
Of pomp or power political, that none
May err in the end for which they were appointed
To any of its orders, low or high;
And no ambition, of a worldly cast,
Leaven the love of souls unto whose care
They feel propelled by Thy most holy Spirit.
Be every church established, Lord! in truth.
Let all who preach the word live by the word,
In moderate estate; and in Thy church—
One, universal, and invisible
World-wards, yet manifest unto itself—
May it seem good, dear Savior, in Thy sight,
That orders be distinguished, not by wealth,
But piety and power of teaching souls.
Equalize labor, Lord! and recompense.
Let not a hundred humble pastors starve,
In this or any land of Christendom,
While one or two, impalaced, mitred, throned
And banqueted, burlesque if not blaspheme
The holy penury of the Son of God;
The fastings, the foot-wanderings, and the preachings
Of Christ and His first followers. Oh that the Son
Might come again! There should be no more war,
No more want, no more sickness; with a touch
He should cure all disease, and with a word
All sin; and with a look to Heaven, a prayer,
Provide bread for a million at a time.
But till that perfect advent grant us, Lord!
That all good institutions, orders, claims,
Charitably proposed, or in the aid
Of Thy divine foundation, may much prosper,
And more of them be raised and nobly filled;—
That Thy word may be taught throughout all lands,
And save souls daily to the thrones of Heaven!—
And we entreat Thee, that all men whom Thou
Hast gifted with great minds may love Thee well,
And praise Thee for their powers, and use them most Humbly and holily, and, lever-like,
Act but in lifting up the mass of mind
About them; knowing well that they shall be Questioned by Thee of deeds the pen hath done,
Or caused, or glozed; inspire them with delight
And power to treat of noble themes and things
Worthily, and to leave the low and mean—
Things born of vice or day-lived fashion, in
Their naked, native folly:—make them know
Fine thoughts are wealth, for the right use of which Men are and ought to be accountable,—
If not to Thee, to those they influence.
Grant this we pray Thee, and that all who read
Or utter noble thoughts may make them theirs,
And thank God for them, to the betterment
Of their succeeding life;—that all who lead
The general sense and taste, too apt, perchance,
To be led, keep in mind the mighty good
They may achieve, and are in conscience bound,
And duty, to attempt unceasingly
To compass. Grant us, all-maintaining Sire!
That all the great mechanic aids to toil
Man's skill hath formed, found, rendered,—whether used
In multiplying works of mind, or aught
To obviate the thousand wants of life,
May much avail to human welfare now,
And in all ages, henceforth and forever.
Let their effect be, Lord! to lighten labor,
And give more room to mind, and leave the poor
Some time for self-improvement. Let them not
Be forced to grind the bones out of their arms
For bread, but have some space to think and feel
Like moral and immortal creatures. God!
Have mercy on them till such time shall come;
Look Thou with pity on all lesser crimes,
Thrust on men almost when devoured by want,
Wretchedness, ignorance, and outcast life!
Have mercy on the rich, too, who pass by
The means they have at hand to fill their minds
With serviceable knowledge for themselves,
And fellows, and support not the good cause
Of the world's better future! Oh, reward
All such who do, with peace of heart and power,
For greater good. Have mercy, Lord! on each
And all, for all men need it equally.
May peace, and industry, and commerce weld
Into one land all nations of the world,
Rewedding those the Deluge once divorced.
Oh! may all help each other in good things,
Mentally, morally, and bodily.
Vouchsafe, kind God! Thy blessing to this isle,
Specially. May our country ever lead
The world, for she is worthiest; and may all
Profit by her example, and adopt
Her course, wherever great, or free, or just.
May all her subject colonies and powers
Have of her freedom freely, as a child
Receiveth of its parents. Let not rights
Be wrested from us to our own reproach,
But granted. We may make the whole world free. And be as free ourselves as ever, more! If policy or self-defence call forth Our forces to the field, let us in Thee Place, first, our trust, and in Thy name we shall O'ercome, for we will only wage the right. Let us not conquer nations for ourselves, But for Thee, Lord! who hast predestined us To fight the battles of the future now, And so have done with war before Thou comest. Till then, Lord God of armies, let our foes Have their swords broken and their cannon burst, And their strong cities levelled; and while we War faithfully and righteously, improve, Civilize, Christianize the lands we win From savage or from nature, Thou, O God! Wilt aid and hallow conquest, as of old, Thine own immediate nation's. But we pray That all mankind may make one brotherhood, And love and serve each other; that all wars And feuds die out of nations, whether those Whom the sun's hot light darkens, or ourselves Whom he treats fairly, or the northern tribes Whom ceaseless snows and starry winters blench, Savage or civilized,—let every race, Red, black, or white, olive, or tawny-skinned, Settle in peace and swell the gathering hosts Of the great Prince of Peace. Oh! may the hour
Soon come when all false gods, false creeds, false prophets,—
Allowed in Thy good purpose for a time,—
Demolished, the great world shall be at last
The mercy-seat of God, the heritage
Of Christ, and the possession of the Spirit,
The comforter, the wisdom! shall all be
One land, one home, one friend, one faith, one law,
Its ruler God, its practice righteousness,
Its life peace! For the one true faith we pray;
There is but one in Heaven, and there shall be
But one on earth, the same which is in Heaven.
Prophecy is more true than history.
Grant us our prayers, we pray, Lord! in the name
And for the sake of Thy Son Jesus Christ,
Our Savior and Redeemer, who with Thee,
And with the Holy Spirit, reigneth God
Over all worlds, one blessed Trinity.——

THE CROWD. Amen!

LUCIFER. Well, friends, we'll sing a hymn; then part.
I give it out, and you sing—all of you.

Oh! Earth is cheating Earth
From age to age forever;
She laughs at faith and worth,
And dreams she shall die never;
Never, never, never!
And dreams she shall die never.
And Hell is cursing Hell
From age to age forever;
Its groans ring out the knell
Of souls that may die never!
    Never, never, never!
Of souls that may die never.

But Heaven is blessing Heaven
From age to age forever;
And its thanks to God are given
For bliss that can die never;
    Never, never, never!
For bliss that can die never.

My blessing be upon ye all; now go!
Festus. I wonder what these people make of thee.
Lucifer. Ay, manner's a great matter.
Festus. They deserve
All the rebuke thou gavest them, and more.
What mountains of delusion men have reared!
How every age hath bustled on to build
Its shadowy mole—its monumental dream!
How faith and fancy, in the mind of man,
Have spurioulsy mingled, and how much
Shall pass away for aye, as pass before
Yon sun, the Lord of steadfastness and change,
The visionary landscapes of the skies;—
The golden capes far stretching into Heaven,
The snow-piled cloud crags, the bright-winged isles
FESTUS.

Which dot the deep, impassive ocean, ain,
Like a disbanded rainbow, of all hues,
Fit for translated fairy's Paradise; —
Or as before the eye of musing child,
The faces Fancy forms in clouds and fire
Of glowing angels or of darkening fiend.
Arts, superstition, arms, philosophy,
Have each in turn possessed, betrayed, and mocked us.

Yes, vain philosophy, thine hour is come!
Thy lips were lined with the immortal lie,
And dyed with all the look of truth. Men saw,
Believed, embraced, detested, cast thee off.

Those lights, the morn of Truth's immortal day,
As thou didst falsely swear them, have they not
Vanished, the mere auroras of the mind?
And thou didst vow to gather clear again
The fallen waters of humanity;
To smooth the flaw from out an eye; to piece
A pounded pearl. Thank God! I am a man;
Not a philosopher. Rivers may rot,
Never revive the root of oak firebolted.
Come, let us to the hills! where none but God
Can overlook us; for I hate to breathe
The breaths and think the thoughts of other men.
In close and clouded cities, where the sky
Frowns, like an angry father, mournfully.
I love the hills, and I love loneliness.
And Oh! I love the woods, those natural fanes
Whose very air is holy; and we breathe
Of God; for He doth come in special place,
And, while we worship, He is there for us.

Lucifer. It is time that something should be done for the poor.
The sole equality on earth is death;
Now, rich and poor are both dissatisfied.
I am for judgment: that will settle both.
Nothing is to be done without destruction.
Death is the universal salt of states;
Blood is the base of all things—law and war,
I could tame this lion age to follow me.
I should like to macadamize the world;
The road to Hell wants mending.

Festus. Come away!

Scene—Alcove and Garden.

Festus and Clara.

Festus. What happy things are youth, and love, and sunshine!
How sweet to feel the sun upon the heart!
To know it is lighting up the rosy blood,
And with all joyous feelings, prism-hued,
Making the dark breast shine like a spar grot.
We walk among the sunbeams as with angels.

Clara. Yes, there are feelings so serene and sweet,
Coming and going with a musical lightness,
That they can make amends for their passingness,
And balance God's condition to decay;
As yon light fleecy cloudlet floating along,
Like golden down from some high angel's wing,
Breaks, but relieves and beautifies the blue.
I wonder if ever I could love another.
How I should start, to see upon the sward
A shadow not thine own, arm-linked with mine;
See, here is a garland I have bound for thee.

Festus. Nay, crown thyself; it will suit thee better, love.

Place wreaths of everlasting flowers on tombs,
And deck with fading beauties forms that fade.
Put it away. I will no crown save this:
And could the line of dust which here I trace
Upon my brow but warrant dust beneath —
And nothing more — or coul'd this bubble frame,
Informed with soul, lashed from the stream of life
By its own impetus, but burst at once,
And vanish, part on high and part below,
I would be happy, nor would envy death.
Could I, like Heaven's bolt, earthing quench myself,
This moment would I burn me out a grave.
Might I but be as many years in dying
As I have lived — that might be some relief.

Clara. What canst thou mean?

Festus. Mean? Is there not a future?
The past, the present, and the coming, curse each!
The future, curse it!
Clara. Shall we not ever live
And love as now?
Festus. Ay, live I fear we must.
Clara. And love: because we then are happiest.
We shall lack nothing having love: and we,
We must be happy every where—we two!
For spiritual life is great and clear,
And self-continuous as the changeless sea,
Rolling the same in every age as now;
Whether o'er mountain-tops, where only snow
Dwells, and the sunbeam hurries coldly by;
Or o'er the vales, as now, of some old world,
Older than ancient man's. As is the sea's,
So is the life of spirit, and the kind.
And then with natures raised, refined and freed
From these poor forms, our days shall pass in peace
And love: no thought of human littleness
Shall cross our high, calm souls, shining and pure
As the gold gates of Heaven. Like some deep lake
Upon a mountain summit they shall rest,
High above cloud and storm of life like this,
All peace and power, and passionless purity;
Or if a thought of other troubled times
Ruffle it for a moment, it shall pass
Like a chance raindrop on its heavenward face.
I love to meditate on bliss to come.
Not that I am unhappy here; but that
The hope of higher bliss may rectify
The lower feeling which we now enjoy.
Festus. Mind means not happiness; power is not good.

Clara. True bliss is to be found in holy life; In charity to man—in love to God:
Why should such duties cease, such powers decay?
Are they not worthy of a deathless state—
A boundless scope—a high, uplifted life?
Man, like the air-born eagle, who remains
On earth only to feed, and sleep, and die;
But whose delight is on his lonely wing,
Wide-sweeping as a mind, to force the skies
High as the lightfall ere, begirt with clouds,
It dash this nether world—immortal man
Rushes aloft, right upwards, into Heaven.
Oh, faith of Christ, sole honor of the world!

Festus. What know men of religion, save its forms?

Clara. True faith nor biddeth nor abideth form.
The bended knee, the eye uplift, is all
Which man need render; all which God can bear.
What to the faith are forms? A passing speck,
A crow upon the sky. God's worship is
That only He inspires; and His bright words,
Writ in the red-leaved volume of the heart,
Return to him in prayer, as dew to Heaven.
Our proper good we rarely seek or make;
Mindless of our immortal powers and their
Immortal end, as is the pearl of its worth,
The rose its scent, the wave its purity.

Festus. Come, we will quit these saddening themes.

Wilt sing
To me? for I am gloomy; and I love
Thy singing, sacred as the sound of hymns,
On some bright Sabbath morning, on the moor,
Where all is still save praise; and where hard by
The ripe grain shakes its bright beard in the sun;
The wild bee hums more solemnly; the deep sky,
The fresh green grass, the sun, and sunny brook,
All look as if they knew the day, the hour,
And felt with man the need and joy of thanks.

Clara. I cannot sing the lightsome lays of love.
Many thou know'st who can; but none that can
Love thee as I do—for I love thy soul;
And I would save it, Festus! Listen then:

Is Heaven a place where pearly streams
Glide over silver sand?
Like childhood's rosy, dazzling dreams
Of some far faëry land?
Is Heaven a cime where diamond dews
Glitter on fadeless flowers?
And mirth and music ring aloud
From amaranthine bowers?
Ah! no; not such, not such is Heaven!
Surpassing far all these;
Such cannot be the guerdon given
Man's wearied soul to please.
For saint and sinner here below
Such vain to be have proved:
And the pure spirit will despise
Whate'er the sense hath loved.

There we shall dwell with Sire and Scn,
   And with the mother-maid,
And with the Holy Spirit, one,
   In glory like arrayed:
And not to one created thing
   Shall our embrace be given;
But all our joys shall be in God;
   For only God is Heaven.

Festus. I know that thou dost love me. I in vain
Strive to love aught of earth or Heaven but thee.
Thou art my first, last, only love; nor shall Another even tempt my heart. Like stars,
A thousand, sweet and bright, and wondrous fair,
A thousand deathless miracles of beauty,
They shall ever pass at all but eyeless distance,
And never mix with thy love; but be lost,
All, meanly in its moonlike lustrousness.

Clara. How still the air is! the tree tops stir not:
But stand and peer on Heaven's bright face, as though
It slept and they were loving it: they would not Have the skies see them move for summers; would they?
See that sweet cloud! It is watching us, I am certain.
What have we here to make thee stay one second?
Away; thy sisters wait thee in the west,
The blushing bridemaids of the sun and sea.
I would I were like thee, thou little cloud,
Ever to live in Heaven: or seeking earth
To let my spirit down in drops of love:
To sleep with night upon her dewy lap;
And the next dawn, back with the sun to Heaven;
And so on through eternity, sweet cloud!
I cannot but think that some senseless things
Are happy. Often and often have I watched
A gossamer line sighing itself along
The air, as it seemed; and so thin, thin and bright,
Looking as woven in a loom of light,
That I have envied it, I have, and followed;—
Oft watched the seabird's down blown o'er the wave,
Now touching it, now spirited aloft,
Now out of sight, now seen,—till in some bright fringe
Of streamy foam, as in a cage, at last
A playful death it dies, and mourned its death.

Festus. But thinkest thou the future is a state
More positive than this; or that it can be
Aught but another present, full of cares,
And toils, perhaps, and duties; that the soul
FESTUS.

Will ever be more nigh to God than now,
Save as may seem from mind's debility:
Just as the sun, from weakness of the eye,
And the illusions made by matter's forms,
Seems hot and wearied resting on the hill?
It would be well, I think, to live as though
No more were to be looked for; to be good
Because it is best, here: and leave hope and fear
For lives below ourselves. If earth persuades not
That I owe prayer, and praise, and love to God,
While all I have He gives, will Heaven? will Hell?
No; neither, never!

Clara. I think not all with thee.
Have I not heard thee hint of spirit-friends?
Where are they now?

Festus. Ah! close at hand, mayhap
I have a might immortal; and can ken
With angels. Neither sky, nor night, nor earth:
Hinders me. Through the forms of things I see
Their essences; and thus, even now, behold—
But where I cannot show to thee—far round,
Nature herself—the whole effect of God.
Mind, matter, motion, heat, time, love, and life
And death, and immortality—those chief
And first-born giants all are there—all parts,
All limbs of her, their mother: she is all.

Clara. And what does she?

Festus. Produce: it is her life.
The three I named last, life, death, deathlessness,
Glide in elliptic path round all things made—
For none save God can fill the perfect whole:
And are but to eternity as is
The horizon to the world. At certain points
Each seems the other; now, the three are one;
Now, all invisible; and now, as first,
Moving in measured round.

Clara. How look these beings?

Festus. Ah! Life looks gayly and gloomily in turns;
With a brow checkered like the sward, by leaves
Between which the light glints; and she, careless, wears
A wreath of flowers—part faded and part fresh.
And Death is beautiful, and sad, and still:
She seems too happy; happier far than life—
In but one feeling, apathy; and on
Her chill, white brow, frosts bright a braid of snow.

Clara. And Immortality?

Festus. She looks alone;
As though she would not know her sisterhood.
And on her brow a diadem of fire,
Matched by the conflagration of her eye,
Outflaming even that eye which in my sleep
Beams close upon me till it bursts from sheer O'erstrainedness of sight, burns.

Clara. What do they?

Festus. Each strives to win me to herself.

Clara. How?
Festus.

Depths

Opens her sweet white arms and whispers, Peace!
Come, say thy sorrows in this bosom! This
Will never close against thee; and my heart,
Though cold, cannot be colder much than man's.
Come! All this soon must end; and soon the world
Shall perish leaf by leaf, and land by land;
Flower by flower — flood by flood — and hill
By hill away. Oh! come, come! Let us die.

Clara. Say that thou wilt not die!

But Immortality, with finger spired,
Points to a distant, giant world — and says,
There, there is my home! Live along with me!

Clara. Canst see that world?

Festus. Just — a huge, shadowy shape;
It looks a disembodied orb — the ghost
Of some great sphere which God hath stricken dead:
Or like a world which God hath thought — not made.

Clara. Follow her, Festus! Does she speak again?

Festus. She never speaks but once: and now, in scorn,
Points to this dim, dwarfed, misbegotten sphere.

Clara. Why let her pass?

Festus. That is the great world-question.
Life would not part with me; and from her brow
Tearing her wreath of passion-flowers, she flung
It round my neck, and dared me struggle then.
I never could destroy a flower: and none
But fairest hands like thine can grace with me
The plucking of a rose. And Life, sweet Life!
Vowed she would crop the world for me, and lay it
Herself before my feet, even as a flower.
And when I felt that flower contained thyself—
One drop within its nectary kept for me,
I lost all count of those strange sisters three;
And where they be, I know not. But I see
One who is more to me.

Clara. I know not how
Thou hast this power and knowledge. I but hope
It comes from good hands; if it be not thine
Own force of mind. It is much less what we do
Than what we think, which fits us for the future.
I wish we had a little world to ourselves,
With none but we two in it.

Festus. And if God
Gave us a star, what could we do with it
But that we could without it? Wish it not!

Clara. I'll not wish, then, for stars; but I could love
Some peaceful spot where we might dwell unknown,
Where home-born joys might nestle round our hearts
As swallows round our roofs,—and blend their sweets
Like dewy-tangled flowerets in one bed.

Festus. The sweetest joy, the wildest woe, is love;
The taint of earth, the odor of the skies,
Is in it. Would that I were aught but man!
The death of brutes, the immortality
Of fiend or angel, better seems than all
The doubtful prospects of our painted dust.
And all Morality can teach is—Bear!
And all Religion can inspire is—Hope!—

CLARA. It is enough. Fruition of the fruit
Of the great Tree of Life is not for earth.
Stars are its fruits, its lightest leaf is life.
The heart hath many sorrows beside love,
Yea, many as the veins which visit it.
The love of aught on earth is not its chief,
Nor ought to be. Inclusive of them all
There is the one main sorrow, life;—for what
Can spirit, severed from the great one, God,
Feel but a grievous longing to rejoin
Its infinite—its author—and its end?
And yet is life a thing to be beloved,
And honored holily, and bravely borne.
A man's life may be all ease; and his death,
By some dark chance, unthought-of agony:—
Or life may be all suffering, and decease
A flower-like sleep;—or both be full of woe,
Or each comparatively painless. Blame
Not God for inequalities like these.
They may be justified. How canst thou know?
They may be only seeming. Canst thou judge?
They may be done away with utterly
By loving, fearing, knowing God, the Truth.
In all distress of spirit, grief of heart,
Bodily agony, or mental woe,
Rebuffs and vain assumptions of the world,
Or the poor spite of weak and wicked souls,
Think thou on God. Think what He underwent
And did for us as man. Weigh thou thy cross
With Christ's, and judge which were the heavier.
Joy even in thine anguish;—such was His,
But measurelessly more. Thy suffering
Assimilateth thee to Him. Rejoice!
Think upon what thou shalt be. Think on God.
Then ask thyself, what is the world, and all
Its mountainous inequalities? Ah, what!
Are not all equal as dust-atomies?—

Festus My soul's orb darkens as a sudden star,
Which having for a time exhausted earth
And half the Heavens of wonder, mortally
Passes forever, not eclipsed, consumed;—
All but a cloudy vapor darkening there,
The very spot in space it once illumed.
Once to myself I seemed a mount of light;
But now, a pit of night.—No more of this!
For like a shipwrecked stranger in a light-house,
I have looked down upon the utter side
Of such thoughts from the leeming room of reason,
And beheld all beyond black roaring madness.
Here have I lain all day in this green nook,
Shaded by larch and hornbeam, ash and yew;
A living well and runnel at my feet,
And wild flowers dancing to some delicate air;
An urn-topped column and its ivy wreath
Skirting my sight as thus I lie and look
Upon the blue, unchanging, sacred skies:
And thou, too, gentle Clara, by my side,
With lightsome brow and beaming eye, and bright,
Long, glorious locks, which drop upon thy cheek
Like gold-hued cloudflakes on the rosy morn.
Oh! when the heart is full of sweets to o'erflowing,
And ringing to the music of its love,
Who but an angel or an hypocrite
Could speak or think of happier states?

Clara.

Farewell!
Remember what thou saidst about the stars.

Festus. Stay. What wouldst say yet? There is something sad
Darkens thy mind's disk. Speak it.

Clara.

Nay, not now.
The dews are falling, and the night draws nigh.
Some other time.

Festus. Why, now, love.

Clara. Well then, this.
These vast unearthly powers thou hast;—let me
Assure mine own heart they be innocent.
If thou refuse this boon, I shall prejudge
Those powers as evil; but if harmless they,
Thou wilt permit me share or view the means.
I ask this, therefore, not from vain desire
Of prying into mysteries, nor as test
Of words of thine,—for thee believe I truly,—
But as a proof of love and harmlessness,
To view with these same marvelling eyes of mine
The visible form of some obedient sprite
Or invocable angel;—wilt thou?

Festus. Ay.
Wouldst parley Luniel on her silver seat,
Or the star-tiared Ourania? for the night
Deepens in Heaven, and even now I see
Earth's cardinal world-watchers each prepare
His wing to poise for Paradisal flight
Relieved by darker angel.

Clara. None of these.
Behold yon star just trembling into light;
Hath it a tutelar spirit?

Festus. Yea, all stars.

Clara. Prepare thy spell, then. I would see its form,
And hear its voice.

Festus. Weird charm nor spell I use,
Nor incantation. My sole magic, might.
Mine only sign this, this my spirit ring.
Prayer, faith, and a pure heart can draw down Heaven,
Most surely, then, one star. Kneel thou with me.

Spirit of yon star that now
Peer'st through God's all-clothing sky,
List! we need thee here below;
Leave thy mystic light on high.
By the all-compelling name,
Thought alone, but uttered never;
Word in Heaven and earth the same,
Come thou now, and come thou ever!
Clara. I feel a light, a voice, a power.

Festus. Arise!—

What wilt thou of it?

Spirit. Man's vital frame of the elements is ta'en,
And when by sacred theurgy of mind
He nature's robe can thread by thread unwind,
Heaven's true celestial science then ye gain.
Through Heaven and the angels, stars and earth,
The boundless justice of harmonic light
Spreads through the universe of death and birth:
For of death's nothingness is born life's might.
With every earth-lent ray of every star
Holy and special influences are,
To such as Truth-led in Time's darkest hour,
Seek faithfully their sweet and brilliant power.

Plant and planet, star and gem,
All are each together bound;
Consanguineous with them
Man in time state aye is found.
Rightly who his soul-path knows
To spirit's universal way,
Bathed in sundew shall repose,
Brought by the Angel of the day.
For as in the sea-bound river
Flows the force of thousand rills,
So its end the great soul ever
In Eternity fulfils.

Clara. Oh! I have gazed on beauty known by none
Till now. Dizzy with light my soul. Spirit!
Thy starry name?

Spirit.

Clara.

Where dost dwell?

Spirit. I in my star abide, yet oft in Heaven.
Not where the anteformal seraphs beam,
Nor cherubim with winged countenance, but
Where roll the bright Ophanim;—and in clouds
Of glory, wheeling through the infinite skies—
A Heaven-encircling hurricane of light—
Form with their wings a holy, living throne
Of the all-hallowing Spirit, chanting aye
God's mercy thrice victorious o'er the world—
The mysteries of wisdom—and the bliss
Of that inspiring light which Deity
Sows in the soul of Nature, stars and men,
Blest heirs of either world, above, beloved—
Below accepted;—thither I attain.
For as one God, so but one nature is
The image yet the opposite of God;
Although in infinite variousness as He,
Infinite and eternal unity;—
With these, and with all holy essences,
And spirit souls elect, I mix and serve,
All with each order interpenetrant;
For, humbled by the fall of Lucifer,
No pride is now in Heaven, humility
Highest of virtues shown by God the Man.
I also, therefore, at thy first behest,
Immortal came to do a mortal's will:
Whose sleep, all starred with dreams, tells oft of me,
And instant on mine own bright ray return.

Clara. Holy and lovely sprite, be thou with God!

Spirit. And fare thou well, too.

Festus. Go! I do commend thee
To all good angels, maiden. They are gone,
The heavenly and the earthly; I alone,
Like a cold column in the sunshine, stand
Projecting darkness. Only love makes live.
Oh! why was woman made so fair? or man
So weak as to see that more than one had beauty?
It is impossible to love but one.
And yet I dare not love thee as I could;
For all that the heart most longs for and deserves,
Passes the soonest and most utterly.
The moral of the world’s great fable, life.
All we enjoy seems given to deceive,
Or may be, undeceive us; who cares which?
And when the sum is done, and we have proved it,
Why work it over and over still again?
I am not what I would be. Hear me, God!
And speak to me in thine invisible likeness
The wind, as once of yore. Let me be pure!
Oh! I wish I was a pure child again,
As ere the clear could trouble me: when life
Was sweet and calm as is a sister’s kiss;
And not the wild and whirlwind touch of passion,
Which, though it hardly light upon the lip,
With breathless swiftness sucks the soul out of sight,
So that we lose it, and all thought of it.
What is this life wherein Thou hast founded me
But a bright wheel which burns itself away,
Benighting even night with its grim limbs,
When it hath done, and fainted into darkness?
Flesh is but fiction, and it flies away;
The gaunt and ghastly thing we bear about us,
And which we hate, and fear to look upon,
Is Truth; in death's dark likeness limned—no more.

Lucifer. Life is the one great truth; the fiction, death.

Art never satisfied, but must thou still
Revel in bootless questings?

Festus. Lo! I speak
To Heaven, and Hell makes bold to answer me.
If I confess me to the stars, the earth
Rumbles her caverned threatenings at my feet;
Or midnight clouds, low muttering in long lines,
Uncomprehended thunders stun mine ear.
Callst thou this power?

Lucifer. Yon pretty little star
Shines on a vasty falsehood. Much thou hast
Of power o'er finite agencies, but none,
I tell thee, o'er the Infinite. Confess
Therefore thine own presumption, and receive
Its measures in obedience. What wouldst thou?

Festus. I sicken of this mean and shadowy nature
And shallow life.
FESTUS.

LUCIFER. Well; death is deep enough.

Festus. I have been told, and taught, and trained to pray.

I pray, and have no answer. One as well
Might wrestle with the wind. I feel, but lack
All power, as a cloud, which fears to rise,
Faints on the golden threshold of the skies;
And men suspect it as a spy of night.

LUCIFER. There's reason now and then in similes.

Souls are like clouds, born of the infinite stock
Of ever formless essence, and their race
In bounteous beauty run, or ruinous storm;
Objects of love and gladness, or of ill,
And wrong, and wrath, as nature predicates;
Which having blessed or blasted in their life,
Die and rejoin the universe, to rise,
Like emanant dew on earth, in future forms
Of retributive nature; she herself
Being, and doing, and enduring all.

Festus. This life is as a question, to the which
There comes no answer save an echo.

LUCIFER. Hark!

Festus. Where thou art all is dumb. I would repent.—

What shall be done to expiate offence?

LUCIFER. To sacrifice a butterfly to the wind
Is all that can be done just now, I fear.
Thou canst not be both wise and innocent;
As well expect thy life flood-tide to rise
Back from the baseless depths of human death.
Evil and good are primarily immixed,
Like the black lines that thwart a ray of light;
Or checkered chart of old, sun-dedicate.
Cheer up! If virtue loses, wisdom wins.

Festus. Good to extract from evil were not hard;
But to transmute all evil into good,
There is the cross of science and the crown.

Lucifer. Set clouds on fire,—go sow the sea with sand,—
Then reap your crop of foam, and harvest it.

Festus. Yet are they separable; Heaven and earth
Not more opposed in kind.

Lucifer. Bat! both are one.

Festus. The time shall come when every evil thing
From being and remembrance both shall die;
The world one solid temple of pure good.

Lucifer. Never while thou art conscious of thyself;
Never till from that shining sheaf of days
Which hangs behind Him, the Destroyer plucks
Earth's death-day, and His wrath burns white for aye.

Festus. Let all the air be lightning, the dark blue
Of ever-stretching space substantial fire,
Still God is good, still tends o'er those He loves.

Lucifer. Why, therefore, comes no answer to thy prayer?

Festus. It may be, silence is the voice of God.

Lucifer. Assent or dissent;—whether of the twain?
Festus. God hath refused me: wilt thou do it for me?
Or shall I end with both? remake myself?
Lucifer. Now, that is the one thing which I cannot do.
Am I not open with thee? why choose that?
Festus. Because I will it. Thou art bound to obey.
Lucifer. The world bears marks of my obedience.
Festus. Off! I am torn to pieces. Let me try
And gather up myself into a man,
As once I was. I have done with thee! Dost hear?
Lucifer. Thou canst not mean this.
Festus. Once for all—I do.
Lucifer. It is men who are deceivers—not the Devil.
The first and worst of all frauds is to cheat
One's self. All sin is easy after that.
Festus. I feel that we must part; part now or never;
And I had rather of the two it were now.
Lucifer. This is my last walk through my favorite world:
And I had hoped to have enjoyed it with thee.
For thee I quitted hell; for thee I warped
And shrivelled up my soul into a man:
For thee I shed my shining wings; for thee
Put on this mask of flesh, this mockery
Of motion, and this seeming shape like thine.
And by my woe, I swear that were I now,
For thy false heart, to give my spirit spring,
I would scatter soul and body both to hell,
And let one burn the other.

Festus. If thou darest!
Lift but a finger of a thought of ill
Against me, and—thou durst not. Mark, we part.

Lucifer. Well; as thou wilt. Remember that thy heart
Will shed its pleasures as thine eye its tears;
And both leave loathsome furrows.

Festus. Thinkest thou
That I will have no pleasures without thee,
Who marrest all thou makest, and even more?

Lucifer. Thou canst not: save indeed some poor trite thing Called moderation, every one can have;
And modesty, God knows, is suffering.

Festus. Now will I prove thee liar for that word;
And that the very vastest out of hell.
With perfect condemnation I abjure
My soul; my nature doth abhor itself;
I have a soul to spare!

Lucifer. A hundred I.
I have him yet: for he is mine to tempt.
Gold hath the hue of hell flames: but for him
I will lay some brilliant and delicious lure
Which shall be worth perdition to a seraph.
Most men glide quietly and deeply down:
Some seek the bottom like a cataract.
Now he shall find it, seek it how he will.
None ever went without once taking breath.
It is passion plunges men into mine arms;
But it matters not; hell burns before them all.
It is by hell-light they do their chiefest deeds;
And by hell-light they shine unto each other;
And hell, through life's thick fog, glares red and round;
And but for hell they would grope in utter dark.

Scene—The Surface.

Lucifer and Festus.

Lucifer. Wilt ride?
Festus. I'll have an hour's ride.
Lucifer. Be mine the steeds! be me the guide!—
Come hither, come hither,
My brave black steed!
And thou, too, his fellow,
Hither with speed!
Though not so fleet
As the steeds of Death,
Your feet are as sure,
Ye have longer breath.
Ye have drawn the world
Without wind or bait,
Six thousand years,
And it waxeth late;
So take me this once,
And again to my home,
And rest ye and feast ye.
They come, they come.

Festus. Tossing their manes like
Pitchy surge; and lashing
Their tails into a
Tempest; their eyes flashing,
Like shooting thunderbolts.

Lucifer. Come, know your masters, colts!
Up, and away!

Festus. Hurrah! hurrah!
The noblest pace the world e'er saw.
I swear by Heaven we'll beat the sun,
In the longest heat that ever was run,
If we keep it up as we have begun.

Lucifer. I told thee my steeds
Were a gallant pair.

Festus. And they were not thine,
They might be divine.

Lucifer. Thine is named Ruin;
And Darkness mine.

Festus. Like all of thy deeds,
Now that's unfair.

Lucifer. A civiler and gentler beast
Thou hast never crossed at least.
Now, look around!
Festus. Why, this is France.

Nature is here like a living romance.
Look at its vines, and streams, and skies,
Its glancing feet, and dancing eyes!

Lucifer. 'Tis a strange nation, light yet strong;
Fierce of heart and blithe of tongue;
Prone to change; so fond of blood,
She wounds herself to quaff her own.

Festus. Oh! it's a brave and lovely land;
And well deserving every good
Which others wish themselves alone,
Could she but herself command.

Lucifer. On! on! no more delay!
Or we'll not ride round
The world all day.

Festus. Good horse, get off the ground!

Lucifer. Sit firm! and if our horses please,
We will take at once the Pyrenees.
'Twas bravely leapt!

Festus. Ay, this is Spain:
Europe's last land
'Twill e'er remain;
Last in the progress of the earth;
The last in liberty;
The last in wealth and worth;
The last in bigotry.

Lucifer. Turn thy steed, and slacken rein;
Quick! we must be back again;
O'er the vale hid in the mountain,
O'er the merry forest fountain;
Ruin and Darkness! we must fly
O'er crag and rift,
Swift — swift — swift
As the glance of an eye.
    Festus. That is Italy — the grave
And resurrection of the slave.
    Lucifer. And there lies Greece, whose soul,
Men say, hath fled:
    Festus. Perhaps some God may come,
And raise the dead.
    Lucifer. Norward now we'll hold our course.
Thine, I think, is the bolder horse;
But bear him up with a harder hand!
Rough riding, this, o'er Swisserland.
    Festus. So all have found it who have tried;
High as their Alps the people's pride,
Never to have bowed before
The tyrant or the conqueror.
    Lucifer. Away, away! before thee lie
The fields and floods of Germany.
    Festus. Well I love thee, Fatherland!
Sire of Europe, as thou art!
Be free! and crouch no more, but stand!
Thy noblest son will take thy part.
Oh! sooner let the mountains bend
Beneath the clouds, when tempests lower,
Than nations stoop their sky-compeering heads
In homage to some petty despot's power!
The worm which suffers mincing into parts,
May sprout forth heads and tails, but grows no hearts.
FESTUS. There lies Austria! Famous land
For fiddlesticks and sword-in-hand.

FESTUS. And Poland, whom truly unhappy we call;
Unworthy to rise—unwilling to fall.
Forge into swords thy feudal chain!
Smite e'en the souls of foes in twain!
The fetters have been bound in vain
Round England's arms: and we are free
As the souls of our sires in Heaven which be.
That earth should have so few
Men, fathers, like to you!

LUCIFER. What matter who be free or slaves?
For all there is one tyranny, the grave's;
Or freedom, may be. On! on! haste!

FESTUS. What land is yonder wide, white waste?

LUCIFER. Ha! 'tis Russia's gentle realm:
Whose sceptre is the sword—whose crown, the helm.

FESTUS. I swear by every atom which exists,
I better love this reckless ride
O'er hill and forest, lake and river wide,
O'er sunlit plain and through the mountain mists,
Than aught which thou hast given beside.

LUCIFER. See what a long, long track
Of dust and fire behind,
For miles and miles aback!
And shrill and strong,
As we shoot along,
Whistles and whirs,
Like a forest of firs
Falling, the cold north wind.

Festus. Look! my way I can only read
By the sparks from the hoof of my giant steed.

Lucifer. Where art thou now?

Festus. In Tartar land;
I know by the deserts of salt and sand.
Nor aim nor end hath a wandering life;
Rest reaps but rest, and strife but strife.
With the nations round
They ne'er have mixed;
For good or for ill
They stand all still;
Their bodies but rove,
Their minds are fixed.
And yonder lies old China's wall,
Where gods of gold do men in thrall;
Gods whose gold's their only worth.

Lucifer. Well, is not gold the god of earth?
Now southward, hey! for Hindostan!
The sun beats down both beast and man.
Insect and herb for life do gasp;
The river reeks, and faints the asp.

Festus. But blithe are we,
And our steeds, I trow;
And the mane of mine
Yet bears the snow
Which fell on us
By Caucasus.
By the four beasts! but this is warm.

Lucifer. Away! away!

Nor stint nor stay;
We'll reach the sea before yon storm.

Festus. Wilt take the sea?

Lucifer. Ay, that will we!

And swim as we ride,
Our steeds astride;

Come leap, leap off with me!

Festus. What? shall we leap

Sheer off this steep,
A mile the sea above?

Lucifer. Leap as to save
From worse than a grave
The maid thou most dost love!

Festus. There is a rapture in the headlong leap,
The wedge-like cleaving of the closing deep!
A feeling full of hardihood and power
With which we court the waters that devour.

Oh! 'tis a feeling great, sublime, supreme,
Like the ecstatic influence of a dream,
To speed one's way thus o'er the sliding plain;
And make a kindred being with the main.

Lucifer. By Chaos! this is gallant sport;
A league at every breath;
Methinks if I ever have to die,
I'll ride this rate to death.
Festus. Away, away upon the whitening tide,
Like lover hasting to embrace his bride,
We hurry faster than the foam we ride.
Dashing aside the waves which round us cling,
With strength like that which lifts an eagle's wing
Where the stars dazzle and the angels sing.

Lucifer. We scatter the spray,
And break through the billows,
As the wind makes way
Through the leaves of willows.

Festus. In vain they urge their armies to the fight:
Their surge-crests crumble 'neath our stroke of might.
We meet and fear not; mount—now rise, now fall—
And dare, with full-nerved arm, the rage of all.
Through anger-swollen wave or sparkling spray,
Nothing it recks; we hold our perilous way
Right onward! till we feel the whirling brain
Ring with the maddening music of the main;
Till the fixed eyeball strives and strains to ken,
Yet loathes to see the shore and haunts of men;
And the blood, half starting through each ridgy vein,
In the unwieldy hand sets black with pain.
Then let the tempest cloud on cloud come spread,
And tear the stormy terrors of his head;
Let the wild sea-bird wheel around my brow,
And shriek—and swoop—and flap her wing as now!
It gladdens! on! ye boisterous billows, roll!
And keep my body; ye have ta'en my soul.
Thou element! the type which God hath given,
For eyes and hearts too earthy, of His Heaven!
Were Heaven a mockery, I would never mourn
While o'er thy bosom I might still be borne;
While yet to me the power and joy were given
To fling my breast on thine, and mingle earth with Heaven.

Lucifer. See yonder! now we quit the main;
For here's the Cape, here's land again,—
And scour we must o'er Afric's plain.

Festus. Away, away! on either hand
Nor town, nor tower,
Nor shade, nor shower—
Nothing but sun and sand.

Lucifer. See, there they are! I knew, right soon,
We would light on the mountains of the moon.
Over them! over, nought forbids!

Festus. Yonder the Nile and the Pyramids?
Hurrah! by my soul!
At every bound
I see, I feel
The earth rush round.
I see the mountains slide away—
That side night, and this side day.

Lucifer. Shall we go to America?
Festus. Why, have we time?
Lucifer. Oh, plenty;
Be there, too, ere we reckon twenty.
Another run, another bound!
And we shall leave this lion ground.

Festus. The sea again! the swift, bright sea!

Lucifer. Hold hard, and follow me.

Well, now we have travelled upon the waves,
Wilt travel a time beneath?
And visit the sea-born in their caves;
And look on the rainbow-tinted wreath
Of weeds, beset with pearls, wherewith
The mermaid binds her long, green hair,
Or rouse the sea-snake from his lair?

Festus. Ay, ay! down let us dive!

Lucifer. Look up! we lack not stars;
And every star thou seest's alive:
A little globe of life—light—love,
Whose every atom is a living being;
Each the other's bosom seeing,
Each enlightening the other.

Festus. Oh! how unlike the world above,
Where each doth mainly, vainly strive
To dim or to outshine his brother!

Lucifer. Come on! come on!

Festus. Are those bright spars.

Or eyes of things which ne'er forgive,
That seem to play on us, and glare
With rage that we so far should dare
To search the hidden deeps,
Where tide, the moon slave, sleeps?
Where the wind breathes not, and the wave
Walks softly, as above a grave;—
Where coral worms, in countless nations,
Build rocks up from the sea's foundations;—
Where the islands strike their roots
Far from the old mainland;
And spring like desert fruits,
Shook off by God's strong hand,
Up from their bed of sand.
Look, listen! there is music in the cave,
Where ocean sleeps, and brightness in the wave
The sea-bird makes its pillow, and the star,
Last born of Heaven, its azure mirror;—far
And wide, the pale, fine, fire of ocean flows,
Softly sublime like lightnings in repose—
Till roused anon, afar its flaming spray it throws.

Lucifer. There! now we stand
On the world's-end land!
Over the hills
Away we go!
Through fire, and snow,
And rivers, whereto
All others are rills.

Festus. Through the lands of silver.
The lands of gold;
Through lands untrodden,
And lands untold.

Lucifer. By strait and bay
We must away;
Through swamp and plain,
And hurricane;

Festus. And that dark cloud of slaves
Which yet may rise;—
Though nought shall blot the bannered stars
From Freedom's skies.
America! half-brother of the world!
With something good and bad of every land;
Greater than thee have lost their seat—
Greater scarce none can stand.
Thy flag now flouts the skies,
The highest under Heaven;
Save the red cross, whereto are given
All victories.

Lucifer. Our horses snort and snuff the sea,
And pant for where we ought to be.

Festus. Well, here we are; and as we flew in,
I said, let Darkness follow Ruin!

Lucifer. 'Twas right. Spur on! Come, Darkness, come!
Think of thy well-strown stall!

Festus. For me, I care not what's to come,
Nor for the fate by which I fall;
But I would that I were Ocean's son,
The solitary brave,
Like yon sea-snake, to climb upon
The crest of the bounding wave.
Oh! happy, if at last I lie
Within some pearled and coral cave;
While overhead the booming surge
And moaning billow shall chant my dirge;
And the storm-blast, as it sweepeth by,
Shall, answering, howl to the mermaid's sigh,
And the night wind's mournful minstrelsy,
Their requiem over my grave.

Lucifer. Through morn and midnight, sunset and high noon,
One hour hath ta'en us;—o'er all land and sea,
O'er opening earthquake and iceberg, have we
Swept in swift safety. 'Twill be over soon.
Behold the common, narrow sea,
Which, like a strong man's arm,
Keeps back two foes whose lips are white,
Whose hearts with rage are warm.

Festus. England! my country, great and free!
Heart of the world, I leap to thee.
How shall my country fight
When her foes rise against her,
But with thine arm, O Sea!
The arm which thou lent'st her?
Where shall my country be buried
When she shall die?
Earth is too scant for her grave:
Where shall she lie?
She hath brethren more than a hundred.
And they all want room;
They may die and may lie where they live—
They shall not mix with her doom.
Where, but within thine arms,
O Sea, O Sea?
Wherein she hath lived and gloried.
Let her rest be!
We will rise and will say to the sea,
Flow over her!
We will cry to the depths of the deep,
Cover her!
The world hath drawn his sword,
And his red shield drips before him:—
But, my country, rise!
Thou canst never die
While a foe hath life to fly;
Rise land, and gore him!

LUCIFER. Now get on land, and hie along
O'er forest, copse, and glade;
We have out a league or two more to go
Before our journey's made;
With speed that flings the sun into the shade

FESTUS. See the gold sunshine patching,
And streaming and streaking across
The gray-green oaks; and catching,
By its soft brown beard, the moss.

LUCIFER. Ah! here we get an open plain:
Here we'll get down.
Away, good steeds! be off again!

FESTUS. We must be near to town.
I am bound to thee forever
By the pleasure of this day;
Henceforth we will never sever,
Come what come may.
Scene — A Village Feast — Evening.

Festus, Lucifer, and others.

Festus. It is getting dark. One has to walk quite close
To see the pretty faces that we meet,
Lucifer. A disagreeable necessity,
Truly.
Festus. We'll rest upon this bridge. I am tired.
Yon tall, slim tree! does it not seem as made
For its place there, a kind of natural maypole?
Beyond, the lighted stalls stored with the good
Things of our childhood's world; and behind them,
The shouting showman and the clashing cymbal;
The open-doored cottages and blazing hearth,—
The little ones running up with naked feet,
And cake in either hand, to their mother's lap,—
Old and young laughing, schoolboys with their play-things,
Clowns cracking jokes, and lasses with sly eyes,
And the smiles settling in their sunflecked cheeks,
Like noon upon the mellow apricot,—
Make up a scene I can for once give in to.
It must please all, the social and the selfish.
Are they not happy?
Lucifer. Why, it matters not.
They seem so: that's enough.
Festus.

But not the same.

Lucifer. Yet truth and falsehood meet in seeming, like
The falling leaf and shadow on the pool’s face.
And these are joys, like beauty, but skin deep.

Festus. Remove all such, and what’s the joy of earth?

It is they create the appetite of life—
Give zest and relish to the lot of millions.
And take the taste for them away—what’s left?
A dry, ungainly skeleton of soul.

Lucifer. Power is aye above the soul, and joy below it. Pleasure men prefer to power.

[Children at Play.

Festus. Play away, good ones! I could romp with you.

To look upon the fair face of a child
Feels like a resurrection of the heart.
Children are vast in blessings; kings and queens
According to the dynasties of Love.
The might and the delight of nations lies
In them, and for them earth is what it is.

Lucifer. Another row of dragon’s teeth! a row
Of grinders, look ye.

An old Man. Pity the poor, blind man!

Festus. Here is substantial pity.

Old Man. Heaven reward you!

Festus. Blind as the blue skies after sunset.
Blind!
And I am tired of looking on what is.
One might as well see beauty nevermore,
As look upon it with an empty eye.
I would this world were over. I am tired.
Nought happens but what happens to one's self;
And all hath happened I have wished, and more.
Our pleasures all pass from us, one by one,
With that relief which sighing gives the heart,
Though each sigh leaves it lower. It is sad
To think how few our pleasures really are;
And for the which we risk eternal good.
There's nothing that can satisfy one's self,
Except one's self. Well, it is very sad.
And by the time we come of age we have felt,
In one degree or other, all that age
Can offer. We have reaped our field ere noon.
The rest is reproduction; sowing — reaping —
Losing again. Toil and gain tire alike.
We cannot live too slowly to be good
And happy, nor too much by line and square.
But youth is burning to forestall its nature,
And will not wait for Time to ferry it
Over the stream, but flings itself into
The flood, and perishes. And yet, why not?
There is no charm in time as time, nor good.
The long days are no happier than the short ones.
'Tis sometime now since I was here. We leave
Our home in youth — no matter to what end; —
Study — or strife — or pleasure, or what not;
And coming back in few short years, we find
All as we left it, outside; the old elms,
The house, grass, gates, and latchet's selfsame click;
But lift that latchet,—all is changed as doom:
The servants have forgotten our step, and more
Than half of those who knew us know us not.
Adversity, prosperity, the grave,
Play a round game with friends. On some the world
Hath shot its evil eye, and they are passed
From honor and remembrance, and a stare
Is all the mention of their names receives;
And people know no more of them than of
The shapes of clouds at midnight, a year back.

Lucifer. Let us move on to where the dancing is;
We soon shall see how happy they all are.
Here is a loving couple quarrelling;
And there another. It is quite distressing.
See yonder. Two men fighting!

Festus. What avail
These vile exceptions to the rule of joy?

Lucifer. Behold the happiness of which thou spakest!
The highest hills are miles below the sky;
And so far is the lightest heart below
True happiness.

Festus. This is a snake-like world,
And always hath its tail within its mouth,
As if it ate itself, and moralled time.
The world is like yon children's merry-go-round;
What men admire are carriages and hobbies,
Which the exalted manikins enjoy.
There is a noisy, ragged crowd below
Of urchins drives it round, who only get.
The excitement for their pains—best gain, perhaps:
For it is not they who labor that grow dizzy.
Nor sick—that’s for the idle, proud above,
Who soon dismount, more weary of enjoying
Than those below of working; and but fair.
It is wretchedness or recklessness alone
Keeps us alive. Were we happy, we should die.
Yet what is death? I like to think on death:
It is but the appearance of an apparition.
One ought to tremble; but oughts stand for nothing.
I hate the thought of wrinkling up to rest;
The toothlike aching ruin of the body,
With the heart all out, and nothing left but edge.
Give me the long, high-bounding feel of life,
Which cries. Let me but leap unto my grave,
And I'll not mind the when nor where. We never
Care less for life than when enjoying it.
Oh! I should love to die. What is to die?
I cannot hold the meaning more than can
An oak’s arms clasp the blast that blows on it.
There is an air-like something which must be
And yet not to be seen, nor to be touched.
I am made up to die; for, having been
Every thing, there is nothing left but nothing
To be again.
FESTUS.

LUCIFER. Hark! here's a ballad-singer.
BALLAD-SINGER. All of my own composing!
Festus. Yes, yes—we know.

Singer. My gypsy maid! my gypsy maid!
I bless and curse the day
I lost the light of life, and caught
The grief which maketh gray.
Would that the light which blinded me
Had saved me on my way!

My night-haired love! so sweet she was;
So fair and blithe was she;
Her smile was brighter than the moon's,
Her eyes the stars might see.

I met her by her lane-spread tent,
Beside a moss-green stone,
And bade her make, not mock, my fate;
My fortune was her own.
Thou art but yet a boy, she said,
And I a woman grown.

I am a man in love, I cried;
My heart was early manned:
She smiled, and only drooped her eyes,
And then let go my hand.
We stood a minute: neither spake
What each must understand.
I told her, so she would be mine
And follow where I went,
She straight should have a bridal bower
Instead of gypsy tent.

Or would she have me wend with her,
The world between should fall;
For her I would fling up faith and friends,
And name, and fame, and all.

Her smile so bright froze while I spake,
And ice was in her eye;
So near, it seemed ere touch her heart
I might have kissed the sky.

I said that if she loved to rule,
Or if she longed to reign,
I would make her Queen of every race
Which tear-like trode the world's sad face,
Or bleed at every vein.

She laid her finger on her lip,
And pointed to the sky;
There is no God to come, she said:
Dost thou not fear to die?

And what is God, I said, to thee?
Thy people worship not.
The good, the happy, and the free,
She said, they need no God.

I looked until I lost mine eyes;
I felt as though I were
In a dark cave, with one weak light—
The light of life—with her;
And that was wasting fast away;
I watched, but would not stir.

Again she took my hand in hers,
And read it o'er and o'er;
Ah! eyes so young, so sweet, I said,
Make as they read love's lore.

She held my hand.—I trembled whilst—
For sorely soon I felt
She made the love-cross she foretold,
And all the woe she dealt.

Unhappy I should be, she said,
And young to death be given:
I told her I believed in her,
Not in the stars of Heaven.

Hush! we breathe Heaven, she said, and bowed;
And the stars speak through me.
Let Heaven, I cried, take care of Heaven!
I only care for thee.
She shrank: I looked, and begged a kiss;
I knew she had one for me;
She would deny me none, she said.
But give me none would she.

My gypsy maid! my gypsy maid!
'Tis three long years like this
Since there I gave and got from thee
That meeting, parting kiss.

I saw the tears start in her eye;
And trickle down her cheek;
Like falling stars across the sky,
Escaping from their Maker's eye:
I saw, but spared to speak.

Go, and forget! she said, and slid
Below her lowly tent;
I will not, cannot;—hear me, girl!
She heard not, and I went.

At eve, by sunset, I was there,
The tent was there no more;
The fire which warmed her flickered still—
The fire she sat before.

I stood by it, till through the dark
I saw not where it lay;
And then, like that, my heart went out
In ashy grief and gray.
My gypsy maid! my gypsy maid!
Oh! let me bless this day;
This day it was I met thee first,
And yet it shall be and is cursed,
For thou hast gone away.

Lucifer. Another, please—not quite so gloomy, friend.

Girl. I wonder if the tale it tells be true.

Singer. I dare say—but you want a merrier.

Every man's life has its apocrypha;
Mine has, at least. I have said more than need be.
It happened, too, when I was very young.
We never meet such gypsies when we are old;
And yet we more complain of youth than age.
Now, make a ring, good people. Let me breathe!

[Sings.

Oh! the wee green neuk, the sly green neuk,
The wee sly neuk for me!
Whare the wheat is wavin' bright and brown,
And the wind is fresh and free.
Whare I weave wild weeds, and out o' reeds
Kerve whistles as I lay;
And a douce low voice is murmurin' by
Through the lee-lang simmer day.
Oh! the wee green neuk, &c.

And whare a' things luik as though they lc'ed
To languish in the sun;
And that if they feed the fire they dree,
    They wadna ae pang were gone.
Whare the lift aboon is still as death,
    And bright as life can be;
While the douce low voice says, Na, na, na!
    But ye mauna luik sae at me.
    Oh! the wee green neuk, &c.

Whare the lang rank bent is saft and cule,
    And freshenin' till the feet;
And the spot is sly, and the spinnie high,
    Whare my luve and I mak seat:
And I tease her till she rins, and then
    I catch her rou'n' the tree;
While the poppies shak' their heids and blush:
    Let 'em blush till they drap, for me!
    Oh! the wee green neuk, &c.

Festus. And all who know such feelings and such scenes
Will, I am sure, reward you. Here—take this.
Others. And this, and this—too!
Singer. Thank ye all, good friends!
Festus. There's much that has no merit but its truth,
And no excuse but nature. Nature does
Never wrong: 'tis society which sins.
Look on the bee upon the wing among flowers;
How brave, how bright his life! Then mark him hived,
Crammed, cringing in his self-built social cell.
Thus is it in the world-hive: most where men
Lie deep in cities as in drifts—death-drifts,
Nosing each other like a flock of sheep;
Not knowing and not caring whence nor whither
They come or go, so that they fool together.

Lucifer. It is quite fair to halve these lives, and say
This side is nature’s, that society’s,
When both are side-views only of one thing.

Farmer. I am glad to see you come among us, sir.

Parson. Why, I have but little comfort in these pastimes;
And any heart, turned Godwards, feels more joy
In one short hour of prayer, than e’er was raised
By all the feasts on earth since their foundation.
But no one will believe us; as if we
Had never known the vain things of the world,
Nor lain and slept in sin’s seducing shade,
Listless, until God woke us; made us feel
We should be up and stirring in the sun;
For every thing had to be done ere night.
What is all this joy and jollity about?
Grant there may be no sin. What good is it?

Farmer. I can’t defend these feasts, sir, and can’t blame.

Parson. Good evening, friends! Why, Festus! I rejoice
We meet again. I have a young friend here,
A student—who hath staid with us of late.
You would be glad, I know, to know each other;
Therefore be known so.

Festus. You are a student, sir.
Student. I profess little; but it is a title
A man may claim perhaps with modesty.

Festus. True. All mankind are students. How to live
And how to die forms the great lesson still.
I know what study is: it is to toil
Hard, through the hours of the sad midnight watch,
At tasks which seem a systematic curse,
And course of bootless penance. Night by night,
To trace one's thought as if on iron leaves;
And sorrowful as though it were the mode
And date of death we wrote on our own tombs:
Wring a slight sleep out of the couch, and see
The selfsame moon which lit us to our rest,
Her place scarce changed perceptibly in Heaven,
Now light us to renewal of our toils.—
This, to the young mind, wild and all in leaf,
Which knowledge grafting, paineth. Fruit soon cometh.
And more than all our troubles pays us powers;
So that we joy to have endured so much:
That not for nothing have we slaved and slain
Ourselves almost. And more; it is to strive
To bring the mind up to one's own esteem:
Who but the generous fail? It is to think,
While thought is standing thick upon the brain:
As dew upon the brow — for thought is brain-sweat —
And gathering quick and dark, like storms in summer,
Until convulsed, condensed, in lightning sport,
It plays upon the heavens of the mind,—
Opens the hemisphered abysses here,
And we become revealers to ourselves.

STUDENT. When night hath set her silver lamp on high,
Then is the time for study; when Heaven's light
Pours itself on the page, like prophecy
On time, unglooming all its mighty meanings;
It is then we feel the sweet strength of the stars,
And magic of the moon.

LUCIFER. It's a bad habit.

STUDENT. And wisdom dwells in secret, and on high,
As do the stars. The sun's diurnal glare
Is for the daily herd; but for the wise,
The cold pure radiance of the night-born light,
Wherewith is inspiration of the truth.
There was a time when I would never go
To rest before the sun rose; and for that,
Through a like length of time as that now gone,
The world shall speak of me six thousand years
hence.

LUCIFER. How know ye that the world won't end to-morrow?

PARSON. I now, an early riser, love to hail
The dreamy struggles of the stars with light,
And the recovering breath of earth, sleep-drowned,
Awakening to the wisdom of the sun,
And life of light within the tent of Heaven;—
To kiss the feet of Morning as she walks
In dewy light along the hills, while they,
All odorous as an angel's fresh-culled crown,
Unveil to her their bounteous loveliness.

Student. I am devote to study. Worthy books
Are not companions—they are solitudes:
We lose ourselves in them, and all our cares.
The further back we search the human mind,—
Mean in the mass, but in the instance great,—
Which starting first with deities and stars
And broods of beings earth-born, Heaven-begot,
And all the bright side of the broad world, now
Doats upon dreams, and dim atomic truths,
Is all for comfort, and no more for glory—
The nobler and more marvellous it shows.
Trifles like these make up the present time;
The Iliad and the Pyramids the past.

Festus. The future will have glory not the less.
I can conceive a time when the world shall be Much better visibly, and when, as far
As social life and its relations tend,
Men, morals, manners shall be lifted up
To a pure height we know not of nor dream;—
When all men's rights and duties shall be clear,
And charitably exercised and borne;
When education, conscience, and good deeds
Shall have just equal sway, and civil claims; —
Great crimes shall be cast out, as were of old
Devils possessing madmen: — Truth shall reign,
Nature shall be rethroned, and man sublimed.

STUDENT. Oh! then may Heaven come down again to earth;
And dwell with her, as once, like to a friend.

LUCIFER. As like each other as a sword and scythe.
Oh! then shall lions mew and lambkins roar.

FESTUS. And having studied — what next?

STUDENT. Much I long
To view the capital city of the world.
The mountains, the great cities, and the sea,
Are each an era in the life of youth.

FESTUS. There to get worldly ways, and thoughts, and schemes;
To learn to detect, distrust, despise mankind —
To ken a false, factitious glare, amid much
That shines with seeming saint-like purity —
To gloss misdeeds — to trifle with great truths —
To pit the brain against the heart, and plead
Wit before wisdom, — these are the world's ways:
It learns us to lose that in crowds which we Must after seek alone — our innocence;
And when the crowd is gone.

STUDENT. Not only that:
There all great things are round one. Interests,
Mighty and mountainous of estimate,
Are daily heaped or scattered 'neath the eye.
Great deeds, great thoughts, great schemes, and crimes,
and all
Which is in purpose, or in practice, great
Of human nature—there are common things.
Men make themselves be deathless as in spite;
As if they waged some lineal feud with time;
As though their fathers were immortal, too,
And immortality an every-day
Accomplishment.

Festus. Fie! fie! 'tis more for this:
Amid gayer people and more wanton ways,
To give a loose to all the lists of youth—
To train your passion flowers high ahead,
And bind them on your brow as others do.
The mornlit revel, and the shameless mate—
The tabled hues of darkness and of blood—
The published bosom, and the crowning smile—
The cup excessive; and if aught there be
More vain than these or wanton—that to have—
Have all but always in intent, effect,
Or fact. Nay, nay, deny it not: I know.
Youth hath a strange and strong desire to try
All feelings on the heart: it is very wrong,
And dangerous, and deadly: strive against it!

Student. It might be some old sage was warning us.

Festus. Youth might be wise. We suffer less from pains
Than pleasures.
Student. I should like to see the world, And gain that knowledge which is—

Festus. Barrener Than ice; possessing and producing nought But means and forms of death or vanity. The world is just as hollow as an eggshell. It is a surface, not a solid, mind: And all this boasted knowledge of the world To me seems but to mean acquaintance with Low things, or evil, or indifferent.

Farmer. Much more is said of knowledge than it's worth. A man may gain all knowledge here, and yet Be, after death, as much in the dark as I.

Lucifer. What makes you know of living after death?

Farmer. Why, nothing that I know; and there it is;— But something I am told has told me so. No angel ever came to me to prove it; And all my friends have died, and left no ghosts.

Festus. All that is good a man may learn from himself; And much, too, that is bad.

Parson. Nay, let me speak! Aught that is good the soul receives of God When He hath made it His; and until then Man cannot know, nor do, nor be, aught good. Oh! there is nought on earth worth being known
But God and our own souls—the God we have
Within our hearts; for it is not the hope,
Nor faith, nor fear, nor notions others have
Of God can serve us, but the sense and soul
We have of Him within us; and, for men,
God loves us men each individually,
And deals with us in order, soul by soul.

Lucifer. But this is not the place for sermons.

Parson. True.
We heard once, Festus, you were travelling:—

Pray, in what parts?

Festus. Among the outer orbs.

Parson. Nay, surely not so far except in thought,

Perchance, or calculation.

Festus. A month back

I was in giant land.

Parson. Ah! fee-faw-fum?—

They did not eat you there?

Festus. Oh! no. They much

Preferred their usual fare.

Parson. What might it be?

Not Englishmen and hasty pudding, eh?

Festus. They are no more cannibals than you or I;

But are of various tastes, and patronize,

I know, rich diet.

Parson. It's excusable.

And they are great consumers, I dare say.

Festus. A wheat-stack of our friend's here would but make

One loaf of bread for them. Oak trees they use
As pickles, and tall pines as toothpicks; whales,
In their own blubber fried, serve as mere fish
To bait their appetites. Boiled elephants,
Rhinoceroses, and roasted crocodiles—
Every thing dished up whole—with lions stewed,
Shark sauce, and eagle pie, and young giraffes
Make up a potluck dinner,—if there's plenty.
Then as for game, the pterodactyles
And ichthyosauri are great dainties there,
Coming in season only once an age.
They reckon there by ages, not by years.

STUDENT. And as to beverage?

FESTUS. Oh! if thirsty, they
Will lay them down and drink a river dry,
Nor once draw breath.

PARSON. Ah! camel, gnat, and all.

FESTUS. Others are more abstemious, and consume
Egg-broth and simples chiefly. There was one
Who, when I saw him first, sat by a fire;
An egg, an hour glass, and a water bowl
Being before him. All he said was this:—

When the sand is run
The egg is done.

This he first boiled, then roasted, and then ate.

STUDENT. What sort of one? Perhaps an ostrich egg?

FESTUS. Much larger. Here is nothing of the kind.
The yolk was like the sun seen in a fog;
The white was thin and clouded, and the shell
Heavy and hard, as is our earth-pie crust.

Lucifer. What kind of bird it was that laid it—guess!—

Parson. Continue. You have travelled in the dark;
But wisdom sometimes inns with ignorance.
What of their persons, habits, language, creed?

Festus. They live seven thousand years of years like ours,
And then die suddenly; when death takes place,
They burn the bodies always in a lake,
The spray whereof is ashes, and its depths
Unfathomable fire, and never mourn.
In form and stature they are mountain-sized;
Could walk through woods like ours as through long grass;
Use little verbal language, but express
All thought by action and oracular use
Of eye or hand. Their chief religion seems Self-punishment by sin and rites of fire.
'Twould do the godless good to visit once
One of this awful race whom once I saw;
And who—were time and place more fitting—

Student. Nay,
We are apart from others. Nothing save
Yon heavenly ark which floats among the stars,
Now resting on an Ararat of clouds,
Hath leave to overlook us.
Parson. Pray proceed.

Festus. Once I had travelled through a weary world
Than all in Heaven more barren and forlorn,
Dark as the wild heart of a thunder-cloud,
Strewn with the wrecks and ashes of all orbs
Fire-stranded, rolling in quick agony;
Peopled with burning ghosts, dislimbed and charred;
And in the midst a giant, by a fire
Kindled of burning passions, and full fed
With sins long seasoned, at whose feet there stood
A crystal cistern brimmed with human tears,
Which sprinkled, but inflamed the fire withal;—
The giant all while watching with stern mien,
And ruthless interest the whole. Dread sir!
Said I, as I drew near, what angers thee?
He answered not, but pointed; and I saw
Full in the midst of that infernal fire,
Blazing aghast in solar solitude,
A panting shadow, which, with skeleton eyes
And woe-gouged countenance, whereon was hung
A white eclipse like darkness pale with pain,
Watched for the disappearance of the Heavens
With a despairing hope; entranced it lay
In all its horrid perspicuity
And glassy ghastliness immortalized.
Anon it turned round restlessly, and cried,
Woe, woe is me! Eternal Spirit God!
Thy wrath is heaviest when endurable.
Put forth Thy strength and sweep the universe,
With me, into the night of nothingness,
That sin and soul may perish. Woe is me!
Still shine the blessed Heavens, and still, like fire
Congealed, my woe perpetuates itself.
Whereat the giant laughed, rejoicing in
His ministry of woe, and blew his hell
Still fiercer—till it bellowed, and the orb
Beneath my foot sole seared, and I took leave;
For there was somewhat in the giant's air,
And his huge balefire and the naked plain—
Bald as the crown of Time—which caused me dread.

Parson. Dreams you have dreamed till you believe in them;
But such as these are awesome. Not the less
View them vouchsafed as warnings. Oft the mind,
Freed by angelic sleep from bodily bonds,
Knows scenes and themes like these you have named,
which tend
To edifying much. Such travel is Like mine, the travail simply of the brain.

Festus. It is pure reality.

Parson. Well, say no more.
We may pursue the sense of things too far.
The golden side of Heaven's great shield is faith,
The silver, reason. I see this, you that;
The junction is invisible to both.

Student. One thing is sometimes said, another meant.
Lucifer. What are your politics?
Farmer. I have none.
Lucifer. Good.
Farmer. I have my thoughts. I am no party man.
I care for measures more than men, but think
Some little may depend upon the men;
Something in fires depends upon the grate.
First Boy. What are your colors?
Second. Blue as Heaven.
Third. And mine
Are yellow as the sun.
First. Mine, green as grass.
Second. Green's forsaken, and yellow's forsworn,
And blue's the color that shall be worn.
Student. As to religion, politics, law, and war,
But little need be said. All are required,
And all are well enough. Of liberty,
And slavery, and tyranny we hear
Much; but the human mind affects extremes.
The heart is in the middle of the system;
And all affections gather round the truth,
The moderated joys and woes of life.
I love my God, my country, kind and kin,
Nor would I see a dog wronged of his bone.
My country! if a wretch should e'er arise,
Out of thy countless sons, who would curtail
Thy freedom, dim thy glory,—while he lives
May all earth's peoples curse him—for of all
Festus.

Hast thou secured the blessing;—and if one Exist who would not arm for liberty, Be he too cursed living, and when dead. Let him be buried downwards, with his face Looking to hell, and o'er his coward grave The hare skulk in her form.

Lucifer. Nay, gently, friend. Curse nothing, not the Devil. He's beside you— For aught you know.

Student. I neither know nor care.

[Festus. Kings, queens, knaves, tens, would trick the world away, And it were not, now and then, for some brave acc.

Student. You see yon wretched, starved old man; his brow Grooved out with wrinkles like the brown dry sand The tide of life is leaving?

Lucifer. Yes, I see him.

Student. Last week he thought he was about to die: So he bade gold be strewn beneath his pillow, Gold on a chest that he might lie and see, And gold put in a basin on his bed, That he might dabble with his fingers in. He's going now to grope for pence or pins. He never gave a pin's worth in his life. What would you do to him?

Lucifer. I would have him wrought
Into a living wire, which, beaten out,
Might make a golden network for the world;
Then melt him inch by inch, and hell by hell,
Where is the law of wrath.

Student. Oh, charity!
It is a thought the Devil might be proud of—
Once and away. Misers and spendthrifts may
Torment each other in the world to come.

Lucifer. And thus do men apportion their own lot;
A grain of comfort and a sack of sin.

Festus. Men look on death as lightning, always far Off, or in Heaven. They know not it is in Themselves, a strong and inward tendency,
The soul of every atom, every hair*
That nature's infinite electric life,
Escaping from each isolated frame,
Up out of earth, or down from Heaven, becomes
To each its proper death, and adds itself
Thus to the great reunion of the whole.
There is a man in mourning! What does he here?

Student. He has just buried the only friend he had,
And now comes hither to enjoy himself.

Festus. Why will we dedicate the dead to God,
And not ourselves, the living? Oft we speak,
With tears of joy and trust, of some dear friend
As surely up in Heaven; while that same soul,
For aught we know, may be shuddering even in hell
To hear his name named; or there may be no
Soul in the case—and the fat icy worm,
Give him a tongue, can tell us all about him.

Student. Here is music. Stay. That simple melody
Comes on the heart like infant innocence—
Pure feeling pure; while yet the new-bodied soul
Is swinging to the motion of the Heavens,
And scarce hath caught, as yet, earth's backening course.

Festus. The heart is formed as earth was—its first age
Formless and void, and fit but for itself;
Then feelings half alive, just organized,
Come next,—then creeping sports and purposes,—
Then animal desires, delights, and loves—
For love is the first and granite-like effect
Of things—the longest and the highest: next
The wild and winged desires, youth's saurian schemes,
Which creep and fly by turns; which kill and eat,
And do disgorge each other: comes at length
The mould of perfect, matchless manhood—then
Woman divides the heart, and multiplies it.
The insipidity of innocence
Palls: it is guilty, happy, and undone.
A death is laid upon it, and it goes—
Quits its green Eden for the sandy world,
Where it works out its nature, as it may,
In sweat, smiles, blood, tears, cursings, and what not.
And giant sins possess it; and it worships
Works of the hand, head, heart — its own or others —
A creature worship, which excludeth God's:
The less thrusts out the greater. Warning comes,
But the heart fears not — feels not; till at last
Down comes the flood from Heaven; and that heart,
Broken inwards, earthlike, to its central hell:
Or like the bright and burning eye we see
Inly, when pressed hard backwards on the brain,
Ends and begins again — destroyed, is saved.
Every man is the first man to himself,
And Eves are just as plentiful as apples;
Nor do we fall, nor are we saved, by proxy.
The Eden we live in is our own heart;
And the first thing we do, of our free choice,
Is sure and necessary to be sin.

Lucifer. The only right men have is to be damned.
What is the good of music, or the beauty?
Music tells no truths.

Festus. Oh! there is nought so sweet
As lying and listening music from the hands,
And singing from the lips, of one we love —
Lips that all others should be tuned to. Then
The world would all be love and song; Heaven's harps
And orbs join in; the whole be harmony —
Distinct, yet blended — blending all in one
Long and delicious tremble like a chord.
But to Thee, God! all being is a harp,
Whereon Thou makest mightiest melody.
Hast ever been in love?
FESTUS. I never was.

FESTUS. Spite of morality or mystery,
It is love which mostly destinates our life.
What makes the world in after life I know not,
For our horizon alters as we age:
Power only can make up for the lack of love—
Power of some sort. The mind at one time grows
So fast, it fails; and then its stretch is more
Than its strength; but, as it opes, love fills it up,
Like to the stamen in the flower of life,
Till for the time we well nigh grow all love;
And soon we feel the want of one kind heart
To love what's well, and to forgive what's ill,
In us,—that heart we play for at all risks.

STUDENT. How can the heart, which lies embodied deep
In blood and bone, set like a ruby eye
Into the breast, be made a toy for beauty,
And, vane-like, blown about by every wanton sigh?
How can the soul, the rich, star-travelled stranger,
Who here sojourneth only for a purchase,
Risk all the riches of his years of toil,
And his God-vouched inheritance of Heaven,
For one light momentary taste of love?

FESTUS. It is so; and when once you know the sport—
The crowded pack of passions in full cry—
The sweet deceits, the tempting obstacles—
The smile, the sigh, the tear, and the embrace—
All the delights of love at last in one,
With kisses close as stars in the milky way,
In at the death you cry, though 'twere your own

Student. Upon my soul, most sound morality!
Nothing is thought of virtue, then, nor judgment?

Festus. Oh! every thing is thought of—but not then.
And—judgment—no! it is nowhere in the field.

Student. Slow-paced and late arriving, still it comes.
I cannot understand this love; I hear
Of its idolatry, not its respect.

Festus. Respect is what we owe; love what we give.
And men would mostly rather give than pay.
Morality's the right rule for the world.
Nor could society cohere without

Virtue: and there are those whose spirits walk
Abreast of angels and the future, here.
Respect and love thou such.

Lucifer. Of course you wish
Women to love you rather than love them.
It is better. Now, you say you are a student.
All things take study; what more than the face—
Whether your own, or hers you look and long at?
There are many ways to one end: here is one:—
You are good looking; but that matters little:
It only pleases them. To please yourself,
Your face may be as ugly as the ——. Well, well;
But you must cultivate yourself: it will pay you.
Study a dimple; work hard at a smile:
The things most delicate require most pains.
Practise the upward — now the sidelong glance —
Now the long passionful unwinking gaze,
Which beats itself at last, and sees air only.
Be restless, and distress yourself for her.
Take up her hand — press it, and pore on it —
Let it drop — snatch it again as though you had
Let slip so much of honor or of Heaven.
Swear — vow by all means — never miss an oath:
If broken, why it only spoils itself:
It is a broken oath, and not a whole one.
Frown — toss about — let her lips be for a time;
But steal a kiss at last like fire from Heaven.
Weep if you can, and call the tears heat-drops.
Droop your head — sigh deep — play the fool, in short.
One hour, and she will play the fool forever.
Mind! it is folly to tell women truth;
They would rather live on lies, so they be sweet.
Never be long in one mind to one love.
You change your practice with your subject. All
Differ. But yet, who knows one woman well
By heart, knows all. It is my experience;
And I advise on good authority.
So thank me for my lecture on delusion.

Festus. Time laughs at love. It is a hateful sight,
That bald old gray-beard jeering the boy, Love.
But as to women: that game has two sides.
Passion is from affection; and there is nought
So maddening and so lowering as to have
The worse in passion. Think, when one by one,
Pride, love, and jealousy, and fifty more
Great feelings column up to force a heart.
And all are beaten back—all fail—all fall:
The tower intact; but risk it: we must learn.
To know the world, be wise and be a fool.
The heart will have its swing—the world its way:
Who seeks to stop them, only throws himself down.
We must take as we find: go as they go,
Or stand aside. Let the world have the wall.
How do you think, pray, to get through the world?

Student. I mean not to get through the world at all,
But over it.

Festus. Aspiring! You will find
The world is all uphill when we would do;
All downhill when we suffer. Nay, it will part
Like the Red Sea, so that the poor may pass.
We make our compliments to wretchedness,
And hope the poor want nothing, and are well.
But I mean, what profession will you choose?
Surely you will do something for a name.

Student. Names are of much more consequence than things.

Festus. Well; here’s our honest, all-exhorting friend,
The parson—here the doctor. I am sure
The devil might act as moderator there,
And do mankind some service.

Lucifer. In his way.

Student. But I care neither for men's souls nor bodies.

Festus. What say you to the law? Are you ambitious?

Student. Nor do I mind for other people's business.

I have no heart for their predicaments:
I am for myself. I measure every thing
By, what is it to me? from which I find
I have but little in common with the mass,
Except my meals and so forth; dress and sleep.
I have that within me I can live upon:
Spider-like, spin my place out anywhere.

Festus. To none of all the arts and sciences,—
Astronomy nor entomology,
Nor gunnery, for instance, then, you feel
Attracted heartily and mentally?

Student. Why, no; there are so many rise and fall,

One knows not which to choose. As for the stars,
I never look on them without dismay.
Earth has outrun them in our modern mind,
By worlds of odds. Enough for us, it seems,
And our cold calculators, to jot down
Their revolutions, distances, and squares;—
And the bright laws which stars and spirits rule
Are all laid out and buried grave on grave.
The fourfold worlds and elemental spheres,
Which in concentric circles, like the ring
That the magician stands in, from on high
Give spiritual calling to our earth,
And lord it over her, yet in such wise,
That still by them we may conjoin our souls
Unto the starry spirits of all worlds;
Beyond the changeful mansions of the moon,
Beyond the burning heart of Heaven, where dwell
The governors of nature and the blest,
All knowing spirits and celestial,
And divine demons; are all gone—extinct.
There is no danger now of knowing aught
Which ought not to be known. No more of that!--
And you, ye planetary sons of light!
From him who hovereth, mothlike, round the sun
To six-mooned Ouranus, light's loftiest round,—
Your aspects, dignities, ascendancies,
Your partile quartiles, and your plastic trines,
And all your heavenly houses and effects,
Shall meet no more devout expounders here.
You too, ye juried signs, earth's sunny path
Upon her wheeling orbit, all farewell!
Your exaltations and triplicities,
Fiery, airy, and the rest; your falls,
And detriments, and governments, and gifts,
Are all abolished. Henceforth ye shall shine
In vain to man. Diurnal, cardinal,
Nocturnal, equinoctial, hot or dry,
Earthy, or moist, or feminine, or fixed,
Luxurious, violent, bicorporate,
Masculine, barren, and commanding, cold,
Fruitful or watery, or what not, now
It matters nothing. The joy of Jupiter,
The exaltation of the Dragon’s head,
The sun’s triplicity and glorious
Day-house on high, the moon’s dim detriment,
And all the starry inclusions of all signs—
Shall rise, and rule, and pass, and no one know
That there are spirit-rulers of all worlds,
Which fraternize with earth, and, though unknown,
Hold in the shining voices of the stars
Communion high, ever and every where.—
The mystic charm of numbers, and the sole
Oneness which is in all, of nature’s great
Triadic principle, in all things seen;
In man thus, as composed of thrice three forms
Intrinsic; first, corporeally, blood,
Body, and bones; next, intellectively,
Imagination, judgment, memory;
And thirdly, spiritually, mind and soul,
And spirit, which unites with God the whole
Being, and comes from and returns to Him,—
Allures no more man’s mind debased. Thus, too,
Of alchemy; the golden, starry stone,
Invisible, the principle of life,
The quintessence of all the elements,
Is still unbought;—still flows the stream of pearl
Beneath the magic mountain; still the scent
As of a thousand amaranthine wreaths, which lure:
All life unto its sweetness, floats around
Mistlike, the shining bath where Luna laves,
Or Sol, bright brother of that moonéd maid,
Triumphs in light; the spiritual sun,
The heavenly Earth smaragdine, and the fire-
Spirit of life, the live land, still exist,
Immortally, internally, unseen.—
Still breathes the Paradisal air around
The universal whole; the watery fire,
Destructive, yet impalpable to sense;
The initial and conclusion of the world,
Yea, the beginning and the end of death;
The secret which is shared 'tween God and man,
And which is nature only, wholly, still
In heavenly gloom incomprehensible
Wait the Deific will; yea, still the light,
Where to all elements contribute, burns
About us and within us, world and soul.
The primal sperm and matter of the world,
Whose centre is the limit of all things,—
The snowy gold, the star and spirit seed
Which is to render rich and deathless all;
The self-begot, self-wedded, and self-born,
Which the wind carries in its womb, all have,
And few receive; the spirit of the earth,
The water of immortal life still lives:—
The universal solvent of disease
Still bounds through nature's veins; and still, in fine,
The secrets only to be told by fire
Starry or beamless, central and extreme,
Burn to be born. And other natures may Use them, and do. In Demogorgon's hall
Still sits the universal mystery
Throned in itself and ministered unto
By its own members:—Man, alas! alone
The recreant spirit of the universe,
Loves surface knowledge; calls the crimes of crowds
Virtue; adores the useful vices; licks
The gory dust from off the feet of war,
And swears it food for gods, though fit for fiends
Only;—reversing just the Devil's state
When first he entered on this orb of man's—
A fallen angel's form, a reptile's soul.

Lucifer. Oh! this is libellous to man, and fiend,
And brute together.

Student. All are art and part
Of the same mystic treason. But enough;—
The most material, immaterial
Departments of pure wisdom are despised.
For well we know that, properly prepared,
Souls self-adapted knowledge to receive
Are by the truth desired, illumined; man's
Spirit, extolled, dilated, clarified,
By holy meditation and divine
Lore, fits him to convene with purer powers
Which do unseen surround us aye, and gladden
In human good and exaltation; thus
The face of Heaven is not more clear to one
Than to another outwardly; but one
By strong intention of his soul perceives,
Attracts, unites himself to essences
And elemental spirits of wider range
And more beneficent nature, by whose aid
Occasion, circumstance, futurity,
Impress on him their image, and impart
Their secrets to his soul; thus chance and lot
Are sacred things; thus dreams are verities.
The soul, which like the mountain lakelet lifts
Its gaze to Heaven alone, will learn, ere long,
To read the cloudy forms of future days
Which glass them in its vision, or perceive,
Clear through the crystal egg of time, the play
Of spirits and forecomingness of things.
The mysteries of numbers and of names
Are nothing known of now; yet wot we well
That natural perfection, multiplied
By spiritual, gives the names of God
As known to men and angels, and that Fate
Rules really and nominally all.
But Oh! alas for all earth's loftier lore,
And spiritual sympathy of worlds!—
There shall be no more magic nor cabala,
Nor Rosicrucian nor Alchymic lore,
Nor fairy fantasies; no more hobgoblins,
Nor ghosts, nor imps, nor demons. Conjurors, Enchanters, witches, wizards, shall all die Hopeless and heirless; their divining arts Supernal or infernal—dead with them. And so 'twill doubtless be with other things In time; therefore I will commit my brain To none of them.

Festus. Perchance 'twere wiser not. Man's heart hath not half uttered itself yet, And much remains to do as well as say. The heart is sometime ere it finds its focus; And when it does, with the whole light of nature Strained through it to a hair's breadth, it but burns The things beneath it, which it lights to death. Well, farewell, Mr. Student. May you never Regret those hours which make the mind, if they Unmake the body; for the sooner we Are fit to be all mind, the better. Blest Is he whose heart is the home of the great dead, And their great thoughts. Who can mistake great thoughts? They seize upon the mind—arrest and search, And shake it—bow the tall soul as by wind— Rush over it like rivers over reeds, Which quaver in the current—turn us cold, And pale, and voiceless; leaving in the brain A rocking and a ringing,—glorious, But momentary, madness might it last, And close the soul with Heaven as with a seal!
In lieu of all these things whose loss thou mournest,
If earnestly or not I know not, use
The great, and good, and true, which ever live,
And are all common to pure eyes and true.
Upon the summit of each mountain-thought
Worship thou God—with Heaven uplifted head
And arms horizon-stretched—for Deity is seen
From every elevation of the soul.
Study the Light; attempt the high; seek out
The soul's bright path; and since the soul is fire
Of heat intelligential, turn it aye
To the all-Fatherly source of light and life;
Piety purifies the soul to see
Perpetual apparitions of all grace
And power, which to the sight of those who dwell
In ignorant sin are never known. Obey
Thy genius, for a minister it is
Unto the throne of Fate. Draw to thy soul,
And centralize, the rays which are around
Of the Divinity. Keep thy spirit pure
From worldly taint by the repellant strength
Of virtue. Think on noble thoughts and deeds
Ever. Count o'er the rosary of truth;
And practise precepts which are proven wise.
It matters not then what thou fearest. Walk
Boldly and wisely in that light thou hast;—
There is a hand above will help thee on.
I am an omnist, and believe in all
Religions,—fragments of one golden world
Yet to be relit in its place in Heaven—
For all are relatively true and false,
As evidence and earnest of the heart
To those who practise, or have faith in them.
The absolutely true religion is
In Heaven only, yea in Deity.
But foremost of all studies, let me not
Forget to bid thee learn Christ's faith by heart.
Study its truths, and practise its behests:
They are the purest, sweetest, peacefulest
Of all immortal reasons or records:
They will be with thee when all else have gone.
Mind, body, passion, all wear out—not faith,
Nor truth. Keep thy heart cool, or rule its heat
To fixed ends: waste it not upon itself.
Not all the agony of all the damned,
Fused in one pang, vies with that earthquake throb
Which wakens it from waste to let us see
The world rolled by for aye; and that we must Wait an eternity for our next chance,
Whether it be in Heaven or elsewhere.

Student. Sir,
I will remember this most grave advice,
And think of you with all respect.

Festus. Well, mind!
The worst men often give the best advice.
Our deeds are sometimes better than our thoughts.
Commend me, friend, to every one you meet;
I am a universal favorite.
Old men admire me deeply for my beauty,
Young women for my genius and strict virtue,
And young men for my modesty and wisdom.
All turn to me, whenever I speak, full-faced,
As planets to the sun, or owls to a rushlight.
Farewell!

STUDENT. I hope to meet again.

FESTUS. And I.—

Yonder's a woman singing. Let us hear her.

SINGER. In the gray church tower
   Were the clear bells ringing,
When a maiden sat in her lonely bower
   Sadly and lowly singing;
And thus she sang, that maiden fair,
Of the soft blue eyes and the long light hair:—

This hand hath oft been held by one
   Who now is far away;
And here I sit and sigh alone
   Through all the weary day.
Oh, when will he I love return!
Oh, when shall I forget to mourn!

Along the dark and dizzy path
   Ambition madly runs,
'Tis there they say his course he hath,
   And therefore love he shuns.
Oh, fame and honor bind his brow,
For so he would be with me now!
In the gray church tower
    Were the clear bells ringing;
When a bounding step in that lonely bower
    Broke on the maiden singing;
She turned, she saw; Oh, happy fair!
For her love who loved her so well was there!

LUCIFER. And we might trust these youths and maidens fair,
The world was made for nothing but love, love! Now I think it was made but to be burnt.
    Festus. And if I love not now, while woman is All bosom to the young, when shall I love?
Who ever paused on passion's fiery wheel?
Or trembling by the side of her he loved,
Whose lightest touch brings all but madness, ever Stopped coldly short to reckon up his pulse?
The car comes—and we lie—and let it come;
It crushes—kills—what then? It is joy to die. Enough shall not fool me. I fling the foil Away. Let me but look on aught which casts The shadow of a pleasure, and here I bare A breast which would embrace a bride of fire. Pleasure—we part not! No. It were easier To wring God's lightnings from the grasp of God. I must be mad: but so is all the world. Folly! It matters not. I am all things to myself. If my heart thundered, would the world rock? Well—Then let the mad world fight its shadow down:
There soon will be nor sun, nor world, nor shadow
And thou, my blood, my bright red running soul —
Rejoice thou, like a river, in thy rapids!
Rejoice — thou wilt never pale with age, nor thin;
But in thy full, dark beauty, vein by vein,
Fold by fold, serpent-like, encircling me
Like a stag, sunstruck, top thy bounds and die.
Throb, bubble, sparkle, laugh, and leap along!
Make merry while the holidays shall last.
Heart! I could tear thee out, thou fool! thou fool!
And strip thee into shreds upon the wind:
What have I done that thou shouldst serve me thus?
Lucifer. Let us away. We have had enough of this.
Festus. The night is glooming on us. It is the hour
When lovers will speak lowly, for the sake
Of being nigh each other; and when love
Shoots up the eye like morning on the east,
Making amends for the long northern night
They passed ere either knew the other loved.
It is the hour of hearts, when all hearts feel
As they could love to mad death, finding aught
To give back fire; for love, like nature, is War — sweet war! Arms! To arms! so they be thine,
Woman! Old people may say what they please —
The heart of age is like an emptied wine-cup;
Its life lies in a heel-tap — how can they judge?
'Twere a waste of time to ask how they wasted theirs.
But while the blood is bright, breath sweet, skin smooth,
And limbs all made to minister delight—
Ere yet we have shed our locks like trees their leaves,
And we stand staring bare into the air—
He is a fool who is not for love and beauty.
I speak unto the young, for I am of them,
And alway shall be. What are years to me?
Traitors! that vice-like fang the hand ye lick:
Ye fall like small birds beaten by a storm
Against a dead wall, dead. I pity ye.
Oh! that such mean things should raise hope or fear;
Those Titans of the heart, that fight at Heaven
And sleep by fits on fire; whose slightest stir's
An earthquake. I am bound and blest to youth!
Oh! give me to the young—the fair—the free—
The brave, who would breast a rushing, burning world
Which came between them and their hearts' delight.
None but the brave and beautiful can love.
Oh, for the young heart like a fountain playing!
Flinging its bright, fresh feelings up to the skies
It loves and strives to reach—strives, loves in vain
It is of earth, and never meant for Heaven.
Let us love both, and die. The sphinx-like heart,
Consistent in its inconsistency,
Loathes life the moment that life's riddle is read:
The knot of our existence is untied,
And we lie loose and useless. Life is had;
And then we sigh, and say, Can this be all?
It is not what we thought—it is very well—
But we want something more—there is but death.
And when we have said, and seen, and done, and had,
Enjoyed, and suffered, all we have wished and feared—
From fame to ruin, and from love to loathing—
There can come but one more change—try it—death.
Oh! it is great to feel we care for nothing—
That hope, nor love, nor fear, nor aught of earth
Can check the royal lavishment of life;
But like a streamer strewn upon the wind,
We fling our souls to fate and to the future.
And to die young is youth's divinest gift,—
To pass from one world fresh into another,
Ere change hath lost the charm of soft regret,
And feel the immortal impulse from within
Which makes the coming, life—cry alway, On!
And follow it while strong—is Heaven's last mercy.
There is a firefly in the southern clime
Which shineth only when upon the wing;
So is it with the mind: when once we rest,
We darken. On! said God unto the soul
As to the earth, forever. On it goes,
A rejoicing native of the infinite—
As is a bird of air—an orb of Heaven.
Scene — The Centre

Festus and Lucifer.

Lucifer. Behold us in the fire-crypts of the world! Through seas and buried mountains, tomblike tracts, Fit to receive the skeleton of Death When he is dead — through earthquakes, and the bones Of earth-swallowed cities, have we wormed Down to the ever-burning forge of fire, Whereon in awful and omnipotent ease Nature, the delegate of God, brings forth Her everlasting elements, and breathes Around that fluent heat of life which clothes Itself in lightnings, wandering through the air, And pierces to the last and loftiest pore Of Earth's snow-mantled mountains. In these vaults Are hid the archives of the universe; And here, the ashes of all ages gone, Each finally inurned. These pillars stand, Earth's testimony to eternity.

Festus. All that is solid now was fluid once; Water, or air, or fire, or some one Permanent, permeating element; As in this focal, world-evolving fire Like what I see around — the vacuous power Whereon the world is based, e'en as wherein It rolls, I must believe.
Lucifer. The original
Of all things is one thing. Creation is
One whole. The differences a mortal sees
Are diverse only to the finite mind.

Festus. This marbled-walled immensity o'erroofed
With pendent mountains glittering, awes my soul.
God's hand hath scooped the hollow of this world;
Yea, none but His could; and I stand in it,
Like a forgotten atom of the light
Some star hath lost upon its lightning flight.

Lucifer. Here mayst thou lay thy hand on nature's heart,
And feel its thousand yearèd throbings cease.
High overhead, and deep beneath our feet,
The sea's broad thunder booms, scarce heard; around,
The arches, like uplifted continents
Of starry matter, burning inwardly,
Stand; and, hard by, earth's gleaming axle sleeps,
All moving, all unmoved.

Festus. Age here on age
Lie heaped like withered leaves. And must it end?

Lucifer. God worketh slowly; and a thousand years
He takes to lift His hand off. Layer on layer
He made earth, fashioned it, and hardened it
Into the great, bright, useful thing it is;
Its seas, life-crowded, and soul-hallowed lands
He girdled with the girdle of the sun,
That sets its bosom glowing like Love's own
Breathless embrace, close-clinging as for life;—
Veined it with gold, and dusted it with gems,
Lined it with fire, and round its heart-fire bowed
Rock-ribs unbreakable; until at last
Earth took her shining station as a star
In Heaven's dark hall, high up the crowd of worlds.
All this and thus did God; and yet it ends.
The ball He rolled and rounded melts away
E'en now to its constituent atomies.

Festus. It is enough. Though here were posited
All secrets of existence, natural
Or supernatural, dwell not here would I,
Though 'twere to drain profoundest fountains. No!
I love it not, the science nor the scene.
I long to know again the fresh, green earth,
The breathing breeze, the sea and sacred stars.
These recollections crowd upon my soul,
As constellations on the evening skies,
And will not be forgotten. Let us leave!

Lucifer. Aught that reminds the exile of his home
Is surely pleasant. I, friend, am content.

Festus. I cannot be content with less than Heaven.
O Heaven, I love thee ever! sole and whole,
Living and comprehensive of all life;
Thee, agy world, thee, universal Heaven,
And heavenly universe! thee, sacred seat
Of intellective Time, the throned stars
And old oracular night;—by night or day,
To me thou canst not but be beautiful,
Boundless, all-central, universal sphere!
Whether the sun all-light thee, or the moon,
Embayed in clouds, mid starry islands round,
With mighty beauty inundate the air;—
Or when one star, like a great drop of light,
From her full flowing urn hangs tremulous,—
Yea, like a tear from her the eye of night,
Let fall o'er nature's volume as she reads;—
Or, when in radiant thousands, each star reigns
In imparticpable royalty,
Leaderless, uncontrasted with the light
Wherein their light is lost, the sons of fire,
Arch element of the Heavens;—when storm and cloud
Debar the mortal vision of the eye
From wandering o'er thy threshold,—more and more
I love thee, thinking on the splendid calm
Which bounds the deadly fever of these days—
The higher, holier, spiritual Heaven.
And when this world, within whose heartstrings now
I feel myself encoiled, shall be resolved,
Thee I shall be permitted still, perchance,
To love and live in endlessly.

Lucifer. All here
Thou seest hath holden fellowship with gods;
With eldest Time and primal matter, space,
And stars, and air, and all-inherent fire,
The watery deep and chaos, night, the all,
And the interior immortality,
And first-begotten Love. These rocks retain
FESTUS.

Their caverned footsteps printed in pure fire.
Those were the times, the ancient youth of earth,
The elemental years, when Earth and Heaven
Made one in holy bridals,—royal gods
Their bright, immortal issue: when men's minds
Were vast as continents, and not as now
Minute and indistinguishable plots,
With here and there acres of untilled brains; when lived
The great original, broad-eyed, sunken race,
Whose wisdom, like these sea-sustaining rocks,
Hath formed the base of the world's fluctuous lore;—
When, too, by mountainous travail, human might
Sought to possess the everlasting Heavens,
And incommunicable, by the right
Of self-acquirement and high kindred with Celestial virtues;—when the mortal powers—
Forecounsel, wisdom, and experience,
Teachers of all arts, founders of all good,
With Godhood strove, and gloriously failed—
In failure half successful; as these scenes,
Fire-fountains, and volcano-utterances,
Earth-heavings, island-vomitings, evince.

Festus. The world hath made such comet-like advance
Lately on science, we may almost hope,
Before we die of sheer decay, to learn
Something about our infancy. But me
This troubles not. Were all earth's mountain chains

*
To utter fire at once, what a grand show
Of pyrotechny for our neighbor moon!
Let us ascend; but not through the charred throat
Of an extinct volcano.

Lucifer. This way—down.
So shalt thou thread the world at once.

Festus. Haste, haste!
Life is too brittle, time too brief to waste.

Scene—A ruined Temple.

Festus and Lucifer.

Festus. Here will I worship solely.

Lucifer. 'Tis a fane

Once sacred to the sun.

Festus. It matters not

What false god here hath falsely been adored,
Or what life-hating rites these walls have viewed:
The truly holy soul, which hath received
The unattainable, can hallow hell.

Each orb is to itself the heart of Heaven;
And each belief wherein man roots his hope
And lives and dies, the favorite of God.

Earth's tale is told in Heaven, Heaven's told in earth
Since either 'gan one only faith hath been,
The faith in God of all. A thousand types
A thousand tribes have chosen. But the hour
Already, hawk-like, preens its wing for flight,
When all shall be remassed in one great creed,
All being shall be rebegotten, all
Worship rededicate, all signs afresh
Thrice hallowed; the degenerate lapse of time
Having twice fused the symbol with the truth,
All dark things brightened, all contrariants blent;
And truth and love, perradiating life,
Be the new poles of nature; earth at last
Joining the great procession of the skies.
True faith in faithful hearts hath ever been;
But craft with sanguine darkness all hath fouled.
Now to the only true and Triune God
These walls shall echo praise, if never yet.
Bring me a morsel of the fire without;
For I will make a sacred offering
To God, as though the High Priest of the world.
He lacks not consecration at best hands
Whom Thou hast hallowed, Lord, by choice; and these,
The elements I offer, Thou hast made
Holy, by making them.

Lucifer. Lo! here is fire.
I will await thee in the air.

Festus. Withdraw!—
O Thou! the sole and spiritual sun,
Fountain and fane of Heaven's immortal fire,
Whom all the lives of all the elements,
Lamb, fish, and dove,—the all-producing earth,
The purifying wave, perfective fire;
Whom all the faiths and creeds, and rights of old
As now and ever, to the end of Time,
In precognition of eternal truth
Foreshadowed and foretyped, hear Thou, Heaven-throned!
While one, by Thy divine salvation graced
A servant of Thy boundless law of love,
This temple redevotes to purer end
Than they who built or who abandoned knew.
The world is one great prophecy of Thee,
And Thou Thine own fulfilment. Heaven and earth
Exhaust themselves in symbols of their God;
Whose breath from servile matter formed at first
The fading frostwork of created things.
All nature typeth Thee and Thine; — the moon,
Virgin of Heaven, who nightly bringeth forth
The light which is Thine own in Heaven to earth;
Thou herald star which bathest earth in dew,
And leadst the sun into the sea to his
Eternal baptism, ere yet with light
He floods the world and cleaves the breathing skies
With all pervading and inspiring fire; —
And thou, sweet earth, which sittest weeping there
In the sun's shadow, like the penitent one
Before His cross, the darkness of whose death
Eclipsed all day; thou, too, and all the stars
The flock of light, born of the seed of light,
Shall sometime range in bliss the spirit-pasturing skies,
Catch the vivific secret of the sun,
And quaff serene the waters of the sun.
Wing of the world which bears it on through Heaven,
Light! let us love thee, we to thee return
Through our sun's bosom, at whose orient ray
The gods all vanished like the ghosts of night;
Thee, Light unlimited, whose ancient sheen
Was spiritual man, angelic mind
The emanant creation, matter, form,
And oval orbit of the universe.
All stars are steps in the great scale of Heaven
Up to God's throne, from Time's last orb which eyes
The inner and the utter infinite
Round to that highest, deepest, midmost site,
Where Heaven's star-music ends, forever quelled
In the supremest silence of the sun.
For through all spherical forms, the central circling soul
In bright, expansive progress, fit to match
The march of angels in the van of Time,
By-passing all night's constellated chart,
Where God hath set His burning seal, the sun,—
Re-seeks thee, lone and universal light,
Clear glory and the all-involving Heavens.
Glory of air, and Lord of light, O sun!
Great wonder-worker, seer of all the skies;
The gates of whose house are the east and the west;
Whom God begat on light which first He loved
Encircling in Himself, but who in shades
Of primal night wast nursed; whom all the hours

26
Of Time attend, whose travel round the world
Makes one eternal triumph; unto whom
All earth is sacred;—Yes! O sun, to thee
The death dispeller, life elicitor,
Shepherd of worlds, and harmonist of Heaven—
The music of whose golden lyre is light—
One vast and living garden of the Lord,
Watered by light streams, where the vine divine
And bright flock numbered in spiritual
Perfectness, flourish alike in multitude of days
Immortal as thy years, O nightslayer!
The elements thy car draw; and all signs
And natural miracles from thee proceed,
The ever-coming light; bright mystery,
Sense binding, mind attracting, passion taming,
Light born, light generating, light all life!—
Thine eloquent fire lights aye their starry heads
Who in celestial conclave rule with thee,
And pour upon the crown of darkness light.
The seasons are thy gospels, and thy twelve
In sphenral order and a starry chain
Through gods, kings, signs, toils, tribes, gems, miracles,
Heroes and peers unite the universe
In love to thee, thy being's boundless law,
Creator's symbol, and creation's seal.
To thee the azure serpent, golden scaled,
And noiseless creeping time, that sloughs its years
And lays its world-eggs in thy brightness, is Hallowed, and them inspirest thou with life.
World-navelled oracle, whose very light
Blindeth the strongest eye, whose beam of life,
Death darting, thou reclaimest through the aye
Revolving and evolving universe,
Who to thyself earth's twin chief boons of life
Dost sanctify for sustenance and joy—
Symbols of soul and body—that all might Know both in Him thou symbollest, in God.
All signs, all seasons, records are of Thee
And Thy divinest dignities and deeds.
Thou Lamb of God who didst initiate Eternity, prophetic with that sign
Of universal sinlessness and love;
And typed next by the sacrificial ox,
Earth-embleming. Twin Being, God with man,
Whose double nature indicates in Heaven
The natural and the spiritual. Who
Leading the soul to spirit dost progress
Backwards to Deity through penitence;—
And lion-like—the lion of the law,
The lamb of love—dost lord it over all life
And rage against all sin, the sin of Being,
Dreadful to all save virgin; seed and branch
Of the immortal maid beloved of God,
Bride of the spirit, and her radiant child,
And hallowed in all worship;—who dost hold
The balance of the just one o'er the world
Well weighing work and faith; with scorpion sting
Treating the carnal conscience self-condemned; —
Who bend'st the Heavens before Thee like a bow,
And earth, Thine orbéed arrow, shoot'st through air; —
Who through Thine infinite mercy madest Thyself
The scapegoat of this dark world-wilderness,
Bearing the sins of soul in every sphere; —
And from celestial fountains pourest down
Floods of regenerating grace, wherein
Like some great life that dwelleth in the deep
Of love, Thou art and livest, man-god, Christ! —
Thou art the hero of the universe,
The Theohuman Being erst all time
And all incarnate emanations; Thou
Who at Thy birth didst slay sin's serpent-brood,
And through the foul-stalled stable of this world
The sourceless circular river of Thy love
Didst turn; redeem the soul of man, Thy friend,
From death and hell, destroy the dragon fiend
And his seven deadly heads, devouring life,
Regain thy golden apples, Paradise!
And to complete the mystic cycle, rise
Well proven and approved of God to Heaven.
Time tells his tale by shadows, and by clouds
The wind records its progress; by dark doubts
The spirit, swiftening on its heavenward course.
The shadow beareth witness to the light.
Thine, Lord! are all the elements and worlds; —
The sun is Thy bright servant, and the moon
Thy servant's servant; — the round, rushing earth,
The lifeful air, the thousand wingéd winds,
The Heaven-kinned fire, the continental clouds,
The sea broad breasted, and the tranced lake,
The rich arterial rivers, and the hills
That wave their woody tresses in the breeze,
In grateful undulation, all are Thine;—
Thine are the snow-robed mountains circling earth
As the white spirits God the Savior’s throne;—
Thine the bright secrets, central in all orbs,
And rudimental mysteries of life.
The sun-starred night, the ever-maiden morn,
The all-prevailing day, consummate eve,
Confess them Thine through the perpetual world;—
All art hath wrought from earth, or science lured
From truth, like flame out of the fire cloud, are Thine;—Thine the glory, all belongs to Thee,
Finite, indefinite, and infinite,
As mountains to a world, as worlds to Heaven.
The high-domed city, and the toilful town
And early hamlet,—all that live or die,
That flourish or decay, that change, or stand
Before Thy face, unchanged, exist for Thee,
Or are not at Thy bidding; Thine, all souls;
Atom and world, the universe is Thine!—
Thou canst as easily turn Thy kindest eye
From comprehending the bright Infinite,
To this crushed temple, where the wild flower decks
Its earthquake-rifted walls, and the birds build
In leafage of its columned capitals,—
And to this crumbling heart I offer here,
As trust Thine own eternity. Behold!
Accept, I pray Thee, Lord! this sacrifice;
These elemental offerings, simple, pure,
Which in the name of man I make to Thee,
Formless, save prostrate soul and kneeling heart—
In token of Thy perfect monarchy
And all-comprising mercy. These are they!
A flowery turf, a branch, a burning coal,
A cup of water, and an empty bowl;
This air-filled bowl is typic of the world
Thou fillest with Thy spirit, and the soul,
Receptive of Thy life-conferring truth!—
This the symbolic element wherefrom
We are to be reborn, wherein made pure;
Those whom Thou choosest are to be redeemed
Out of the mighty multitudes of men;
Yet all as of one nature be redeemed.
This coal, torn flaming from the earth, proclaims
Thy sin-consuming mercy, as of earth;
And may our souls ever aspire to Thee,
As these pale flames unto the stars: this turf
Is as the earthy nature and abode
We would subject to Thee; and lieth here,
The representative of every star
And world-extended matter. Lord! this branch,
Which waveth high o'er all, Oh, let it sign
Thine own Eternal Son's humanity,
Which was on earth. yet ever lives in Heaven,
Redemptive of all being. Golden Branch!
Which, in the eld-time, seer's and sibyl's words,
Full of dark central thought and mystic truth,
Foretold should overspread the spirit world,
And with its fruit heal every wound of Death,—
Tree of eternal life, Thee all adore.
Accept this prayer, O Savior! that if men
Can nothing do but sin, Thou mayst forgive
The creature crime, and bring back all to Thee.
Thou art the one who made the universe;
Yet didst Thou walk on earth; Thou brakest bread
And drankest wine with men, betokening so
Thine own complete, Divine Humanity.
May all obey Thy words and do Thy will!
Thy cross be multiplied, till every heart
Become a Calvary, whereon is wrought
The mystery of our nature suffering death,
And the diviner secret of the soul,
And perfect sacrifice; and where above
This deadly level of creation's orb
The immortal spirit, mountain-like, aspires
Into thine infinite, O eternity!
What though the written word be born no more,
The spirit's revelation still proceeds,
Evolving all perfection; therefore most
We bless Thee God our Savior; whoso are Saved are in Thee; the One, the Twin, Triune.
The antiformal spirit wants no word
Whereby to mark its union with the soul;
For kindled, like a sacrifice of old,
By Heaven's spontaneous fire, the soul achieves
In death its final cause, accomplishing
In very aspiration being's end.
Thou doest all things rightly; all are best,
Sorrow, and joy, and power, and suffering.
For sorrow comes of nature, of God bliss;
The mysteries of one are full of woe,
Cavernous darkness, shrieks and fire; of Heaven,
Light, peace, and jubilation, such as He,
'The all-felicitating sun, instils.
Providing, therefore, all things that must be
And ought to be, as Thou dost and hast done,
From the beginning even to the end,
This heart let cease from prayer, these lips from praise,
Save that which life shall offer pauselessly.
Now go I forth again, refreshed, consoled,
Upon my time-enduring pilgrimage.
Ho! Lucifer!

Lucifer. I wait thee.

Festus. Whither next?

Lucifer. As thou wilt, apposite or opposite.
'Tis light translateth night; 'tis inspiration
Expounds experience; 'tis the west explains
The east: 'tis time unfolds eternity.
Scene — A Metropolis — Public Place.

Festus and Lucifer.

Festus. My thoughts go cloudlike round the world, nor rest.
I am on fire to realize the fate
Which darkly in the future's depths I have seen;
Or else am with the mightiest folly mocked
Which ever impeded a soul to madness. Speak!
When shall this world acknowledge me?

Lucifer. Not now;
Never, till self-compelled. The time will come.
Have patience. 'Tis the blessing of the angels.

Festus. Patience! say slow self-murder.

Lucifer. Wait for what
Is on the wing already, or else have
The aimless satisfactionless result
As of a lunge into the empty air.

Festus. Nay; come then, pretty patience. Sand by sand
The world is worn away, and continents,
And oceans take each other's places here.
The mountain summit and the sea's last depth
Is but a question after all of time.
Most greatest things are gradual. Star on star
The Heavens fulfil their issue; line by line
Old ocean saps earth's vaulted base, and whelms
In transubstantiation infinite,
Neath his abysmal bowl the mountain tops;
Beam after beam truth warms the spirit here,
Dipped in substantial lightning of the sun,
And now with an eternal saving saved.
Life to enjoy I feel one must conform
Both to the laws and by-laws of the world.
What can be done here?

Lucifer. Oh! a thousand things,
As well as elsewhere.

Festus. True! it is a place
Where passion, occupation, or reflection,
May find fit food or field; but suits not me.
My burden is the spirit, and my life
Is henceforth solely spiritual.

Lucifer. Well;—
At the occurrent season, too, it shall
Be satisfied. It might be even now,
From things about us. But look, here comes a man
Thou knowest well.

Festus. I do. Stop, friend! of late
I have not seen thee. Whither goest thou now?

Friend. I am upon my business, and in haste.

Festus. Business! I thought thou wast a simple schemer.

Friend. Mayhap I am.

Festus. There is a visionary
Business, as well as visionary faith.

Friend. I have been, all life, living in a mine,
Lancing the world for gold. I have not yet
Fingered the right vein. Oh! I often wish
The time would come again, which science prates of,
When earth's bright veins ran ruddy, virgin gold.

Festus. When the world's gold melts, all the poorer metals,
All things less pure, less precious, all beside,
Will vanish; nought be left but gems and gold.
If all were rich, gold would be penniless.

Lucifer. I have a secret I would fain impart
To one who would make right use of it. Now, mark!
Chemists say there are fifty elements,
And more;—wouldst know a ready recipe
For riches?—

Friend. That indeed I would, good sir.

Lucifer. Get then these fifty earths, or elements,
Or what not. Mix them up together. Put
All to the question. Tease them well with fire,
Vapor, and trituration—every way;
Add the right quantity of lunar rays;
Boil them, and let them cool, and watch what comes.

Friend. Thrice greatest Hermes! but it must be;
yes!
I'll go and get them; good day,—instantly. [Goes.

Lucifer. He'll be astonished, probably.

Festus. He will,
In any issue of the experiment.
Perhaps the nostrum may explode and blow him
Body and soul to atoms and to—
Lucifer. Nonsense!

Festus. There needs no satire on men's rage for gold;
Their nature is the best one, and excuse.
And now, what next?

Lucifer. Why, let us take our ease
Beside this feathery fountain. It is cool
And pleasant, and the people passing by
Fit subjects for two moralists like us.
Here we can speculate on policy,
On social manners, fashions, and the news.
Now the political aspect of the world,
At present, is most cheerful. To begin,
Like charity, at home. Out of all wrongs
The most atrocious, the most righteous ends
Are happiest wrought.

Festus. It ofttimes chances so.

Lucifer. Take of the blood of martyrs, tears of slaves,
The groans of imprisoned patriots, and the sweat
Wrung from the bones of Famine, like parts. Add
Vapor of orphan's sigh, and wail of all
Whom war hath spoiled, or law first fanged, then gorged;

The stifled breath of man's free, natural thought,—
The tyrant's lies; the curses of the proud;
The usurpations of the lawful heir,
The treasonous rebellions of the wise,
The poor man's patient prayers; and let all these
Simmer, some centuries, o'er the slow, red fire
Of human wrath; and there results, at last,
A glorious constitution, and a grand
Totality of nothings;—as we see.—

[Soldiers pass; music, &c.

Man is a military animal,
Glories in gunpowder, and loves parade;
Prefers them to all things.

Festus.

Of recipes,
Enough! Life's but a sword's length, at the best.

Lucifer. War, war, still war! from age to age, old Time
Hath washed his hands in the heart's blood of Earth.

Festus. Yet, fields of death! ye are earth's purest pride;
For what is life to freedom? War must be
While men are what they are; while they have bad
Passions to be roused up; while ruled by men;
While all the powers and treasures of a land
Are at the beck of the ambitious crowd;
While injuries can be inflicted, or
Insults be offered; yea, while rights are worth
Maintaining, freedom keeping, or life having,
So long the sword shall shine; so long shall war
Continue, and the need for war remain.

Lucifer. And yet all war shall cease.

Festus. It must and shall.

Some news seems stirring; what, I know not yet.

Lucifer. Nor I. I heard that one of Saturn's moons
Had flown upon his face and blinded him.
'Twas also said, in circles I frequent
At times, his outer ring was falling off.
If I should find, I'll keep it. It might fit
A little finger such as mine, I think.
Poor Saturn! much I doubt he is breaking up.
But for these news, I know not what they be.
Some one perhaps has lit on a new vein
Of stars in Heaven: or cracked one with his teeth,
To look inside it, or made out at last
The circulation of the light; or what Think'st thou?

Festus. I know not. Ask!

Lucifer. Sir, what's the news?

Passer-by. The news are good news, being none at all.

Lucifer. Your goodness, sir, I deem of like extent.

We heard the great Bear was confined of twins.

Stranger. 'Tis not unlikely, stars do propagate.

Festus. And so much for civility and news.

This city is one of the world's social poles,
Round which events revolve: here, dial-like,
Time makes no movement but is registered.

Lucifer. Yon gaudy equipage! hast ever seen
A drowning dragon-fly floating down a brook,
Topping the sunny ripples as they rise,
Till in some ambushed eddy it is sucked down
By something underneath? Thus with the rich;—
Their gilding makes their death conspicuous.
Festus. Some men are nobly rich, some nobly poor, Some the reverse. Rank makes no difference.

Lucifer. The poor may die in swarms unheeded. They But swell the mass of columned ciphers. Oh, Ye poor, ye wretched, ye bowed down by woe! Thank God for something, though it were but this, He fire, ye ashes!

Festus. Thou art surely mad.

Lucifer. I meant to moralize. I cannot see A crowd, and not think on the fate of man— Clinging to error as a dormant bat To a dead bough. Well, 'tis his own affair.

Festus. All homilies on the sorts and lot of men Are vain and wearisome. I want to know No more of human nature. As it is, I honor it and hate it. Let that do.

Lucifer. Here is a statue to some mighty man Who beat his name on the drum of the world's ear Till it was stupefied, and, I suppose, Not knowing what it was about, reared up This marble mockery of mortality, Which shall outlive the memory of the man And all like him who water earth with blood, And sow with bones, or any good he did, As eagles outlive gnats. But never mind! Why carp at insect sins, or crum-like crimes? The world, the great imposture, still succeeds;
Still, in Titanic immortality,
W'thes 'neath the burning mountain of its sins.

FESTUS. There's an old adage about sin and some one.
The world is not exactly what I thought it, But pretty nearly so; and after all, 'Tis not so bad as good men make it out, Nor such a hopeless wretch.

LUCIFER. For all the world Not I would slander it. Dear world, thou art Of all things under Heaven by me most loved, The most consistent, the least fallible. Believe me ever thine affectionate Lucifer. P. S. Sweet, remember me!

FESTUS. Wilt go to the cathedral?
LUCIFER. No, indeed! I have just confessed.

FESTUS. Well, to the concert, then?
LUCIFER. Some fifteen hundred thousand million years Have passed since last I heard a chorus.

FESTUS. Good!

LUCIFER. In sooth, I cannot calculate the time. There are no eras in Eternity, No ages. Time is as the body, and Eternity the spirit of existence.

FESTUS. That would I learn and prove.
LUCIFER. The finite soul Can never learn the Infinite, nor be Informed by it, unaided.
Festus.
Be it so.
What shall we do?
Lucifer.
I put myself in your hands.
Festus.  Wilt go on 'Change?
Lucifer.
I rarely speculate.
Steady receipts are mostly to my taste.
Besides, I spurn the system. Take my arm.
Festus.  But something must be done to pass the time.
Lucifer.  True; let us pass, then, all time.
Festus.  I shall be Most happy; only show me how.
Lucifer.  Why, thus.
I have the power to make thy spirit free
Of its poor frame of flesh, yet not by death,—
And reunite them afterwards! Wilt thou
Intrust thyself to me?
Festus.  In God I trust,
And in His word of safety. Have thy will.
Where shall it be effected?
Lucifer.  Here and now.
Recline thou calmly on yon marble slab,
As though asleep. The world will miss thee not;
Its complement is perfect. I will mind
That no impertinent meddler troubles there
Thy tranced frame. The brain shall cease its life-
Engrossing business, and the living blood,
The wine of life which maketh drunk the soul,
Sleep in the sacred vessels of the heart.
Three steps the sun hath taken from his throne,
Already, downwards, and ere he hath gone,
Who calmeth tempests with his mighty light,
We will return; and till then the bright ram
Of yonder fountain fails not.

Festus. Thus be it!
Come! we are wasting moments here that now
Belong, of right, to immortality,
And to another world.

Lucifer. Prepare! —
Festus. And thou?
Lucifer. I vanish altogether.
Festus. Excellent!
Lucifer. Body and spirit part! —

Scene — Air.

Lucifer and Festus.

Festus. Where, where am I?
Lucifer. We are in space and time, just as we were
Some half a second since; where wouldst thou be?
Festus. I would be in Eternity and Heaven;
The spirit, and the blessed spirit, of Existence.
Lucifer. And thou shalt be, and shalt pass
All secondary nature; all the rules
And the results of time: upon thy spirit
These things shall act no more; their hands shall be Withered upon thee, as the ray of life
Returns to that it came from: they shall cease
In thee, like lightning in the deadening sea.
But not now; we have worlds to go through, first.
When spirit hath deposited its earth,
And brightly, freely flows, self-purified
In its own action, acted on by God,
It holds the starry transcript of the skies
Booklike within its bosom, evermore.
But thine even now, exhausted, not exhaled,
Bears the design of earthly discontent,
Not sacred satisfaction. Unto him
Whose soul is saved, all things are clear as stars,
And, to the chosen, safety; — to none else.
Nor cold insurgent heart, nor menial mind
Can compass this: it is the way of God:
The starry path of Heaven which none can tread
But spirits high as Heaven, which He hath raised;
Who were of Him before all worlds, and are Beloved and saved forever while they live.
Thou of the world art yet, with motives, means,
And ends as others.

Festus. I will no more of it.

Lucifer. Oh, dream it not! Thou knowest not the depth
Of nature's dark abyss, thyself, nor God.
Light over-strong, and darkness over-long,
Blind equally the eye. Thou mayst yet rise
And fall as often as the sea.

Festus. How comes it,
Being a spirit, that I see not all
As spirit should?

Lucifer. Thou lackest life and death.
The life of Heaven, and the death of earth.
Then wouldst thou see, in harmony with God,
Creation's strife.

Festus. Death alters not the spirit.

Lucifer. Death must be undergone ere understood.

One world is as another. Rest we here!—

Scene—Another and a better World.

Festus and Lucifer.

Festus. What a sweet world! Which is this,

Lucifer?

Lucifer. This is the star of evening and of beauty.

Festus. Otherwise Venus. I will stay here.

Lucifer. Nay:

It is but a visit.

Festus. Let us look about us.

It is Heaven—it must be; aught so beautiful

Must, I am sure, have feeling. Cannot worlds live?

Least things have life. Why not the greatest, too?
An atom is a world, a world an atom
Seen relatively: death an act of life.

Lucifer. This is a world where every loveliest thing
Lasts longest; where decay lifts never head.
Above the grossest forms, and matter here
Is all transparent substance; the flower fades not,
But every eve gives forth a fragrant light,
Till by degrees the spirit of each flower
Essentially consuming the fair frame
Refines itself to air; rejoicing thus
The archetypal stores where nature dwells
In preëxistent immortality.
The beautiful die never, here: Death lies
A dreaming — he has nought to do — the babe
Plays with his darts. Nought dies but what should die.

Here are no earthquakes, storms, nor plagues; no hell
At heart; no floating flood on high. The soil
Is ever fresh and fragrant as a rose —
The skies, like one wide rainbow, stand on gold —
The clouds are light as rose leaves — and the dew,
'Tis of the tears which stars weep, sweet with joy —
The air is softer than a loved one's sigh —
The ground is glowing with all priceless ore,
And glistening with gems like a bride's bosom —
The trees have silver stems and emerald leaves —
The fountains bubble nectar — and the hills
Are half alive with light. Yet it is not Heaven.
Festus. Oh, how this world should pity man's! I love To walk earth's woods when the storm bends his bow, And volleys all his arrows off at once; And when the dead, brown branch comes crashing close To my feet, to tread it down, because I feel Decay my foe: and not to triumph's worse Than not to win. It is wrong to think on earth; But terror hath a beauty even as mildness; And I have felt more pleasure far on earth, When, like a lion or a day of battle, The storm rose, roared, shook out his shaggy mane, And leapt abroad on the world, and lay down red, Licking himself to sleep as it got light; And in the cataract-like tread of a crowd, And its irresistible rush, flooding the green As though it came to doom, than e'er I can Feel in this fairy orb of shade and shine. I love earth!

Lucifer. Thou art mad to dote on earth When with this sphere of beauty.

Festus. It is the blush Of being; surely, too, a maiden world, Unmarred by thee. Touch it not, Lucifer!

Lucifer. It is too bright to tarnish.

Festus. Didst thou fail?

Lucifer. I cannot fail. With me success is nature
I am the cause, means, consequence of ill.
Thou canst not yet enjoy a sensuous world —
Refined though ne'er so little o'er thine own,
And yet wouldst enter Heaven. Valhalla's halls,
And skulls o'erbrimmed with mead, — cities of gold,
Cities of silver, temples roofed with light,
God-home and glory-land; Elysian plains,
Where peace and pleasure, endless, cloudless joy
And ever-ripening bliss enrapture all; —
The Boodhist's blessed state Nirvana set
Half between that which is and which is not; —
The high, celestial mountains of the air,
Bright with the spiritual hues of Heaven,
So pure that snow would stain and dew defile,
Where Music and her sister Beauty dwell,
And where the waters flow of immortality; —
The Aztec's burning Heaven, where living clouds,
Indwelt by warrior souls, sweep ceaseless round
The sun, and rise or fall as they desire
An earth-life or a heaven-life had in turn,
Whose sword-play makes the lightning, and whose voice
In battle thunder, as on high they war; —
The pearly palaces and the odorous groves,
The infinite brightness and the heavenly forms,
The starry transmigrations of all souls,
And ever-bounding joy or restful bliss,
Which they who dwell beside the amber main
Believe await them in the world past death; —
Eden, where life was toilless, and gave man
All things to live with, nothing to live for; —
The Moslem's bowers of love, and streams of wine,
And palaces of purest adamant,
Where dark-eyed houris, with their young white arms,
The ever virgin, woo and welcome ye,—
The Chaldee's orbs of gold, where dwells the primal
light,
Were all too pure for thee; yet shalt thou be Surely in Heaven, ere Death unlock the heart.
I said that I would show thee marvels here;
For here dwell many angels — many souls
Who have run pure through earth, or been made pure
By their salvation since. It is a mart
Where all the holy spirits of the world
Perform sweet interchange, and purchase truth
With truth, and love with love. Hither came He,
The Son — the Savior of the universe;
Not in the stable-state He went to earth —
A servant unto slaves; but as a God,
Carrying His kingdom with Him, and His Heaven.

Festus. Lo, here are spirits! and all seem to love
Each other.

Lucifer. He hath only half a heart
Who loves not all.

Festus. Speak for me to some angel.
See, here is one, a very soul of beauty:
It is the muse. I know her by the lyre
Hung on her arm, and eye like fount of fire.
Muse. Mortal, approach! I am the holy Muse, Whom all the great and bright of spirit choose—
'Tis I who breathe my soul into the lips
Of those great lights whom death nor time eclipse:
'Tis I who wing the loving heart with song,
And set its sighs to music on the tongue:
It is I who watch, and, with sweet dreams, reward
The starry slumbers of the youthful bard;
For I love every thing that is sweet and bright,
And but this morn, with the first wink of light,
A sunbeam left the sun, and, as it sped,
I followed, watched, and listened what it said:
Wherefore, with all this brightness am I given
From sun to earth? Am I not fit for Heaven?
From God I came once; and, though worlds have passed,
Ages, and dooms, yet I am light to the last.
Whatever God hath once bent to His will
Is sacred: so the world's to be loved still.
What of this swift, this bright, but downward being,
Too burning to be borne—too brief for seeing?
What is mine aim—mine end? I would not die
In dust, or water, or an idiot's eye;
I would not cease in blood, nor end in fire,
Nor light the loveless to their low desire:
No; let me perish on the poet's page,
Where he kisses from his beauty's brow all age;
Spelling it fair for aye, and wrinkle scorning,
As when first that brow brake on him like a morning.
But yet I cannot quit this line I tread,
Though it lead and leave me to the eyeless dead:
It is mine errand: 'tis for this I come.
And live, and die, and go down to my doom.
This is my fate—right and bright to speed on.
God is His own God: fate and fall are one.
Straight from the sun I go, like life from God,
Which hits, now on a Heaven, now on a clod.
But, spite of all, the world's air warps our way,
And crops the roses off the cheek of day;
As some false friend, who holds our fall in trust,
Oils our decline, and hands us to the dust.
Where are the sunbeams gone of the young, green earth?
Search dust and night: our death makes clear our birth.

It said—and saw earth; and one moment more
Fell bright beside a vine-shadowed cottage door:
In it came—glanced upon a glowing page,
Where, youth forestalling and foreshortening age—
Weak with the work of thought, a boyish bard,
Sate suing night and stars for his reward.
The sunbeam swerved and grew, a breathing dim,
For the first time, as it lit and looked on him:
His forehead faded—pale his lip and dry—
Hollow his cheek—and fever fed his eye.
Clouds lay about his brain, as on a hill,
Quick with the thunder thought, and lightning will.
His clenched hand shook from its more than midnight clasp,
Till his pen fluttered like a wingéd asp;
Save that no deadly poison blacked its lips:
'Twas his to life-enlighten, not eclipse;
Nor would he shade one atom of another,
To have a sun his slave, a-god his brother.
The young moon laid her down as one who dies,
Knowing that death laid her down as one who dies,
For that the sun, her god, through nature's night
Shall make her bosom to grow great with light.
Still he sate, though his lamp sunk; and he strained
His eyes to work the nightness which remained.
Vain pain! he could not make the light he wanted,
And soon thought's wizard ring gets disenchanted.
When earth was dayed—was morrowed—the first
Perched on his pen, and diamonded its way;—
The sunray that I watched; which, proud to mark
The line it loved as deathless, there died dark—
Died in the only path it would have trod,
Were there as many ways as worlds to God,—
There, in the eye of God again to burn,
As all man's glory unto God's must turn.
And so may sunbeams ever guide his pen,
And God his heart, who lights the morn of men;
For this life is but Being's first faint ray;
And sun on sun, and Heaven on Heaven, make up
God's day.
And were there suns in day as stars in night,
They would show but like one ray from out His full-sphered light:
As but one momentary gleam would fly;
Or, as years, the arrows of eternity.

Festus. Poets are all who love—who feel great truths—
And tell them; and the truth of truths is love.
There was a time—Oh, I remember well!
When, like a sea-shell with its seaborn strain,
My soul aye rang with music of the lyre;
And my heart shed its lore as leaves their dew—
A honey dew, and throve on what it shed.
All things I loved; but song I loved in chief.
Imagination is the air of mind;
Judgment its earth, and memory its main;
Passion its fire. I was at home in Heaven:
Swiftlike I lived above: once touching earth,
The meanest thing might master me: long wings
But baffled. Still and still I harped on song.
Oh! to create within the mind is bliss;
And, shaping forth the lofty thought, or lovely,
We seek not, need not Heaven; and when the thought,
Cloudy and shapeless, first forms on the mind,
Slow darkening into some gigantic make,
How the heart shakes with pride and fear, as Heaven
Quakes under its own thunder; or, as might
Of old, the mortal mother of a god,
When first she saw him lessening up the skies.
And I began the toil divine of verse,
Which, like a burning bush, doth guest a god.
But this was only wing-flapping—not flight;
The pawing of the courser ere he win;
Till, by degrees, from wrestling with my soul,
I gathered strength to keep the fleet thoughts fast,
And made them bless me.  Yes, there was a time
When tomes of ancient song held eye and heart—
Were the sole lore I recked of: the great bards
Of Greece, of Rome, and mine own master land,
And they who in the holy book are deathless,—
Men who have vulgarized sublimity,
And bought up truth for the nations; parted it,
As soldiers lotted once the 'garb of God,—
Men who have forged gods—uttered—made them pass:
In whose words, to be read with many a heaving
Of the heart, is a power, like wind in rain—
Sons of the sons of God, who, in olden days,
Did leave their passionless Heaven for earth and woman,
Brought an immortal to a mortal breast,
And, like a rainbow clasping the sweet earth,
And melting in the covenant of love,
Left here a bright precipitate of soul,
Which lives forever through the lines of men,
Flashing, by fits, like fire from an enemy's front—
Whose thoughts, like bars of sunshine in shut rooms,
Mid gloom, all glory, win the world to light—
Who make their very follies like their souls;
And like the young moon with a ragged edge,
Still, in their imperfection, beautiful—
Whose weaknesses are lovely as their strengths,
Like the white nebulous matter between stars,
Which, if not light, at least is likest light,—
Men whom we build our love round like an arch
Of triumph, as they pass us on their way
To glory and to immortality;
Men whose great thoughts possess us like a passion
Through every limb and the whole heart; whose words
Haunt us as eagles haunt the mountain air;
Thoughts which command all coming times and minds,
As from a tower a warden,—fix themselves
Deep in the heart as meteor stones in earth,
Dropped from some higher sphere; the words of gods,
And fragments of the undeemed tongues of Heaven;
Men who walk up to fame as to a friend
Or their own house, which from the wrongful heir
They have wrested, from the world's hard hand and grip,

Men who, like Death, all bone, but all unarmed,
Have ta'en the giant world by the throat, and thrown him;
And made him swear to maintain their name and fame
At peril of his life—who shed great thoughts
As easily as an oak looseneth its golden leaves
In a kindly largess to the soil it grew on—
Whose rich, dark ivy thoughts, sunned o'er with love,
Flourish around the deathless stems of their names—
Whose names are ever on the world's broad tongue,
Like sound upon the falling of a force—
Whose words, if winged, are with angels' wings—
Who play upon the heart as on a harp,
And make our eyes bright as we speak of them—
Whose hearts have a look southwards, and are open
To the whole noon of nature,—these I have waked
And wept o'er, night by night; oft pondering thus:
Homer is gone: and where is Jove? and where
The rival cities seven? His song outlives
Time, tower, and god—all that then was, save
Heaven.

Muse. Yea, but the poor perfections of thine earth
Shall be as little as nothing to thee here.

Festus. God must be happy, who aye makes; and since
Mind's first of things, who makes from mind is blest
O'er men. Thus saith the bard to his work:—I am
Thy god, and bid thee live as my God me:
I live or die with thee, soul of my soul!
Thou camest and went'st, sunlike, from morn to eve;
And smiledst fire upon my heaving heart,
Like the sun in the sea, till it arose
And dashed about its house all might and mirth,
Like ocean's tongue in Straffa's stormy cave.
Thou art a weakly reed to lean upon;
But, like that reed the false one filched from Heaven,
Full of immortal fire—immortal as
The breath of God's lips—every breath a soul.

Muse. Mortal! the muse is with thee: leave her not.

Festus. Once my ambition to another end
Stirred, stretched itself, but slept again. I rose
And dashed on earth the harp, mine other heart,
Which, ringing, brake; its discord ruinous
Harmony still; and coldly I rejoiced
No other joy I had, wormlike, to feed
Upon my ripe resolve. It might not be:
The more I strove against, the more I loved it.

Lucifer. Come, let us walk along. So say, fare well.

Festus. I will not.

Muse. No; my greeting is forever.

Lucifer. Well, well, come on!

Festus. Oh! show me that sweet soul
Thou brought'st to me the first night that we met.
She must be here, where all are good and fair:
And thou didst promise me.

Lucifer. Is that not she
Walking alone, up-looking to thine earth?
For, lo! it shineth through the midday air.

Festus. It is! it is!
Lucifer. Well, I will come again. [Goes.

Festus. Knowest thou me, mine own immortal love?

How shall I call thee? Say, what mayst thou be!

Angela. I am a spirit, Festus; and I love

Thy spirit, and shall love, when once like mine,

More than we ever did or can even now.

Pure spirits are of Heaven, all heavenly.

Yet marvel not to meet me in this guise,

All radiant like a diamond as it is.

We wander in what way we will through all

Or any of these worlds, and whereso'er

We are, there Heaven is, here, and there too, God.

Festus. Thou dost remember me?

Angela. Ay, every thought

And look of love which thou hast lent to me,

Comes daily through my memory as stars

Wear through the dark.

Festus. And thou art happy, love?

Angela. Yes: I am happy when I can do good.

Festus. To be good is to do good. Who dwell here?

Are they all deathless — happy?

Angela. All are not:

Some err, though rarely — slightly. Spirits sin

Only in thought; and they are of a race

Higher than thine — have fewer wants and less

Temptations — many more joys — greater powers.

They need no civil sway: each rules himself—
Obeys himself: all live too, as they choose,
And they choose nought but good. They who have come

From earth, or other orb, use the same powers,
Passions, and purposes, they had ere death;
Although enlarged and freed, to nobler ends,
With better means. Here the hard warrior whets
The sword of truth, and steels his soul against sin.
The fierce and lawless wills which trooped it over
His breast—the speared desires that overran
The fairest fields of virtue, sleep and lie
Like a slain host 'neath snow; he dyes his hands
Deep in the blood of evil passions. Mind!
There is no passion evil in itself;
In Heaven we shall enjoy all to right ends.
There sit the perfect women, perfect men;—
Minds which control themselves, hearts which indulge
Designs of wondrous goodness, but so far
Only as soul extolled to bliss and power
Most high sees fit for each, divinely. Here,
The statesman makes new laws for growing worlds,
Through their forefated ages. Here, the sage
Masters all mysteries, more and more, from day
To day, watching the thoughts of men and angels
Through moral microscopes; or hails afar,
By some vast intellectual instrument,
The mighty spirits, good or bad, which range
The space of mind; some spreading death and woe
On far-off worlds—some great with good and life.
And here the poet, like that wall of fire
In ancient song, surrounds the universe;
Lighting himself, where'er he soars or dives,
With his own bright brain — this is the poet's heaven.
Here he may realize each form or scene
He e'er on earth imagined; or bid dreams
Stand fast, and fairy palaces appear.
Here he has Heaven to hear him; to the which
He sings, with manlike voice and song, the love
Which lent him his whole strength, as is the wont
Of all great spirits and good throughout the world.
Oh! happiest of happy is the bard!
Here, too, some pluck the branch of peace, wherewith
To greet a suffering saint, and show his flood
Of woe hath sunken: this I love to do.
My love, we shall be happy here.

Festus.

Shall I

Ever come here?

Angela. Thou mayst. I will pray for thee,
And watch thee.

Festus. Thou wilt have, then, need to weep.
This heart must run its orbit. Pardon thou
Its many sad deflections. It will return
To thee and to the primal goal of Heaven.

Angela. Practise thy spirit to great thoughts and things,
That thou mayst start, when here, from vantage ground.
We can foretell the future of ourselves,
And fateful only to himself is each.
Festus. I do not fear to die; for, though I change
The mode of being, I shall ever be.
World after world will fall at my right hand;
The glorious future be the past despised:
All now that seemeth bright will soon seem dim,
And darker grow, like earth, as we approach it;
While I shall stand upon yon Heaven which now
Hangs over me. If aught can make me seek
Other to be than that lost soul I fear me,
It is that thou loveth me. Heaven were not Heaven
Without thee.

Lucifer. I am here now. Art thou ready?
Let us go.

Angela. Well—farewell. It makes me grieve
To bid a loved one back to yon false world—
To give up even a mortal unto death.
Thou wilt forget me soon, or seek to do.

Festus. When I forget that the stars shine in air—
When I forget that beauty is in stars—
When I forget that love with beauty is—
Will I forget thee: till then, all things else.
Thy love to me was perfect from the first,
Even as the rainbow in its native skies:
It did not grow: let meaner things mature.

Angela. The rainbow dies in Heaven, and not on earth;
But love can never die: from world to world,
Up the high wheel of Heaven, it lives for aye.
Remember that I wait thee, hoping, here.
Life is the brief disunion of that nature
Which hath been one and same in Heaven ere now,
And shall be yet again, renewed by death.
Come to me when thou diest!

Festus. I will, I will.

Angela. Then, in each other's arms, we will waft through space,
Spirit in spirit, one! or we will dwell
Among these immortal groves; or watch new worlds,
As, like the great thoughts of a Maker-mind,
They are rounded out of chaos: and we will
Be oft on earth with those we love, and help them;
For God hath made it lawful for good souls
To make souls good; and saints to help the saintly.
That thou right soon mayst fold unto thy heart
The blissful consciousness of separate
Oneness with God, in Him in whom alone
The saved are deathless, shall become, for thee,
My earliest, earnest, and most constant prayer.
Oh! what is dear to creatures of the earth?
Life, love, light, liberty? But dearer far
Than all — and Oh! a universe more divine—
The gift, which God endows His chosen with,
Of His own uncreated glory, — His
Before all worlds, all ages, and reserved
Till after all for those He loves and saves.
As when the eye first views some Andean chain
Of shadowy, rolling mountains, based on air,
Height upon height, aspiring to the last,
Even to Heaven, in sunny snow sheen, up
Stretching like angels' pinions—nor can tell
Which be the loftiest nor the loveliest;
As when an army, wakening with the sun,
Starts to its feet all hope, spear after spear
And line on line reundulating light,
While night's dull watchfires reek themselves away—
So feels the spirit when it first receives
The bright and mountainous mysteries of God,
Containing Heaven, moving themselves towards us,
In their free greatness, as by ships at sea
Come icebergs, pure and pointed as a star
Afar off glittering, of invisible
Depth, and dissolving in the light above.

Festus. My prayer shall be that thy prayer be fulfilled.

I must to earth again. Farewell, sweet soul!

Angela. Farewell! I love thee, and will oft be with thee.

Lucifer. I like earth more than this: I rather love
A splendid failing than a petty good;
Even as the thunderbolt, whose course is downwards,
Is nobler far than any fire which soars.

Festus. I am determined to be good again—
Again? When was I otherwise than ill?
Does not sin pour from my soul like dew from earth.
And, vaporing up before the face of God,
Congregate there, in clouds, between Heaven and me?
What wonder that I lack delight of life?
For it is thus—when amid the world's delights,
How warm soe'er we feel a moment among them—
We find ourselves, when the hot blast hath blown,
Prostrate, and weak, and wretched, even as I am.
I wish that I could leap from off this star,
And dash my soul to atoms like a glass.

Lucifer. I have done nothing for thee yet. Thou shalt
See Heaven, and Hell, and all the sights of space,
Whene'er thou choosest.

Festus. Not then now.

Lucifer. Up! rise!

Festus. No; I'll be good; and will see none of them.
Earth draws us like a loadstone. We are coming.

Scene—A large Party and Entertainment.

Festus, Ladies, and others.

Festus. My Helen! let us rest a while,
For most I love thy calmer smile;
We'll not be missed from this gay throng,
They dance so eagerly and long;
And were one half to go away,
I'll bet the rest would scarce perceive it.

Helen. With thee I either go or stay.
Prepared, the same, to like or leave it.
These two, perhaps, will take our places.
They seem to stand with longing faces.

Festus. Then sit we, love, and sip with me,
And I will teach thyself to thee.
Thy nature is so pure and fine,
'Tis most like wine;
Thy blood, which blushes through each vein,
Rosy champagne;
And the fair skin which o'er it grows,
Bright as its snows.
Thy wit, which thou dost work so well,
Is like cool moselle;
Like madeira, bright and warm,
Is thy smile's charm;
Claret's glory hath thine eye,
Or mine must lie;
But nought can like thy lips possess
Deliciousness;
And now that thou'rt divinely merry,
I'll kiss and call thee sparkling sherry.

Helen. I sometimes dream that thou wilt leave me
Without thy love, even me, lonely;
And oft I think, though oft it grieve me,
That I am not thy one love only:
But I shall always love thee till
This heart, like earth in death, stand still.

Festus. I love thee, and will leave thee never,
Until my soul leave life forever.
If earth can from her children run,
And leave the seasons — leave the sun,—
If yonder stars can leave the sky,
Bright truants from their home in Heaven —
Immortals who deserve to die,
Were death not too good to be given,—
If Heaven can leave and live from God,
And man tread off his cradle clod —
If God can leave the world He sowed,
Right in the heart of space to fade —
Soul, earth, star, Heaven, man, world, and God
May part — not I from thee, sweet maid.
Ah! see again my favorite dance,
See the wavelike line advance;
And now in circles break,
Like raindrops on a lake:
Now it opens, now it closes,
Like a wreath dropping into roses.

HELEN. It is a lovely scene,
Fair as aught on earth;
And we feel, when it hath been,
At heart a dearth;
As from the breaking up of some bright dream —
The failing of a fountain's spray-topped stream.

WILL. Ladies — your leave — we'll choose a Queen
To rule this fair and festive scene.

CHARLES. And it were best to choose by lot,
So none can hold herself forgot.

[They draw lots: it falls to Helen.]
Festus. I knew, my love, how this would be;
I knew that Fate must favor thee.

All. Lady fair! we throne thee Queen!
Be thy sway as thou hast been—
Light, and lovely, and serene.

Festus. Here—wear this wreath! No ruder crown
Should deck that dazzling brow;
Or ask yon halo from the moon—
'Twould well beseeem thee now.
I crown thee, love; I crown thee, love;
I crown thee Queen of me;
And Oh! but I am a happy land,
And a loyal land to thee.
I crown thee, love; I crown thee, love;
Thou art Queen in thine own right!
Feel! my heart is as full as a town of joy:
Look! I've crowded mine eyes with light.
I crown thee, love; I crown thee, love;
Thou art Queen by right divine!
And thy love shall set neither night nor day
O'er this subject heart of mine.
I crown thee, love; I crown thee, love;
Thou art Queen by the right of the strong!
And thou didst but win where thou mightst have slain,
Or have bounden in thraldom long.
I crown thee, love; I crown thee, love;
Thou art my Queen for aye;
As the moon doth Queen the night, my love;
As the night doth crown the day;
I crown thee, love; I crown thee, love;
Queen of the brave and free.
For I'm brave to all beauty but thine, my love;
And free to all beauty by thee.

HELEN. Here, in this court of pleasure, blest to reign,
If not the loveliest, where all are fair,
We still, one hour, our royalty retain,
To out-queen all in kindness and in care.
Love, beauty, honor, bravery, and wit—
Was ever Queen served by such noble slaves?
The peerage of the heart—for Heaven's court fit:
We'll dream no more that earth hath ills or graves.
With mirth, and melody, and love we reign:
Begin we, then, our sweet and pleasurous sway;
And here, though light, so strong is beauty's chain,
That none shall know how blindly they obey.
We have but to lay on one light command—
That all shall do the most what best they love;
And Pleasure hath her punishments at hand,
For all who will not pleasure's rule approve.
But no! there's none of us can disobey,
Since, by our one command, we free ye thus:
And, as our powers must on your pleasures stay—
Support—and you will reign along with us.

FESTUS. Ha! Lucifer! How now?
LUCIFER. I come in sooth to keep my vow.
FESTUS. Thy vow?
LUCIFER. To revel in earth's pleasures,
And tire down mirth in her own measures.
Festus. Go thy ways: I shrink and tremble
To think how deep thou canst dissemble;
For who would dream that in yon breast
The heart of Hell was burning?
Or deem that strange and listless guest
Some priceless spirit earning?
I hear, from every footstep, rise
A trampled spirit's smothered cries.

Charles. Fest, engage fair Marian's hand.

Festus. Pass me; she is free no less
Than I, who by my Queen will stand—
May it please her loveliness!

Helen. Festus, we know the love, and see,
Which was with Marian and thee.

Festus. I will not dance to-night again,
Though bid by all the Queens that reign.

Helen. What, Festus! treason and disloyalty
Already to our gentle royalty?

Festus. No—I was wrong—but to forgive
Be thy sublime prerogative!

Helen. Most amply, then, I pardon thee;
In proof whereof, come, dance with me. [A dance.

Laurence. How sweetly Marian sweeps along!
Her step is music, and her voice is song.
Silver-sandalled foot! how blest
To bear the breathing Heaven above,
Which on thee, Atlas-like, doth rest,
And round thee move.
Ah! that sweet little foot: I swear
I could kneel down and kiss it there.
I should not mind if she were Pope;
I would change my faith.

Charles. Works, too, we hope.

Laurence. Ah! smile on me again with that sweet smile,

Which could from Heaven my soul to thee beguile;
As I mine eye would turn from awful skies
To hail the child of sun and storm arise;
Or, from eve's holy azure, to the star
Which beams and becks the spirit from afar;
For fair as yon star-wreathe which high doth shine,
And worthy but to deck a brow like thine;
Pure as the light from orbs which ne'er
Hath blessed us yet in this far sphere;
As eyes of seraphs lift alone
Through ages on the holy throne;
So bright, so fair, so free from guile,
And freshening to my heart thy smile;
Ay, passing all things here, and all above,
To me, thy look of beauty, truth, and love.

Harry. Thy friend hath led his lady out.

Festus. He looks most wickedly devout.

Fanny. When introduced, he said he knew her,
And had been long devoted to her.

Emma. Indeed—but he is too gallant,
And serves me far more than I want.
He vows that he could worship me—
Why—look! he's now upon his knee!
Lucifer. I quaff to thee this cup of wine,
And would, though men had nought but brine—
E'en the brine of their own tears,
To cool those lying lips of theirs;
And were it all one molten pearl,
I would drain it to thee, girl;
Ay, though each drop were worth of gold
Too many pieces to be sold;
And though, for each I drank to thee,
Fate add an age of misery;
For thou canst conjure up my spirit
To aught immortals may inherit;
To good or evil, woe or weal—
To all that fiends or angels feel;
And wert thou to perdition given,
I'd join thee in the scorn of Heaven!

Emma. Oh fie! to only think of such a fate!

Lucifer. Better than not to think on't till too late.

They'd not believe me, Festus, if I told them,
That Hell, and all its hosts, this hour behold them.

Festus. Scarcely—that Devil here again!
But though my heart burst in the strain,
I will be happy might and main!
So wreathe my brow with flowers,
And pour me purple wine,
And make the merry hours
Dance, dance with glee like thine.
While thus enraptured, I and thou,
Love crowns the heart, as flowers the brow.
The rosy garland twine
Around the noble bowl,
Like laughing loves that shine
Upon the generous soul;
Be mine, dear maid, the loves, and thou
Shalt ever bosom them as now.
Then plunge the blushing wreath
Deep in the ruddy wine.
As the love of thee till death
Is deep in heart of mine.
While both are blooming on my brow,
I cannot be more blest than now.

Lucifer. Thou talk'st of hearts, in style to me, quite fresh:
The human heart's about a pound of flesh.

Festus. Forgive him, love, and aught he says.
Helen. What is that trickling down thy face?
Festus. Oh, love, that is only wine
From the wreath which thou didst twine;
And, casting in the bowl, I bound,
For coolness' sake, my temples round.

Helen. I thought 'twas a thorn which was tearing thy brow;
And if it were only a rose-thorn was tearing,
Why, whether of gold or of roses, as now,
A crown, if it hurts us, is hardly worth wearing.
Lucy. From what fair maid hadst thou that flower?
It came not from my wreath nor me.

Charles. Love lives in thee as in a bower,
And sure this must have dropped from thee—
From thy lip, or from thy cheek:
See, its sister blushes speak.
Nay, never harm the harmless rose,
Though given by a stranger maid:
’Tis sad enough to feel that flower
Feels it must fade.
And trouble not the transient love,
Though by another’s side I sigh;
It is enough to feel the flame
Flicker and die.
And thou to me art flame and flower
Of rosier body, brighter breath;
But softer, warmer than the truth—
As sleep than death.

Festus. The dead of night: earth seems but seeming—
The soul seems but a something dreaming.
The bird is dreaming in its nest,
Of song, and sky, and loved one’s breast;
The lapdog dreams, as round he lies,
In moonshine, of his mistress’ eyes:
The steed is dreaming, in his stall,
Of one long breathless leap and fall.
The hawk hath dreamt him thrice of wings
Wide as the skies he may not cleave:
But waking, feels them clipped, and clings
Mad to the perch 'twere mad to leave:
The child is dreaming of its toys—
The murderer of calm home joys;
The weak are dreaming endless fears—
The proud of how their pride appears:
The poor enthusiast who dies,
Of his life-dreams the sacrifice,
Sees, as enthusiast only can,
The truth that made him more than man;
And hears once more, in visioned trance,
That voice commanding to advance,
Where wealth is gained—love, wisdom won,
Or deeds of danger dared and done.
The mother dreameth of her child—
The maid, of him who hath beguiled—
The youth, of her he loves too well;
The good, of God—the ill, of hell,—
Who live, of death—of life, who die—
The dead, of immortality.
The earth is dreaming back her youth;
Hell never dreams, for woe is truth;
And Heaven is dreaming o'er her prime,
Long ere the morning stars of time;
And dream of Heaven alone can I,
My lovely one, when thou art nigh.
Helen. Let some one sing. Love, mirth, and song,
The graces of this life of ours,
Go ever hand in hand along,
And ask alike each other's powers.

Lucy sings. For every leaf the loveliest flower
Which beauty sighs for from her bower—
For every star a drop of dew—
For every sun a sky of blue—
For every heart a heart as true.

For every tear by pity shed
Upon a fellow-sufferer's head,
Oh! be a crown of glory given;
Such crowns as saints to gain have striven—
Such crowns as seraphs wear in Heaven.

For all who toil at honest fame,
A proud, a pure, a deathless name;
For all who love, who loving bless,
Be life one long, kind, close caress—
Be life all love, all happiness.

Lucifer. Tell me what's the chiefest pleasure
In this world's high-heaped measure?
All. Power—beauty—love—wealth—wine!
Lucifer. All different votes!
Fanny. Come, Frederic — thine? What may thy joy-judgment be?

Frederic. I scarce know how to answer thee; Each, apart, too soon will tire; All together slake desire.

So ask not of me the one chief joy of earth, For that I'm unable to say;

But here is a wreath which will lose its chief worth, If ye pluck but one flower away.

Then these are the joys which should never dispart— The joys which are dearest to me:

As the song, and the dance, and the laugh of the heart, Thou, girl, and the goblet, be.

Lucifer. Oh, excellent! the truth is clear— The one opinion, too, I love to hear.

Helen. Is this a Queen's fate— to be left alone? I wish another had the throne.

Festus! why art thou not here, Beside thy liege and lady dear?

Festus. My thoughts are happier oft than I, For they are ever, love, with thee; And thine, I know, as frequent fly O'er all that severs us, to me;

Like rays of stars that meet in space, And mingle in a bright embrace.

Never load thy locks with flowers, For thy cheek hath a richer flush; And than wine, or the sunset hour, Or the ripe yewberry's blush.
Never braid thy brow with lights,
Like the sun, on his golden way
To the neck and the locks of night,
From the forehead fair of day.
Never star thy hand with stones,
For, for every dead light there,
Is a living glory gone,
Than the brilliant far more fair.
Nay, nay; wear thy buds, braids, gems!
Let the lovely never part;
Thou alone canst rival them,
Or in nature, or in art.
Be not sad;—thou shalt not be:
Why wilt mourn, love, when with me?
One tear that in thy eye could start
Could wash all purpose from my heart,
But that of loving thee;
If I could ever think to wrong
A love so river-like, deep, pure, and long.

HELEN. I cast mine eyes around, and feel
There is a blessing wanting;
Too soon our hearts the truth reveal,
That joy is disenchanting.

FESTUS. I am a wizard, love; and I
A new enchantment will supply;
And the charm of thine own smile
Shall thine own heart of grief beguile.
Smile—I do command thee, rise
From the bright depths of those eyes!
By the bloom wherein thou dwellest,
As in a rose-leaved nest;
By the pleasure which thou tellest,
And the bosom which thou swellest,
I bid thee rise from rest;
By the rapture which thou causest,
And the bliss while e'er thou pausest,
Obey my high behest!

HELEN. Dread magician! Cease thy spell;
It hath wrought both quick and well.

Festus. Ah! thou hast dissolved the charm;
Ah! thou hast outstepped the ring;
Who shall answer for the harm?
Beauty on herself will bring?
Come, I will conjure up again that smile—
The scarce departed spirit. There it is!
Settling and hovering round thy lips the while,
Like some bright angel o'er the gates of bliss,
And I could sit and set that rose-bright smile,
Until it seem to grow immortal there—
A something abstract even of all beauty,
As though 'twere in the eye or in the air.
Ah! never may a heavier shadow rest
Than thine own ringlets' on that brow so fair;
Nor sob, nor sorrow, shake the perfect breast
Which looks for love, as doth for death despair.
And now the smile, the sigh, the blush, the tear—
Lo! all the elements of love are here.
Oh, weep not—wither not the soul
Made saturate with bliss;
I would not have one briny tear
Imbitter beauty's kiss.
Nay, weep not, fear not! woe nor wrath
Can touch a soul like thine,
More than the lightning's blinding path
May strike the stars divine.
Sing, then, while thy lover sips,
And hear the truth that wine discloses;
Music lives within thy lips
Like a nightingale in roses.

Helen sings. Oh! love is like the rose,
And a month it may not see,
Ere it withers where it grows—
Rosalie!
I loved thee from afar;
Oh! my heart was lift to thee
Like a glass up to a star—
Rosalie!

Thine eye was glassed in mine
As the moon is in the sea,
And its shine was on the brine—
Rosalie!

The rose hath lost its red,
And the star is in the sea,
And the briny tear is shed—
Rosalie!
Festus. What the stars are to the night, my love,
What its pearls are to the sea,—
What the dew is to the day, my love,
Thy beauty is to me.

Helen. I am but here the under-queen of beauty,
For yonder hangs the likeness of the goddess;
And so to worship her is our first duty.
The heavenly minds of old first taught the heavenly bodies
Were to be worshipped; and the idolatry
Holds to this hour; though, Beauty! but of thine.
I am thy priestess, and will worship thee,
With all this brave and lovely train of mine;
Lo! we all kneel to thee before thy pictured shrine.
Yes—there, thou goddess of the heart,
Immortal beauty, there!
Thou glory of Jove's free-love skies,
E'en like thyself too fair,
Too bright, too sweet for mortal eyes,
For earthly hearts too strong;
Thy golden girdle lift'st and drawest
The heavens and earth along.
Oh! thou art as the cloudless moon,
Undimmed and unarrayed;
No robe hast thou, no crown save yon—
Goddess! thy long locks' soft and sunbright braid.
And there's thy son, Love—beauty's child—
World-known for strangest powers—
Boy-god! thy place is blest o'er all!
Smil'st thou at thoughts of ours?
And there, by thy luxurious side,
The Queen of Heaven and Jove
Stands; and the deep delirious draught
Drinks, from thy looks, of love,
And lips, which oft have kissed away
The thunders from his brow
Who ruled, men say, the world of worlds,
As God, our God, rules now.
And thou art yet as great o'er this
As erst o'er olden sky;
Of all Heaven's darkened deities
The last live light on high.
God after god hath left thee lone,
Which lived on human breath;
When prayers were breathed to them no more,
The false ones pined to death.
But in the service of young hearts
To loveliness and love;
Live thou shalt while yon wandering world
Named unto thee shall move.
No fabled dream art thou: all god,
Our souls acknowledge thee;
For what would life from love be worth,
Or love from beauty be?
Come, universal beauty, then,
Thou apple of God's eye,
To and through which all things were made—
Things deathless—things that die.
Oh! lighten—live before us there—
Leap in yon lovely form,
And give a soul. She comes! It breathes—
So bright—so sweet—so warm.
Our sacrifice is over: let us rise!
For we have worshipped acceptably here;
And let our glowing hearts and glimmering eyes,
O'erstrained with gazing on thy light too near,
Prove that our worship, Goddess, was sincere!

Festus. I read that we are answered. The soft air
Doubles its sweetness; and the fainting flowers,
Down-hanging on the walls in wreaths so fair,
Bud forth afresh, as in their birthday bowers.
Dew-laden, as oppressed with love and shame,
The rosebud drops upon the lily's breast;
Brighter the wine, the lamps have softer flame,
Thy kiss flows freer than the grape first pressed.

Will. A dance, a dance!

Helen. Let us remain!

Festus. We will not tempt your sport again.

Helen. Behold where Marian sits alone,
The dance all sweeping round,
Like to some goddess hewn in stone,
With blooming garlands bound.

Festus. Tell me, Marian, what those eyes
Can discover in the skies?—
Those eyes, that look, so bright, so sweet their hue,
As they had gained from gazing on that view
The high and starry beauty of their blue.
Marian. For earth my soul hath lost all love,
But Heaven still loves and watches o'er me;
Why should I not, then, look above,
And pass and pity all before me?

Festus. Oh! if yon worlds that shine o'er this
Have more of joy — of passion less —
I would not change earth's checkered bliss
For thrice the joys those orbs possess;
Which seem so strange their nature is,
Faint with excess of happiness.

Marian. Thy heart with others hath its rest,
And it shall wake with me;
And if within another breast
Thy heart hath made itself a nest,
Mine is no more for thee.
Heart-breaker, go! I cannot choose
But love thee, and thy love refuse;
And if my brow grow lined while young,
And youth fly cheated from my cheek,
'Tis, that there lies below my tongue
A word I will not speak;
For I would rather die than deem
Thou art not the glory thou didst seem.
But if ingirt by flood or fire,
Who would live that could expire?
Who would not dream, and dreaming die,
If to wake were misery?

Festus. Whose woes are like to my woes? What is madness?
The mind, exalted to a sense of ill,
Soon sinks beyond it into utter sadness,
And sees its grief before it like a hill.
Oh! I have suffered till my brain became Distinct with woe, as is the skeleton leaf
Whose green hath fretted off its fibrous frame,
And bare to our immortality of grief.

Marian. Like the light line that laughter leaves
One moment on a bright, young brow;
So truth is lost ere love believes;
There can be aught save truth below.

Festus. But as the eye aye brightlier beams
For every fall the lid lets on it,
So oft the fond heart happier dreams
For the soft cheats love puts upon it.

Marian. I never dreamed of wretchedness;
I thought to love meant but to bless.

Festus. It once was bliss to me to watch
Thy passing smile, and sit and catch
The sweet contagion of thy breath—
For love is catching—from such teeth;
Delicate little pearl-white wedges,
All transparent at the edges.

Marian. False flatterer, cease!

Festus. It is my fate
To love, and make who love me hate.

Marian. No! 'tis to sue—to gain—deceive—
To tire of—to neglect—and leave:
The desolation of the soul
Is what I feel—
A sense of lostness that leaves death
But little to reveal;
For death is nothing but the thought
Of something being again nought.

HELEN. Cease, lady, cease those aching sighs,
Which shake the tear-drops from thine eyes,
As morning wind, with wing fresh wet,
Shakes dew out of the violet.
Forgive me, if the love once thine
Hath changed itself unsought to me;
I did not tempt it from thy heart,
I nothing knew of thee;
And soon, perchance, 'twill be my part,
As thou now art, to be.

MARIAN. I blame no heart, no love, no fate,
And I have nothing to forgive;
I wish for nought, repent of nought,
Dislike nought but to live.

HELEN. Nay, sing; it will relieve thy heart.

MARIAN. I cannot sing a mirthful strain;
And feel too much to act my part,
E'en of an ebbing vein.

FESTUS. Our hearts are not in our own hands
Why wilt thou make me say
I cannot love as once I loved?

MARIAN. Hear!—'tis for this I stay—
To say we part—forever part;
But, Oh! how wide the line
Between thy Marian's bursting heart
And that proud heart of thine.
And thou wilt wander here and there,
Ever the gay and free;
To other maids will fondly swear,
As thou hast sworn to me;
And I—Oh! I shall but retire
Into my grief alone;
And kindle there the hidden fire,
That burns, that wastes unknown.
And love and life shall find their tomb
In that sepulchral flame:
Be happy—none shall know for whom—
I will not dream thy name.

Festus. As sings the swan with parting breath,
So I to thee;
While love is leaving—worse than life—
Forewarningly.
Speak not, nor think thou, any ill of me,
If thou wouldst not die soon and wretchedly.
I cannot waver on my path
To shun fair lady's love or wrath.
Nor condescend the world to undeceive
Which doth delight in error and believe.
Thus then farewell, dear lady, ere I go:
And dearly have I earned my lightest woe.

Oh! if we e'er have loved, lady,
We must forego it now;
Though sore the heart be moved, lady,
When bound to break its vow.
I'll alway think on thee,
And thou sometimes—on whom, lady?
And yet those thoughts must be
Like flowers flung on the tomb, lady.
Then think that I am blest, lady,
Though aye for thee I sigh;
In peace and beauty rest, lady,
Nor mourn and mourn as I.

From one we love to part, lady,
Is harder than to die;
I see it by thy heart, lady,
I feel it by thine eye.
Thy lightest look can tell
Thy heaviest thought to me, lady;
Oh! I have loved thee well,
But well seems ill with thee, lady;
Though sore the heart be moved, lady,
When bound to break its vow—
Yet if we ever loved, lady,
We must forego it now.—

LUCIFER. Come, I must separate you two:
Such wretchedness will never do.
The little cloud of grief which just appears,
If left to spread, will drown us all in tears,
EMMA. Oblige us, pray, then, with a song.
Charles. I am sure he has a singing face.
Will. At church I heard him loud and long.
Lucifer. Pardon—but you are doubly wrong.
Helen. Obey, I beg. Here—give him place.
Lucifer. I have not sung for ages, mind;
So you must take me as you find.
This is a song supposed of one—
A fallen spirit—name unknown—
Fettered upon his fiery throne—
Calling on his once angel-love,
Who still remaineth true above.

[Sings.

Thou hast more music in thy voice
Than to the spheres is given,
And more temptations on thy lips
Than lost the angels Heaven.
Thou hast more brightness in thine eyes
Than all the stars which burn,
More dazzling art thou than the throne
We fallen dared to spurn.

Go, search through Heaven—the sweetest smile
That lightens there is thine;
And through Hell's burning darkness breaks
No frown so fell as mine.
One smile—'twill light; one tear—'twill cool;
These will be more to me
Than all the wealth of all the worlds,
Or boundless power could be.
Helen. Entreat him, pray, to sing again.

Lucifer. Any thing any one desires.

Festus. Your loveliness hath but to deign
To will, and he'll do all that will requires.

Lucifer sings. Oh! many a cloud
Hath lift its wing,
And many a leaf
Hath clad the spring;
But there shall be thrice
The leaf and cloud,
And thrice shall the world
Have worn her shroud,
Ere there's any like thee.
But where thou wilt be.

Oh! many a storm
Hath drenched the sun,
And many a stream
To sea hath run;
But there shall be thrice
The storm and stream,
Ere there's any like thee,
But in angel's dream;
Or in look, or in love,
But in Heaven above.

Lucy. What is love? Oh! I wonder so.
Do tell me—who pretends to know?
F R A N K. Ask not of me, love, what is love!
Ask what is good of God above—
Ask of the great sun what is light—
Ask what is darkness of the night—
Ask sin of what may be forgiven—
Ask what is happiness of Heaven—
Ask what is folly of the crowd—
Ask what is fashion of the shroud—
Ask what is sweetness of thy kiss—
Ask of thyself what beauty is;—
And, if they each should answer, I!
Let me, too, join them with a sigh.
Oh! let me pray my life may prove,
When thus, with thee, that I am love.

F E S T U S. I cannot love as I have loved,
And yet I know not why;
It is the one great woe of life
To feel all feeling die:
And one by one the heartstrings snap,
As age comes on so chill;
And hope seems left that hope may cease,
And all will soon be still.
And the strong passions, like to storms,
Soon rage themselves to rest,
Or leave a desolated calm—
A worn and wasted breast;
A heart that like the Geyser spring,
Amidst its bosomed snows,
May shrink, not rest—but with its blood
Boils even in repose.
And yet the things one might have loved
Remain as they have been,—
Truth ever lovely, and one heart
Still sacred and serene;
But lower, less, and grosser things
Eclipse the world-like mind,
And leave their cold, dark shadow where
Most to the light inclined.
And then it ends as it began,
The orbit of our race,
In pains and tears, and fears of life,
And the new dwelling-place.
From life to death—from death to life
We hurry round to God,
And leave behind us nothing but
The path that we have trod.

Helen. In vain I try to lure thy heart
From grief to mirth;
It were as easy to ward off
Night from the earth.

Festus. Fill! I'll drink it till I see—
Helen's lip and Helen's eye!
An eye which outsparkles
The beads of the wine,
With a hue which outdarkles
The deeps where they shine.
Come! with that lightly flushing brow,
And darkly splendid eye,
And white and wavy arms which now,
Like snow-wreaths on the dark, brown bough,
So softly on me lie.
Come! let us love, while love we may,
Ere youth's bright sands be run;
The hour is nigh when every soul
Which 'scapeth Evil's dread control,
Nor drains the Furies' fiery bowl,
Shall into Heaven for aye,
And love its God alone.

HELEN. Now let me leave my throne; and if the hours
Have measured every moment by a kiss,
As I do think, since first ye gave these flowers,
It was to teach us how to dial bliss.
Farewell, dear crown, thy mistress will not wear,
Save when she sitteth royally alone.
Farewell, too, throne! not quickly wilt thou bear
A happier form, if fairer than mine own.

WILL. The ladies leave us!

LUCIFER. Oh! by all means let them;
But say, for Heaven itself, we'll not forget them;
Say we will pledge them to the top of breath,
As loud as thunder, and as deep as death.

FESTUS, apart. Where is thy grave, my love?
I want to weep.
High as thou art this earth above,
My woe is deep;
And my heart is cold as is thy grave,
Where I can neither soothe nor save.
Whate'er I say, or do, or see,
I think and feel alone to thee.
Oh! can it—can it be forgiven,
That I forget thou art in Heaven?
Thou wilt forgive me this, and more:
Love spends his all, and still hath store.
Thou wilt forgive, if beauty's wile
Should win, perforce, one glance from me;
When they, whose art it is to smile,
Can never smile my heart from thee;
And if with them I chance to be,
And give mine ear up to their singing,
It, wind-like, only wakes the sea,
In all its mad monotony,
Of memory forth thy music ringing.
Thou wilt forgive, if now and then
I link with hands less loved than thine;
Whose gold-like touch makes kings of men,
But wakes no will in blood of mine;
And if with them I toss the wine,
And set my soul in love's ripe riot,
It echoes not—this desert shrine,
Where still thy love from Heaven doth shine,
Moon-like, across some ruin's quiet.
Thou wilt forgive me, if my feet
Should move to music with the fair;
When, at each turn, I burn to meet
Thy stream-like step and airy air;
And if, before some beauty there,
Mine eye may forge one glance of gladness,
It is but the ripple of despair,
That shows the bed is all but bare,
And nought scarce left but stony sadness.
Thou wilt forgive, if e'er my heart
Err from the orbit of its love;
When even the bliss-bright stars will start
Earthwards, some lower sphere to prove.
Thou wilt forgive, if soft, white arms
Embrace, by fits, this breast of mine;
When, while amid their pillowy charms,
My heart can kiss no heart but thine;
And if these lips but rarely pine
In the pale abstinence of sorrow,
It is, that nightly I divine,
As I this world-sick soul recline,
I shall be with thee ere the morrow.
Thou wilt forgive, if once with thee
I limned the outline of a Heaven;
But go and tell our God, from me,
He must forgive what He hath given;
And, if we be by passion driven
To love, and all its natural madness,
Tell Him, that man by love hath thriven,
And that by love he shall be shriven;
For God is love, where love is gladness.
Thou wilt forgive, if clay-bound mind
Can scarce discover that thou art;
But wait! I feel the outward wind
Rush fresh into my fluttering heart.
Perchance thy spirit stays in yon mild star
In peace, and flame-like purity, and prayer;
And, Oh! when mine shall fly from earth afar,
I will pray God that it may join thine there;
'Twere doubling Heaven, that Heaven with thee to share.
And, while thou leadest music and her lyre,
Like a sunbeam holden by its golden hair,
May I, too, mingling with the immortal choir,
Love thee, and worship God! what more may soul desire?
Enough for me; but, if there be
More, it shall be left for thee.

Walter. If any thing I love in chief,
It is that flowery, rich relief
That wine doth chase on mortal metal
Before good wine begins to settle;
But all seem smilingly, serenely dull,
And melancholy as the moon at full.
Quenched by their company they seem,
Like sparks of fire in clouds of steam.

Charles. They who mourn the lack of wit,
Show, at least, no more of it.

Festus. I cannot bear to be alone,
I hate to mix with men;
To me there's torture in the tone
Which bids me talk again.
Like silly nestlings, warned in vain,
My heart's young joys have flown;
While singing to them, even then,
They left me one by one.
I envy every soul that dies
Out of this world of care:
I envy e'en the lifeless skies,
That they enshrine thee there;
And would I were the bright blue air
Which doth insphere thine eyes,
That thou mightst meet me every where,
And feel these faithful sighs.
E'en as the bubble that is mixed
Of air and wine right red,
So my heart's love is shared betwixt
The living and the dead.
If on her breast I lay my head,
My heart on thine is fixed:—
Wilt thou I loose, as I have said,
Or keep the soul thou seek'st?
From me thou canst not pass away
While I have soul or sight;—
I see thee on my waking way,
And in my dreams thee bright;
I see thee in the dead of night,
And the full life of day;
I know thee by a sudden light;
It is thy soul, I say.
If yonder stars be filled with forms
Of breathing clay like ours,
Perchance the space that spreads between
Is for a spirit's powers;
And loving as we two have loved
In spirit and in heart,
Whether to space or star removed,
God will not bid us part.

Frank. As to this seat—its late and fair possessor
Should, ere she went, have chosen her successor.

Festus. In right of her who sat thereon,
I think I might demand the throne;
I rather choose to let it be.

All. George shall be King of the company!

George. My loving subjects! I shall first promulge
A few good rules by which to indulge;
They are good, according to my thinking,
And shall be held the laws of drinking.
First—each man shall do what he chooses,
Provided that he ne'er refuses,
But shall be sworn, by stand and stopper,
To drink as much as I think proper.

Will. Stay!—all of you who think, with me,
This law should pass,
Will please to signify the same
By emptying their glass.
Walter. Filling again and emptying, and so on, At each law—pari passu, as we go on. George. Secondly—no man shall be held as mellow Who can distinguish blue from yellow. Thirdly—no man shall miss his turn nor toast, Nor yet give more than two at once, at most. Fourthly—if one at table should fall under, There let him lie—so much extinguished thunder. Fifthly—let all, in such case, who still stay, Like living lightnings, but the brighter play. Sixthly, and last but one—mind this, there shan't Be aught said that is not irrelevant. Seventhly—if any of these edicts should not Be kept, it shall be good to plead, I would not. Charles. Oh, let the royal law Be writ in rosy wine! And read and kept At every feast Where wit and mirth combine. Festus. How sweetly shine the steadfast stars, Each eyeing, sister-like, the earth; And softly chiding scenes like this, Of senseless and profaning mirth. Lucifer. Thou art ever prating of the stars Like an old soldier of his scars; Thou shouldst have been a starling, friend, And not an earthling: end!
Festus. And could I speak as many times
Of each as there are stars in Heaven,
I could not utter half the thoughts—
The sweet thoughts one to me hath given.
The holy quiet of the skies
May waken well the blush of shame,
Where'er we think that thither lies
The Heaven we heed not—ought not name.
O Heaven! let down thy cloudy lids,
And close thy thousand eyes;
For each, in burning glances, bids
The wicked fool be wise.

Lucifer. I can interpret well the stars.

Charles. Indeed! they need interpreters.

Lucifer. Then thus, in their eternal tongue
And musical thunders, all have sung
To every ear which ear hath given,
From birth to death, this note of Heaven:—
Deathlings! on earth drink, laugh, and love!
Ye mayn't hereafter—under or above.
Yes, this the tale they all have told,
Since first they made old Chaos shrink—
Since first they flocked creation's fold,
And filled all air like flakes of gold
Which drop yon royal drink:
For as the moon doth madmen rule,
It is, that near and few they are;
And so in Heaven each single star
Doth sway some reasonable fool,
Whether on earth or other sphere;
For what's above is what is here.
Moons and madmen only change;
What can truth or stars derange?

Edward. Brave stars, bright monitors of joy!
Right well ye time your hours of warning;
For, sooth to say, the eve's employ
Doth wax less lovely towards the morning.
So push the goblet gayly round—
Drink deep of its wealth—drink on!
Our earthly joy too soon doth cloy,
Our life is all but gone;
And, not enjoy yon glorious cup,
And all the sweets which lie,
Like pearls, within its purple well—
Who would not hate to die?

Will. And who, without the cheering glance
Of woman's witching eye,
Could stand against the storms of fate,
Or cankering care defy?
It adds fresh brightness to the bowl;
Then why will men repine?
Content we'll live with Heaven's best gifts—
With women, and with wine.

Harry. Cups while they sparkle—
Maids while they sigh;
Bright eyes will darkle—
Lips grow dry.
Cheek while the dew-drops
Water its rose;
Life's fount hath few drops
Dear as those.
Arms while they tighten—
Hearts as they heave;
Love cannot brighten
Life's dark eve.

George. Oh! the wine is like life;
And the sparkles that play
By the lips of the bowl
Are the loves of the day.
Then kiss the bright bubble
That breaks in its rise;
Oh! love is a trouble,
As light when it dies.

Charles. Let the young be glad! though cares in crowds
Leave scarce a break of blue,
Yet hope gives wings to morning clouds;
And while their shade the sky enshrouds—
By love and wine, which through them shine—
They are turned to a golden hue.
Then give us wine, for we ought to shine
In the hour of dark and dew.

Festus. Well might the thoughtful race of old
With ivy twine the head
Of him they hailed their god of wine,—
Thank God! the lie is dead;
For ivy climbs the crumbling hall
To decorate decay;
And spreads its dark, deceitful pall
To hide what wastes away.
And wine will circle round the brain
As ivy o'er the brow,
Till what could once see far as stars
Is dark as Death's eye now.
Then dash the cup down! 'tis not worth
A soul's great sacrifice:
The wine will sink into the earth,
The soul, the soul—must rise.

Charles. A toast!

Frederic. Here's beauty's fairest flower—
The maiden of our own birth-land!

Harry. Pale face!—Oh for one happy hour
To hold my splendid Spaniard's hand!

Festus. Why differ on which is the fairest form,
When all are the same the heart to warm?
Although by different charms they strike,
Their power is equal and alike.
Ye bigots of beauty! behold I stand forth,
And drink to the lovely all over the earth.
Come, fill to the girl by the Tagus' waves!
Wherever she lives there's a land of slaves.
And here's to the Scot! with her deep-blue eye,
Like the far-off lochs 'neath her hill-propped sky.
To her of the Green Isle! whose tyrants deform
The land, where she beams like the bow in the storm.
To the Norman! so nobly, and stately, and tall;
Whose charms, ever changing, can please as they pall
Two bowls in a breath! here's to each and to all!
Come, fill to the English! whose eloquent brow
Says, pleasure is passing, but coming, and now;
Oh! her eyes o'er the wine are like stars o'er the sea,
And her face is the face of all Heaven to me.
And here's to the Spaniard! that warm, blooming maid,
With her step superb, and her black locks' braid.
To her of dear Paris! with soul-spending glance,
Whose feet, as she's sleeping, look dreaming a dance.
To the maiden whose lip like a roseleaf is curled,
And her eye like the star-flag above it unfurled!
Here's to beauty, young beauty, all over the world!

WILL. Hurrah! a glorious toast;
'Twould warm a ghost.

FESTUS. It moves not me. I cannot drink
The toast I have given.
There!—Earth may pledge it, and she will—
Herself and her beauty to Heaven.
Drink to the dead—youth's feelings vain!
Drink to the heart—the battered wreck,
Hurled from all passions' stormy main!
Though aye the billows o'er it break,
The ruin rots, nor rides again.

CHARLES. Friend of my heart! away with care,
And sing, and dance, and laugh;
To love, and to the favorite fair,
The wine-cup ever quaff.
Oh, drink to the lovely! whatever they are,
Though fair as snow—as light;
For whether or falling, or fixed the star,
They both are heavenly bright.
Out upon Care! he shall not stay
Within a heart like thine;
There's nought in Heaven or earth can weigh Down youth, and love, and wine.
Then drink with the merry! though we must die,
Like beauty's tear we'll fall;
We have lived in the light of a loved one's eye,
And to live, love, and die is all.

Festus. Vain is the world and all it boasts:
How brief love's, pleasure's date!
We turn the bowl and all forget
The bias of our fate.

George. How goes the enemy?
Lucifer. What can he mean?
Festus. He asks the hour.
Lucifer. Aha! then I
Advise, if Time thy foe hath been,
Be quick! shake hands, man, with Eternity.
Scene — A Churchyard.

Festus and Lucifer beside a Grave.

Festus. Let years crowd on, and age bow down
My body to the earth which gave,
As yon gray, worn out, crumbling stone
Dips o'er the grave!
What though for me no music thrill,
Nor mirth delight, nor beauty move;
Though the heart stiffen and wax still,
And make no love;
Still, deep and bright, like river gold,
Imbedded here thy soul shall lie—
Sun-grains, that with the sands are rolled,
Of memory.
Shall that soul never burst the tomb,
Draped in long robes of living light?
Or, worm-like, alway eat the gloom
And dust of night?

Lucifer. Oh! life in sporting on earth lies,
Till death share up the rich, green sod;
But if the spirit lives or dies,
Why try ye God?
What should it never smile nor sigh
From cheeks or lips but those beneath?
Doth love not weigh the world's vast lie?
Doth life not death?
Festus. I ask why man should suffer death?

Lucifer. Answer—what right to life hath he?

God gives and takes away your breath:
What more have ye?

Breath is your life, and life your soul;
Ye have it warm from His kind hands:
Then yield it back to the great Whole
When He demands.

Why, deathling, wilt thou long for Heaven?

Why seek a bright, but blinding way?

Go, thank thy God that He hath given
Night upon day:

Go, thank thy God that thou hast lived,

And ask no more: 'tis all He gave:
'Tis all there needs to be believed—

God and the grave.

Festus. For Thee, God, will I save my heart;
For Thee my nature's honor keep;
Then, soul and body, all or part—
Rest, wake, or sleep!

Scene—Space.

Festus and Lucifer.

Festus. Listen! I hear the harmonies of Heaven,
From sphere to sphere, and from the boundless round.
Reëchoing bliss to those serenest heights.
Where angels sit and strike their emulous harps,
Wreathed round with flowers and diamonded with dew;
Such dew as gemmed the ever-during blooms
Of Eden winterless, or as all night
The Tree of Life wept from its every leaf
Unwithering. And now, methinks I hear
The music of the murmur of the stream
Which, through the Bridal City of the Lord,
Floweth all life forever; and the breath
Through the star-shading branches of that Tree,
Transplanted now to Heaven, but once on earth,
Whose fruit is for all beings—breathed of God.
Oh! breathe on me, inspiring spirit-breath!
Oh! flow to me, ye heart-reviving waves;
Freshen the faded soul that droops and dies.

Lucifer. The universe is but the gate of Heaven.
Lo! from this highest orb, the crown of space
And footstool unto Heaven, we can look up
And gain a glimpse of glory unconceived.

Festus. See how yon angels stretch their shining arms;
Wave their star-hunting wings, which gleam like glass,
And locks that look like Morning's when she comes Triumphant in the East. Is this their joy
O'er some world penitent?

Lucifer. Lo! there it rides;
Blest to discharge on Heaven's all-peaceful shores
Its long-accumulated load of life,
Its deathless freight,—pilgrims of time and space.
Yon guilty orb of hesitating light
Slow looming, there, on its dark path, goes up
At the forewritten-hour, as do all worlds
To God, to judgment; and the earthquake groans
Which rend its adamantine breast forebode
Its agonizing doom.

Festus. And doth not Heaven
Grieve with the lost, as gladden with the saved?

Lucifer. How many immortals mourn at the decree
Of righteous wisdom, which alone to them
Is bliss sufficient, being infinite?

Festus. If God hath made all, He alone it is
Who hath to answer for all.

Lucifer. He hath made.
To secondary natures it seems just
That justice should be realized, and there
Is one example extant in the skies.

Festus. But wherefore did it not repent in time?

Lucifer. What unto us is time, stands before God
Eternity. Repentance is the grief
For, and effectual abstinence from sin,
Which secondary natures, without God,
Cannot attain to.

Festus. Cloudy and clear by turns
Thy words as Heaven. I know not what to think,
Nor how to act.
Lucifer. It is natural; and none
Can aim or hit but as appointed them.
There is but one great sinner,—human nature,—
Predict of every world, and predicate:
The wicked one,—the enemy of God,—
To be destroyed in the eternal fire
Of His wrath, even thus in Deity—
In whom as they begin must all things end.
God loveth only His own spirit, so
All that is base shall perish. From the first
These things were fixed, and are and aye shall be Consummating, and are revealed as writ
In words always fulfilled, and burning truth
Under the buried basements of the skies;
Which, after overthrown, shall reappear.
The unenlightened mind sees Deity
In all things, but the spiritual soul
All things in God. Now, ere we higher rise,
Look downwards from this coping of the world,
And know that down to the profoundest depth
Of utter space, where not an atom mars
The void invisible, it were easier far
To cast a line and calculate its rate,
Or pierce all space, nor cross the path of light,
Than fathom man's dark heart, or sound his soul.
Scene—Heaven.

Lucifer and Festus entering.

The Archangels. Infinite God! Thy will is done:
The world's last sand is all but run:
The night is feeding on the sun.
Lucifer. All-being God! I come to Thee again,
Nor come alone. Mortality is here.
Thou bad'st me do my will, and I have dared
To do it. I have brought him up to Heaven.

God.
Thou canst not do what is not willed to be;
Suns are made up of atoms, Heaven of souls;
And souls and suns are but the atoms of
The body I, God, dwell in. What wilt thou
With him who is here with thee?

Lucifer. Show him God.

God.
No being, upon part of whom the curse
Of death rests—were it only on his shadow,
Can look on God and live.

Lucifer. Look, Festus, look!

Festus. Eternal fountain of the Infinite,
On whose life-tide the stars seem strewn like bubbles,
Forgive me that an atomy of being
Hath sought to see its Maker face to face.
I have seen all Thy works and wonders; passed
From star to star, from space to space, and feel
That to see all which can be seen is nothing,
And not to look on Thee, the Invisible.
The spirits that I met all seemed to say,
As on they sped upon their starward course,
And slackened their lightning wings one moment o'er me,
I could not look on God, whate'er I was.
And thou didst give this spirit at my side
Power to make me more than them—immortal.
So, when we had winged through Thy wide world of things,
And seen stars made and saved, destroyed and judged,
I said,—and trembled lest Thou shouldst not hear me,
And make Thyself rig'd ready to forgive,—
I will see God, before I die, in Heaven.
Forgive me, Lord!

G O D.

Rise, mortal! look on me.

F E S T U S. Oh! I see nothing but like dazzling darkness.

L U C I F E R. I knew how it would be. I am away.

F E S T U S. I am Thy creature, God! Oh, slay me not,

But let some angel take me, or I die.

G E N I U S. Come hither, Festus.

F E S T U S. Who art thou?

G E N I U S. I am
One who hath aye been by thee from thy birth,
Thy guardian angel, thy good genius.
Festus. I knew thee not till now.
Genius. I am never seen
In the earth's low, thick light; but here in Heaven,
And in the air which God breathes, I am clear.
I tell to God each night thy thoughts and deeds;
And watching o'er thee both on earth and here,
Pray unto Him for thee and intercede.
Festus. And this is Heaven. Lead on. Will God forgive
That I did long to see Him?
Genius. It is the strain
Of all high spirits towards Him. Thou couldst not,
Even if thou wouldst, behold God; masked in dust,
Thine eye did light on darkness; but when dead,
And the dust shaken off the shining essence,
God shall glow through thee as through living glass,
And every thought and atom of thy being
Shall guest His glory, be over-bright with God.
Hadst thou not been by faith immortalized
For the instant, then thine eye had been thy death.
Come, I will show thee Heaven and all angels.
Lo! the recording angel.
Festus. Him I see
High-seated, and the pen within his hand
Plumed like a storm-portending cloud which curves
Half over Heaven, and swift, in use divine,
As is a warrior's spear!
GENIUS. The book, wherein
Are writ the records of the universe,
Lies like a world laid open at his feet.
And there, the Book of Life, which holds the names,
Formed out in starry brilliants, of God's sons,—
The spirit-names which angels learn by heart,
Of worlds beforehand. Wilt thou see thine own?

FESTUS. My name is written in the Book of Life.
It is enough. That constellated word
Is more to me and clearer than all stars,
Henceforward and for aye.

GENIUS. Raise still thine eyes!
Thy gleaming throne! hewn from that mount of light
Which was before created light or night
Never created, Heaven's eternal base,
Whereon God's throne is 'established. Sit on it!

FESTUS. Nay, I will forestall nothing more than sight.

GENIUS. Turn, then, and view yon streams where spirits sport
Quaffing immortal life, preparing aye
For higher and intenser being still.
These are the upper fountains of the Heavens,
The emanations of Eternity;
By washing them in which they purify
Their eyes to penetrate the essential light
In all things hidden, seen alone by eyes
Fire-spirited, ethereally clear,
Which, like the fabled stone, conceived of fire,
Son of the sun, transmutes all seen to soul.
And such the bliss and power reserved for man;
Yet but the surface-shadow canst thou see.
The substance is to be. Behold yon group
Of spirits blest! In their divinest eyes
The Spirit speaks, and shows that in their own
All doubt and want hath ceased, as death hath ceased
Hither they come, rejoicing, marvelling.

Festus. How all with kindly wonder look on me!
Mayhap I tell of earth to their pure sense.
Some seem as if they knew me. I know none.
But how claim kinship with the glorified
Unless with them like-glorified? Yet, yes—
It is—it must be;—that angelic spirit!—
My heart outruns me—mother! see thy son.
Ange1. Child, how art thou here?
Festus. God hath let me come.
Ange1. Hast thou not come unbidden and unprepared?
Festus. Forgive me, if it be so. I am come.
And I have ever said there are two who will Forgive me aught I do—my God and thou!
Ange1. I do!—may He!
Festus. Dear mother, thou art blessed;
And I am blessed, too, in knowing thee.
Ange1. Son of my hopes on earth and prayers in Heaven!
The love of God! Oh, it is infinite,
Even as our imperfection. Promise, child,
That thou wilt love Him more and more for this,
And for His boundless kindness thus towards me.
Now, my son, hear me! for the hours of Heaven
Are not as those of earth; and all is all
But lost that is not given unto God.
Oft have I seen with joy thy thoughts of Heaven,
And holy hopes, which track the soul with light,
Rise from dead doubts within thy troubled breast,
As souls of drownéd bodies from the sea,
Upwards to God, and marked them so received,
That Oh! my soul hath overflowed with rapture
As now thine eye with tears. But Oh! my son
Beloved! fear thou ever for thy soul!
It yet hath to be saved. Nought perfect stands
But that which is in Heaven. God is all-kind;
And long time hath He made thee think of Him;
Think on Him yet in time. Ere I left earth,
With the last breath which air would spare for me,
With the last look which light would bless me with,
I prayed thou mightst be happy and be wise—
And half the prayer I brought myself to God—
And lo! thou art unhappy and unwise.

Festus. Blessed one! I rejoice that thou art clear,
And all who have cared for me, of my misdeeds.
Thy spirit was on those who nurtured me.
All word and practice that could be of good
Was given me; so that my sin is splendid.
Yes! if I have sinned, I have sinned sublimely;
And I am glad I suffer for my faults.
I would not if I might be bad and happy.

Angel. God laughs at ill by man made, and allows it.

The vaunt of mountainous evil and the power To challenge Heaven from a molehill, child!

Festus. God hath made but few better hearts than mine,

However much it fail in the wise ways Of the world, as living in the dull, dark streets Of forms and follies wherein men build themselves.

Angel. The goodness of the heart is shown in deeds Of peacefulness and kindness. Hand and heart Are one thing with the good as thou shouldst be.

The splendor of corruption hath no power Nor vital essence; and content in sin Shows apathy, not satisfied control.

Do my words trouble thee? Then treasure them. Pain overgot gives peace, as death does Heaven.

All things that speak of Heaven speak of peace. Peace hath more might than war. High brows are calm.

Great thoughts are still as stars; and truths, like suns,

Stir not; though many systems tend round them. Mind's step is still as Death's; and all great things Which cannot be controlled, whose end is good.

Behold yon throne! there, Love, Faith, Hope are one!
There judgment, righteousness, and mercy make
One and the same thing. God's salvation is
His vengeance, and his wrath glory, as on earth
Destruction restoration to the pure.

Humanity is perfected in Heaven.

Festus. I did not make myself, nor plan my soul.
I am no angel nursed in the lap of light,
Nor fed on milk immortal of the stars,
Nor golden fruit grown in the summery suns.
How am I answerable for my heart?
It is my master, and is free with me,
As fixed with fate, even as a star which moves,
Yet moveth only on a certain course
In certain mode;—its liberties are laws,
Its laws tyrannic; I cannot hinder it,
It cannot hinder God. All that we do
Or bear is settled from eternity;
Whereof is no beginning, midst, nor end.
To act, is ours; quite sure, whate'er we do,
Whether it be for our own good or ill,
Or others' ill or good, it is for God's
Glory—the same and always: it is ordered.
The soul is but an organ, and it hath
No power of good and evil in itself,
More than the eye hath power of light or dark.
God fitted it for good; and evil is
Good in another way we are not skilled in.
The good we do is of His own good will,—
The ill, of His own letting. Doth not nature—
All light in life, shine marsh-like, too, in death?
Yea, wandering fires wait even on rottenness,
Like a stray gleam of thought in an idiot’s brain.
And thus I look on souls that seem decaying
In sin, and flying off by elements.
All may not live again; but all which do
Must change perpetually e’en in Heaven;
And not by death to death, but life to life.

Angel. No! Step by step, and throne by throne, we rise
Continually towards the Infinite,
And ever nearer—never near—to God.

Festus. Yet merit or demerit none I see
In nature, human or material,
In passions or affections good or bad.
We only know that God’s best purposes
Are oftenest brought about by dreadest sins.
Is thunder evil, or is dew divine?
Does virtue lie in sunshine, sin in storm?
Is not each natural, each needful, best?
How know we what is evil from what good?
Wrath and revenge God claimeth as His own.
And yet men speculate on right and wrong
As upon day and night, forgetting both
Have but one cause, and that the same—God’s will;
Originally, ultimately Him.
All right is right divine. A worm hath rights
A king cannot despoil him of, nor sin;
Yet wrongs are things necessitate, like wants,
And oft are well permitted to best ends.
A double error sometimes sets us right.
In man there is no rule of right and wrong
Inherent as mere man. Why, conscience is
The basest thing of all. Its life is passed
In justifying and condemning sin;
Accomplice, traitor, judge, and headsman, too.
But conscience knows its business and performs.
Nothing is lost in nature; and no soul,
Though buried in the centre of all sin,
Is lost to God; but there it works His will
And burns conformably. The weakest things
Are to be made the examples of His might;
The most defective, of His perfect grace,
Whene'er He thinketh well. Oh! every thing
To me seems good, and lovely, and immortal;
The whole is beautiful; and I can see
Nought wrong in man nor nature, nought not meant;
As from His hands it comes who fashions all,
All holy as His word. The world is but
A revelation. He breathes Himself upon us
Before our birth, as o'er the formless void
He moved at first, and we are all inspired
With His spirit. All things are God, or of God.
For the whole world is in the mind of God
What a thought is in ours. Why boast we then
Of aught? All that is good belongs to God;
And good and God are all things, or shall be.

Angel. There lacks in souls like thine unsaved, unraised,
The light within — the light of perfectness —
Such as there is in Heaven. The soul hath sunk
And perished like a light-house in the sea;
It is for God to raise it and rebuild.

Genius. And his, thy son's, He will raise. Since with me,
I have shown him infinite wonders: we have oped
And scanned the golden scroll of Fate, wherein
Are writ, in God's own hand, all things which happen.
There we have seen the record of his being —
His long temptation, sin, and suffering.

Festus. And hear it, O beloved and blessed one!
Mine own salvation!

Angel. God is great in love;
Infinite in His nature, power, and grace;
Creating, and redeeming, and destroying —
Infinite infinitely. But in love —
Oh! it is the truth transcendent over all —
When thus to one poor spirit He gives His hand,
He seems to impart His own unboundedness
Of bliss. We seem to be hardly worth destroying,
And much less saving; yet He loveth each
As though all were His equal.

Festus. I know all
I have to go through henceforth,—all the doubts,
Passions of life, and woes; but knowing them
Hinders them not; I bear obeyingly;
And pine no more, as once when I looked back
And saw how life had balked, and foiled, and fooled me.
Fresh as a spouting spring upon the hills
My heart leapt out to life; it little thought
Of all the vile cares that would rill into it,
And the low places it would have to go through,—
The drains, the crossings, and the mill-work after.
God hath endowed me with a soul that scorns life—
An element over and above the world's:
But the price one pays for pride is mountain-high;
There is a curse beyond the rack of death—
A woe, wherein God hath put out his strength—
A pain past all the mad wretchedness we feel,
When the sacred secret hath flown out of us,
And the heart broken open by deep care,—
The curse of a high spirit famishing,
Because all earth but sickens it.

Angel. Go, child!
Fulfil thy fate! Be—do—bear—and thank God!
To me it seems as I had lived all ages
Since I left earth; and thou art yet scarce man.

Festus. It was not, mother, that I knew thy face;
The luminous eclipse that is on it now,
Though it was fair on earth, would have made it strange
Even to one who knew as well as he loved thee;
And if these time-tired eyes ever imaged thine,
It was but for a moment, and the sight Passed; and my life was broken like a line
At the first word—but my heart cried out in me.

Angel. I knew thee well. And now to earth again!
Go, son! and say to all who once were mine—
I love them, and expect them.

Festus.     Blessed one!

I will.

Angel. I charge thee, Genius, bear him safely.
Genius. Through light, and night, and all the powers of air,
I have a passport.

Angel.     God be with thee, child!
Genius.    Come!
Festus.    I feel happier, better, nobler now.

See where she sits, and smiles, and points me out
To those who sit along with her. Who are
The two?

Genius. One is the mother of mankind,
And one the mother of the Man who saved
Mankind; and she, thine own, the mother of
The last man of mankind—for thou art he.

Festus. Am I? It is enough: I have seen God.
Genius. God, and His great idea, the universe,
Are over and above us. Be the one
Worshipped, the other reverently proved.
Wilt sojourn for a time among the worlds,
And test their natures?

Festus.    Gladly.

Genius.    Seek we, then,
All rareness and variety these worlds
Can offer, ere we reach thine orb. Descend!
Now is the age of worlds. Another comes.
Scene—A Garden and Pleasure House.

Marian, Helen, Edward, Charles, Sophia, and others.

Edward. Again we meet in this fair scene; Ah! might we be but ever young!

Harry. Helen! We pray thee be again our Queen.

Helen. I prithee hold thy tongue; A royal revolution 'twere indeed, That I should twice reign, and myself succeed.

Charles. No nay! No nay! it must be so: Permit me.

Helen. Well, there needs no show Of more reluctance than I feel; Both kings and queens must court the commonweal.

Harry. A bumper at meeting! a bumper at parting!

As many you like be between; But we will have a right ruddy brimmer at starting— A health to our beautiful Queen!

Long, long may she reign in our hearts and right arms, And her all but omnipotence last!

She shall fear nothing rougher than love's light alarms—

There is nought in the coming can darken her charms—

There is nought can eclipse in the past.
A brimmer at sitting, a brimmer at starting,
As many you like be between;
But we will have a right ruddy bumper at parting—
A health to our beautiful Queen!
Oh! while beauty shall live in the form of the fair,
And love in the heart of the brave,
The Queen of our souls, she shall never despair,
For our hearts we would drain, and our deaths we would dare,
To avenge whom we love, or to save.

HELEN. Born to exert the powers of my state,
Charles, I have named thee poet-laureate.

HARRY. Kiss hands upon appointment.

CHARLES. Sovereign fair!
Behold thy grateful servant.

HELEN. Sit thou there,
In all but full equality with me;
Love rules the heart and the mind poesie;
In youth at least, and when in hours like this
The rule is pleasure, the exception bliss.

LAURENCE. But where is Festus?

HELEN. 'Tis to him we owe
The repetition of this scene of joy.
He bids me say he loves ye all ye know,
But deems his presence less attraction than annoy.
Whatever ye can name, and I command,
Is by his bidding welcome thus to all;
But pardon craves; high quests he hath in hand
Which wait not on his own nor pleasure's call.
And though to me his presence be a power,
His every word with love's bright magic rife,
Yet he—nor him from that height would I lower—
Lives in the upper hemisphere of life,
Where angel thoughts and spiritual orbs
Roll in the majesty of mind profound;
Where Truth's bright disk, all doubt-spots dark absorbs,
And Inspiration's lightning beams abound.
Whether he e'er return to scenes like this
I know not—much I question—but can trace
The tone, methinks, of that sad soul of his
Roll ever-deepening down an endless bass,
Like an abyss of thunder. But, away!
These tears mine eyes have haunted all the day;
Now they are vanished. Let us change, I pray,
The matter of our converse.

Sophia.       Ay, be gay!

Helen. Come, we will consecrate the passing hour
With songs of love and lays of beauty's power;—
For when the tale of Time hath told
A thousand thousand years,
His purple pinions starred with gold—
Wherewith he doth the world infold—
Will still be stained with dust and tears;
And still life's sole, brief Paradise, in sooth,
Be love and beauty in the hour of youth.
A song, a dance, one cup to beauty's name,
Music, a jest, or pleasant tale in rhyme,
Sufficient these, with mirth and gentle game,
Alternate with repose, to fill our time.
And first, a dance! for Earth and Heaven
Are both to choral influence given.

Charles. The sun in the centre turns solemnly round,
And the pale god of shades, the conductor of souls,
Seems to warm as he circles the glory profound,
Where the goddess of beauty all beamingly rolls;
While earth and her sister float brilliantly by,
Her heart towards the sun, and her love in her eye.
Then Mars, like a warrior, gloomy and red
Impetuous wheels, ever glancing at one;
While six sister goddesses mazily tread
The bright fields of air which encircle the sun;
And Jove, the majestic, serene in his might,
Sweeps cloudy and thunderous aye to the light.
Then Saturn, old gray-bearded emblem of time,
Comes slowly and chilly to join with the rest,
And Ouranus next with young Eros sublime,
Move slowly, as though they partook with the blest;
And each, his bright bevy of servitors round,
Complete the vast figure with harmony crowned.

Helen. This, then, is your inaugural ode.

Charles. If you, fair lady, think it so.
Your word imposes the sole code
Of law, or justice, we may know.

Helen. Then my authority is absolute.

Edward. As truth's my liege.

Helen. We'll see then if it suit.
So like the stars which circle through the skies,
As Charles hath sung,
Let us too dance with choral harmonies,
Ourselves among.

Marian, apart. Again that name hath knelled upon mine ear,
Though I have never voiced it. 'Tis to me
Too deeply, yea, unutterably dear.
How warmly, too, she loves him! Let it be.
Who most enjoy the light may best endure,
When come, the darkness as it now is here.
Whatever his, may my troth plight keep sure!
I have turned to thee, moon, from the glance
That in triumphing coldness was given;
And rejoiced, as I viewed thee all lonely advance,
There was something was lonely in Heaven.
I have turned to thee, moon, as I lay
In thy silent and saddening brightness,
And rejoiced, as high Heaven went shining away,
That the heart had its desolate lightness.
I have turned to thee, moon, from my love,
And from all that once blessed me in sadness;
And can marvel no more that, abandoned above,
Thou shouldst lend thy bright face to make madness
I have turned to thee, moon, from my heart,
That in love hath long labored and sorrowed;
And have hoped it might mix, as I watched thee depart,
Like thyself, with the morn which had morrowed.
Laurence. Can I behold the lady of my love
Mourning alone, from pleasure all apart?
Again I seek thee, though it be to hear
The sentence of destruction to my heart.
Yet if it be so, still one moment stay;
For it so haps whene'er I think of thee,
So blent is thought with love's anxiety,
My spirit doth invariably pray.
Any blessing God can give
Never be withheld from thee;
Nor will I desire to live
If that prayer be lost to me;
Else I were unworthy thee.
Read these eyes, love, and believe
Ever I am only thine;
End of all my hopes, receive,
Dearest, heart and all that's mine!

Marian. I thank thee, Laurence, and believe,
But this is all I can for thee,
Save grieve that thou shouldst vainly grieve
I to another am as thou to me
In this strange passion which pain sanctifies;
This folly, sorrow makes sublime and wise.

Laurence. Oh! there is nothing, in this world of ours,
So sad to see
As the dark worm which dwells wherever flowers
Our destiny;
Eating the heart out of youth's budding hours
Of glee.
Not oft in sunny beds, nor sheltered bowers,
Life's lot is cast,
But chiefly lost in shade, and chilled by showers,
Or the rude blast;
Till all its delicate and wholesome powers
Are past.
And this, then, is the end of all the bliss
Which love and beauty offered, and my soul
Made certain of in natural triumph; this
The heritage of life, and this love's goal.

Marian. Peace! there is one I name not, came not here
Partly because of me. But think'st thou I
Came to indulge a wretched vanity
With thee, or pry into another's sphere?
With whom I grieve too; which is more unblest,
Whose love is shunned or sought, let time attest!

Helen. And now, for pastime, some one tell a tale;
Come, an adventure, Charles.

Charles. Oh, pray dispense
With my devoirs this time. I fain would try,
If any wit be in the company;
By observation, not experience,
Of course I judge: for of my own
The world and I are cognizant alone.

Emma. Fatigued, no doubt, with over-admiration
Of your sweet self.

Helen. Well, each one in rotation.
Walter. Now I know a delicious tale
Will suit you, Carrie, to a T.

Caroline. Do tell me, then, and I'll believe
It more than truth, if need should be.

Walter. Well; Love is the child of bliss and woe;
So, from his parents dear,
One eye is blinded with a smile,
One drowned in a tear.
And on one lip there drops a kiss,
Like honey from the wild woodbine;
And that's the lip he had from bliss—
And that's the lip I will have mine:
But on the other hangs a lie,
And that—but that's 'tween you and I.

Caroline. How very odd!
Walter. Why, it's a fact,
And therefore needs no illustration;
But if you think its principle abstract,
It is easily shown in operation.

Caroline. Oh dear! no, no! I'll vow it's true,
Rather than have it proved by you.

George. Well, then, hear me. Now this is true,
Although of love and the lyre too;
And, as it happened all to me,
I say but what I could but see.
I was with the maid I love,
We were happy and alone;
Eve's star just lit the grove,
And the day had been our own;
And my lyre lay by my side,
But no music from it came;
For as sure as e'er I tried,
It was harsh or it was tame;
So I flung it to my feet,
And I feigned the while I said,
Thy love I cannot meet;
Thou must not love me, maid.
And more I might have feigned,
When there came a little boy,
And his step fell as light
As a laugh of joy;
And he laughed, and said, I'm Love.
Shall I teach you how to play?
And I said, My pretty boy,
Teach away! teach away!
So he lifted up the lyre,
And he fingered its strings,
Till I thought they did become
Like spiritual things;
And the gold chords shone,
From the music he clouded,
Like the links of the lightning,
When tempests come crowded;
And the strain rose and fell,
'Neath his pink little fingers,
Like a soul due to earth,
That in Heaven still lingers.
He ceased; and all over
He smiled like the strain
Of the music he made me,
Nor made me in vain;
For I snatched at the lyre
While yet it was ringing,
And I sang, It is love
Gives the poet his singing.
Then I turned to my beauty,
Who kissed her young bard,
As she said, Love and song
Shall have thus their reward.
He laughed till he cried;
I pretended to frown;
So my love made him hide
In her bosom of down;
Where at last he gasped out,
Oh, forgive me, I pray!
But I couldn't help laughing—
Boy, I said, get away!
Let none, then, who love not,
Ever offer to sing;
Let none who say false
Ever strike the gold string—
He said; and I saw but the Wave of his wing.

Lucy. These stories are delightful; I declare
I never dreamed that Love was to be seen,
More than a ghost in these enlightened days.
LAURENCE. Thrice wretched he to whom he comes, I ween.

CHARLES. I had a strange visit once from Love; But when, indeed, I dread to date it. It is so long since I half forget, But if it please you I'll narrate it.

LAURA. Oh, do! a poet surely will have something Pretty to say about the poor, dear, dumb thing.

HARRY. Dumb! then you know but little of the tyrant; He'd bellow down a fifth-rate actor by rant.

CHARLES. It is true I have met him once or twice Since the event of which I tell; He called, I find, the other day, And left his card; but T. T. L. So, if we meet again, the little god Will get the cut celestial, or a nod At best. But, as I fear I am wasting time, For shortness' sake I'll tell my tale in rhyme.

I nursed with care a favorite fire In secret and alone; And oft I blew it with my breath, And oft 'twas all but gone. And not a soul beside myself Cared for my flame or me; It made me sad, it made me glad, The very secrecy. At length my absence made me missed; They sought me far and near,
With muttered scorn, with smile, with sigh,
With silence, and a tear;
And one said, Let the boy alone,
His flame will soon expire;
And others said, 'Tis nought to us;
And still I fed my fire.
And friends and kindred all condemned,
With stern and fixed eye,
The love of folly, which, they said,
Possessed me;—spake not I.
So one by one they went away,
'Twere useless to remain;
Their presence or their absence nought—
I fanned my fire again.
And Beauty came, but blamed me not;
So sweetly did she ask
Of life and peace, I half forgot
To tend my wayward task;
Till, while her eyes were lift above,
I spied it as I turned;
Sprang like a bowstring to the bow,
And stirred it till it burned.
And Pride and World-Ambition came,
And tried to tread it out;
But every ember found its nerve,
And each with pain did shout;
And Love came, not as he was wont,
With kiss and merry brow,
And eyes like two forget-me-nots,
Dipped in the stream below:
But up he came with torrent tears,
   And pale and reckless look,
And eye as cold as any stone
   In petrifying brook;
He broke his bow; his shafts he snapped,
   And swore he would expire;—
I took his bow and arrows both,
   And burnt them in my fire.
And all that all or aught could do
   Was useless to its end;
The flame, though fitful, flourished still,
   In spite of foe or friend.
It warms me now; I feel it must Respond to my desire;
For I have heaped both heart and soul
   Upon that deathless fire.

Lucy. Poor thing! I think you served him very ill;
But it accounts for our distressed condition;
For, without arms, nor wound can he nor kill;
I'm half afraid he'll die of inanition.

Will. With poets every thing must deathless be;
Now it's the passingness of things that gives
Their most exciting charm to me;
Life hath less beauty if it ever lives.
All loveliest things pass soonest; clouds and flowers,
Rainbows, heart-kindling glances, the sweet smile;
Because brief, we admire, or make them ours;
But we should slight them lived they longer while.
Charles. It is sweet to be awakened by a kiss, When dreaming of the very lips which waken;— Ah! never be that visionary bliss, But for the bright reality, forsaken.
It is sweet to dream we are blest at last with her Who first made pleasure in our nature stir:
Though fairer, kinder, since we may have known, That first voluptuous vision sits her throne;
Still, in our sleep, plays o'er young passion's part, As pleasure's ghost still haunts the ruined heart
Where lie the buried loves of younger years, Whose rites and requiems are sighs and tears.
Sleep on, ye living dead, in day! nor rise,
But in night's shadowy shapes and dreamy eyes;
Then let me graft me in your breasts again, And stanch my bosom of its tearing pain.
Oh! fade not—stir not—hold me till I die,
In the desire of what I most possess;
For I would die, as I have lived, in love;
To dream of happiness, is happiness:
And be it but a dream; these very dreams Are elements of immortality;
As mind on earth almightily beseems, And body but an impotent reality.
But dearer than the kiss, and than the dream, Than busy bliss, or than remembered love,
It is to feel we shall be deathless here,— That earth will speak of us when gone above.
It is sweet to taste the clear, close kiss of meeting,
And sweet to lengthen still the long embrace;
It is sweet to see the man we back is beating—
Sweet to be startled by a pretty face.
It is sweet to hear, if fat, that we grow thinner;
Sweet the first drop of claret after dinner;
But sweeter still than all that's sweet before
Is to hear some say, I will say no more;
A blessing I can scarce expect to be
From those who are more near than dear to me;
You, Charles, for instance.

Why, you greedy elf,
Would you have all the nonsense to yourself?

Now let us have no argument, I pray.
Suppose we have a pretty, lively song.
Suppose you sing it, then.
Well, never say
I don't intend to help you, right or wrong.
Then I'll essay
A song I learned but yesterday.

Oh! gaze on her beautiful, soft rolling eye,
And revel with bliss in its languishing love;
Oh! look on its brightness and darkness, and sigh
That truth from that Heaven should ever remove.
Oh! gaze on her ringlets of raven-black hair,
And her delicate eyebrows' soft pencilly line;
Oh! wish that her bosom were pure as it's fair,
That the saint were as worthy of love as the shrine.

I have gazed—I have loved—I have worshipped;
and fain
I now would declare it—my madness is past;
But pleasure no more in my heart will remain,
Than the sparkle of spray on the sand beach cast.
I loathe her, and love her—I never can rail—
It is past, and I reck not—my fortune I dare;
Henceforward the shroud of my hopes is my sail,
And the peace which I sought I have found in despair.

Caroline. If that's called lively, or in part, or wholly,
The gods preserve me from your melancholy.

Harry. 'Tis no use saying that I love you, Sophy,
For if I do, you only cry out, Oh, fie!
Nathless, as some one else must sing,
Wait only till I screw this string.
  I love not horse,
  I love not wine;
Nor song nor dance
Be joys of mine.
  And dull to me
Are the skies above;
  I love not lore,
  I love not love.
But thee I now
Love, and e'er will:
For love's the best
Point in me still.
And since my heart
Owns nought above thee,
It must be Phil-
Osophy to love thee.

Laura. Hast thou got any thing there for me?
For surely thou never shouldst bring me near thee,
Unless thou hast some gift with thee
To bribe me to hear thee.

Edward. I bring thee neither bribe nor boon;
I offer only flowers,
Which, gathered thus, devise the hope,
Each other's hearts are ours.
But mind, I see one poison bloom
Thrust like a motto from the tomb,
Amid some merry song;
As every being hath its bane,
As the brightest clouds are thick with rain,
And the day hath night-shade long;
But if one gem of joy there be,
Too many for the day's bright wreath,
Then may the night-shade give it thee,
Though it be joy to death;
For I would neither love nor die
Beneath a broad and laughing sky:
No; heart and spirit, take your flight,
Aye, in the still and starry night;
Receive them, lady, in that breast,
With peace and purity to rest;
And, Oh! if not too much for prayer,
My life, my love, my all be there.
Ah, happy flowerets! if the while
Ye ope beneath her summer smile,
But to pluck the poison from the rest,
Beauty of night, come deck my breast.
Beauty of night, thou art blithe and bright,
While all thy sister blooms are sleeping;
And though thou canst but bloom to blight,
Wilt wake and laugh in dewy light,
While they are dreaming, they are weeping.
Beauty of night, I will, will win thee;
Flower of life, my life is in thee.
Beauty of night, I knew that light
Had shade, and knew that night had deeper;
But they but bring to weary wight
The sleep which love alone will slight,
And thou who wring'st life from the sleeper.
Beauty of night, I have, have won thee;
Flower of death, my death be on me.

Laura. Thou may'st be happy if thou wilt,
Nor envy these poor flowers their spot;
For close as in a clenched hand,
Thy love within my heart hath lot.
Fanny. Who mentioned ghosts? In nothing I so glory
As a true, thrilling, chilling, good ghost story.
Edward. But on a soft and fragrant summer eve,
With glistening flowers and flashing waters by,
One lacks the proper impulse to believe:—
But then I don't believe them.
Will. Oh! nor I.
Lucy. They want a fireside and a howling storm;
Summer time seems too sensual and warm.
Frederic. Oh! you are a parlous little infidel,
Or I could tell a tale; but I'm not well.
My head seems wrong, and somehow altogether
Feels like a bullet on a peacock's feather.
Walter. Do you believe that spirits interfere
With men, events, or actions any where?
Charles. Let gold-bagged priests from Ganges to Bermudas
The gospel preach, according to St. Judas;—
It's my opinion, if the truth were known,
That earth pertains to man and beast alone;
And neither saint, nor fiend, nor bright, nor dark angel,
Between the South Pole and the port of Archangel,
Have any call, or leave, or will, or power
To meddle with a mortal, for an hour.
Fanny. Oh! you're an unbeliever.
Charles. That is true,
So far as this— I don't believe in you.
HELEN. Sir, you are rude. Now, Frederic, we wait
The story that you spoke of. Tell it straight.

FREDERIC. Please you, my liege, I'll try then and remember;
And for the rest—why, fancy it's December.
'Twas midnight, and a noble sat in his ancestral hall,
Where many a stern, old portrait gloomed along the gilded wall;
And ivory, marble, ebony, and tapestries adorned
The seats he used, the floors he trod; for meaner things he scorned.
And youth, and fame, and might were his—the splendid might of mind;
His spirit swept and bowed all hearts, as bending forests wind;
Yet youth and genius oft, too oft, in worship bow
the knee
At pleasure's shrine, in folly's fane; more madly none than he.
He sat, but not in solitude: a damsel by his side,
Of beauty, bright and gay of heart, him with the wine-
cup plied,
Gazing on him with eye as though to him her soul
were due:
Oh, nought 'neath Heaven itself might match that eye's dark, sunny blue!
From which, too, ever and anon smiles o'er her face would fly,
Like the electric flames which flit o'er summer's evening sky;
And pearls were beaded o'er her brow, and gems lit up her breast,
Like dew-drops on the morning rose when wakening from rest.
"One parting goblet," cried the youth, "ere I away to-night:
Bring me the old monk's skull-cup, girl; peace to his jovial sprite!"
She by the lofty window went,—where in the moon's pale sheen
The gray old cloisters arch about their fountain-centred green;
The statued satyrs seemed to grin and jibber 'neath her eye,
And as she looked, a death-like cloud came creeping up the sky,
And in one long and trembling moan the night-gust strove to die;—
Up to the ebon cabinet, with flowery pearl inlaid,
And seized the goblet-skull, and laughed,—how laughed that merry maid!
He poured it full with bubbling wine, impatient to be quaffed,
Full to the silver-written rim, and drained it at a draught;
"Ah, would its owner were but here!" and gayly both they laughed.
"Again," he cried,—"but what is that stirs in the far-off gloom?"
The lady looked and shrieked, and rushed out of that royal room.

Enveloped in a sable cowl, and stole of sightless hue, A ghostly figure glided swift that noble youth unto. Why drops the goblet from his grasp? Why trembles he with dread?
The grave hath given birth;—he sees a spirit of the dead.

Another moment, unappalled, erectly still he stands; He would not quail to man nor fiend, for half his goodly lands, Yet, like a tree by sudden gust, his soul was seized with fear An instant,—and his spirit shook as drew the spectre near;

His small, white hand, veined like a leaf, close to his bosom clung, And every nerve and sinew grew like to a bowstring strung, As with a shadow's voice it said—

"I am the Monk of old, A fragment of whose mortal frame I at thy feet behold.

For that I plead not,reck not now; a thing of nobler fate
Hast thou perverted and defiled than aught of human state,

Than bone or body; sin, in truth, the soul doth desecrate."
"Nay, holy father!" said the youth, "if thou hast left old Death
To preach to me, at dead of night, waste not thy pious breath!
Pledge me in this! the night is cold, yet colder is the grave,
And wine will warm thee! shrink not back! immortals should be brave!
Ah! know'st the cup? Well, heed it not! right welcome shalt thou be
To drain it with me every night, and — benedicite."
With that, he raised the cup to fill and quaff it as before,
Till fast as poured, the wine became but dust incrusted gore;
He cast it on the fire,—the lake could not have quenched it more.
Again the spectre spake, and still in cold and tomb-like tone,—
"Drink thou with whom thou wilt; with girls, with gallants, or alone;
I come to warn thee of thy fate—a fate to me made known."
The old monk raised his cowl; nor face, nor feature was there there;
Nay, nothing but two eyes, which burnt like stars distinct in air.
"Thou in a foreign clime shalt die, and thy poor, fleshly frame
Be borne across the seas to rest by theirs from whom it came.
Thy heart alone shall be inurned upon the spot where thou
Wilt pay the forfeit of thy life, where Death looks for thee now.
Embalmed, enshrined thy heart shall be in gemmed and costly case,
And as a thing of worship set before a nation's face;
Till, in the lapse of coming years, some sacrilegious thief
Shall filch that relic—set at nought that weeping people's grief.
The sacred dust which dwelt within, the dust which now swells high
Within thy bosom, he shall strew abroad relentlessly.
And this in retribution, youth, for that thou there hast done."
The voice, the vision ceased; and, lo! that instant it was gone.
Again the night-wind sweeps along those old and ivied halls;
Again o'er lake and fountain free the witching moonlight falls,
Checkering through the panes the dim old paintings round the walls.
But there was one who never went into that room again;
And prayers, and tears, and jeers were each alike essayed in vain.
That dark, unearthly visitor was ever in her mind,
Like to the awe which filleth fanes where gods have once been shrined.
And morning met the youth all pale, and pacing to and fro;
But, ah! the goblet-skull he touched never again, I trow.

LUCY. There; does not that convert you?

CHARLES. Not a whit,
I don't believe a single word of it;
Nor yet of summer fairies, winter ghosts,
Nor any other spiritual hosts.

SOPHIA. See, then, how inconsistent you must be
In the sad tale you told us about Love.

CHARLES. The credit of my creed concerns but me,
Either in Earth below or Heaven above.

HELEN. Men! I give notice I am sitting here
To answer and console the sad in heart.
Who is in love?

CHARLES. I am, sweet judge; I fear
And hope, unbiased, you will take my part.

HELEN. What do you wish?

CHARLES. Fair justice, if it please—

HELEN. To mock our ears with your mock miseries?—

Sit; we'll not hear them. You shall truly tell
That love does oftener than he says, farewell.
FESTUS.

Charles. With truth I cannot; but I'll state my case.

Helen. May it bear out your miserable face!

Charles. I have lived on ladies' eyes,
Dined on kisses, supped on sighs;
I have warmed me by their smiles,
I have been wet through with tears;
They've half slain me with their wiles—
Charming, cheating, pretty dears;
They have scratched me in their play,
Sighed and sucked the wound away;
They have squeezed me black and blue,
Roughed my hair and boxed my ears,
Laughed, and looked me through and through:
Oh, the cruel, angel dears!

Fanny. Indeed, you have been sadly treated.

Charles. Ah me! how I have been jilted, cheated;
It would move the passion of a stone;
And yet when not with ladies, I'm alone.
I like the company of women most,
And after theirs, my own:
Among men I feel always lost.
Ladies' society for me, or none.

Helen. Peace! say no more. We all agree in part.
This court thinks fit to confiscate your heart;
And, till the fine be paid, to one at least—
Some lady here—you cannot be released.
Begone! thank us that you escape so well,
From what, it is impossible to tell.
Charles. Oh! I appeal against my fate.
Helen. Just as a cur a coach may bait.
It nought avails.
Charles. But what am I to do?
The puzzling power of a pair of eyes!
One pair is black, one gray, and one is blue:
I am a sacrifice!
They are three—the sweet sisters I love in my heart,
And all so unlike and so fair:
When with all, I am longing to love them apart,
And apart, I would all of them there.
By the world, I dare say, I shall greedy be reckoned,
But my wish I can name in a word:
I would live with the first, I would die with the second,
And immortal I'd be with the third.
Helen. Go! we have pardoned you with like contradiction
As we condemned—without condition;
This point excepted, that you sing a song
In token your deliverance is wrong,
Though just my judgment. Pray don't keep us long,
Or banishment, perhaps, may be your lot.
Charles. Oh! I protest against it.
Others. Despot fair!
Your sentence is too cruel.
Helen. Hold, slaves! what?
Dispute! I fine you each. So now, despair.
Thus I adopt first the most stringent measure.
Our taxes are your songs, your fines our pleasure:
These ladies will assist you now and then.

Laura. Oh, certainly.

Emma. Behave yourselves like men.

Charles. There's no escaping, it appears to me,
However nod and wink, &c., be.

Brandy may do for the old,
And water for all who choose it;
And brandy and water, hot or cold,
There are few who will dare to refuse it.
But as for myself, I still must think,
How wrong soever I be,
There is nothing like wine for a poet's drink;
Wine—wine is the drink for me!

Cider may suit an old maid,
And a young one, soda water;
Grog, toddy, and negus, and lemonade,
The curious in self-slaughter.
But as for myself, I still must think,
How wrong soever I be,
There is nothing like wine for a poet's drink;
Wine—wine is the drink for me!

Ale may go down with the clown,
And beer with the sad and seedy;
And porter and stout, entire and brown,
With the dead, or the mad, or the needy.
But as for myself, I still must think,
How wrong soever I be,
There is nothing like wine for a poet's drink!
Wine—wine is the drink for me!

Helen. A broad hint, truly. Pay the bard his fee,
I dare say he is thirsty.
Frank and others. So are we!
Charles. What, ho! a butt of sack!
Helen. But no butt here!
Or sack you'll get another way, I fear.
Remember that, within our sacred sight,
You should continue abstinent to-night.
Indeed, I don't approve that sort of song,
And think it very rude, and rather wrong.
To make my subjects good, is my main plan;
Let them be merry with it if they can:
Mind, as it is, I am resolved almost
To make you forfeit your important post.
Charles. Lady, I swear I never to offend meant:
Our next shall move you all as an amendment.
Helen. Now seriatim, gentles, if you please,
We are quite resolved to list your melodies.
Lucy. Come, no more flinching.
Frank, Walter, and others, apart. Let us sing
a glee,
And so, by singing all at once, evade
The separate penalty.
Edward. Dost think that she,
The tyrant of this fair festivity,
Will bear to have her words so far bewrayed?
No more than ice bear blood-heat in the shade.

WALTER. We can but try.

CHARLES. Remember what I told you,
And think upon the bright eyes that behold you.

The crow! the crow! the great black crow!
He cares not to meet us wherever we go;
He cares not for man, beast, friend, nor foe,
For nothing will eat him, he well doth know.

Know! know! you great black crow!
It's a comfort to feel like a great black crow!

The crow! the crow! the great black crow!
He loves the fat meadow—his taste is low;
He loves the fat worms, and he dines in a row
With fifty fine cousins, all black as a sloe.

Sloe! sloe! you great black crow!
But it's jolly to fare like a great black crow.

The crow! the crow! the great black crow!
He never gets drunk on the rain nor snow;
He never gets drunk, but he never says, No!
If you press him to tipple ever so.

So! so! you great black crow!
It's an honor to soak like a great black crow.

The crow! the crow! the great black crow!
He lives for a hundred years and mo'
He lives till he dies, and he dies as slow
As the morning mists down the hill that go.
    Go! go! you great black crow!
But it's fine to live and die like a great black crow.

Helen. Your principles are purer, I perceive. You
Are much the same in practice.

Frank. I believe you.
A heart full of feeling, a cup full of wine,—
Come—sip, love; come—sip, love;
There's nothing I lack but that sweet lip of thine,—
Thy lip, love—thy lip, love.
Thine eyes are like two romping stars,
That look as they had drank of wine;
And, flying from night's brow, had brought
Their liquid love to thine.
But I forget: they're not the words I mean.

Helen. Wilt sing, Sophia?

Sophia. I obey thee, Queen.

Of knight and lady to each other true,
I sing the generous lay, their due.

*Yes, lady dear, for aye—adieu!
The false world I defy, lady;
But thou, sweet soul, so fair, so true,
I would thou couldst not sigh, lady.
Oh! mind thee not of me when gone,
But lay thy memory by, lady;
In light and joyance live thou on;
Leave me, leave me to sigh, lady!*
O fair! O true! for aye I go;
From thee, from thee I hie, lady;
I must not yield me to thy woe,
I dare not list thee sigh, lady.
Yonder thou seest my father's hall,
Whose turrets pierce the sky, lady;
Ah! rather might they on me fall,
Than I would hear thee sigh, lady.

To far-off lands now wends his way;
And, if he there should die, lady,
Oh! let thy true love, happy, say
He never caused thee sigh, lady.
Farewell for aye! It wrings thy heart:
It drowns thy darkening eye, lady.
Farewell! I feel what 'tis to part;
But say thou wilt not sigh, lady.

Will. May none here ever know as true,
The false, cold lover's last adieu!
But yet to show things as they be,
The false maid, thus, ye all may see.

Thou lov'st another, maiden!
And I am free as thou;
My heart with scorn is laden,
To speak but with thee now.
Though through thy glossy ringlets
My hand hath often played,
Here—take it back! I loathe it—
The long imbosomed braid.
Away, away! no more with thee,
Thou falsest, fairest maid!

One heart is ripe and laden
With love for me e'en now;
I'll woo me, then, the maiden
More kind, more true than thou.
Then give it to my rival,
The black and glossy braid;
And give the hand which twined it,
The cheek whereon it played.
Away, away! no more with thee,
Thou fairest, falsest maid.

Walter. A gem may have a hundred sides,
And glitter bright in each:
Where true philosophy presides
Pleasure it is to teach;
I therefore choose the charms of happy faith,
Secure in love's all-present joy;
From aught that might e'en dreams alloy,
With dread of future skaith.

I dreamed of thee, love, in the eve,
And I lay among bright, blushing flowers;
I awoke—and, ah! how could I grieve,
If the blooms hurried back to their bowers?
I dreamed of thee, love, in the night,
And the stars stood around by my head;
I awoke to thy beauty so bright,
And the stars hid their faces and fled.

I dreamed of thee, love, in the morn,
And a poet's bright dreamings drew nigh;
I awoke, and I laughed them to scorn;
They were black by the blink of thine eye.

I dreamed of thee, love, in the day,
And I wept as I slept o'er thy charms;
I awoke as my dream went away,
And my tears were all wet on thine arms.

Helen. Ah! who would long for bliss above,
That tastes the joys below?
Or, hanging on the lips of Love,
Would seek to kiss his brow?
Unless to change and clear the taste,
Lest sweets in sameness run to waste.

George. Come, do you dance?
Laurence. No; we two here remain.
Marian. But why indulge in mutual sorrows vain?
And if I grant this one request —
Laurence. It is the last time I shall be so blest.
Oh! thou art kind, and I will think
This wine to be thy love I drink;
Blood, my heart would gladly miss,
Could it so be filled with this;
And each pulse would madlier move,
Warm with wine, alive with love.
Look upon it, love, and weep
Thine eyelight o'er its purple deep;
So each luminous glance shall be
Like a phosphor globelet in the sea.
Other lovers soon will sue thee—
Let them—they will ne'er possess
More than I enjoy, who view the Lightning of thy loveliness.
It may be love and light in Heaven,
But here, on earth, such love is death;
And such light is blindness driven,
Lance-like, through the breast and breath.
All who love thee, sure will die:
Thy beauty hath fatality.
For now is near my heart's last hour;
I feel it failing like a flower,
When folding up its leaves to rest,
And narrowing in its own sweet breast.
I mean not, that I die to-day,
But that my spirit wears away;
And, save thyself, sees nought to lure it
Back to earth's falsehoods which immure it.

Marian. Thou wilt live yet many happy years,
Far more in number than the tears
Men shed o'er broken hearts, if not
When first forsaken, aye forgot;
While we, according to old fashion,
With our own tears must slake our passion;
Or, weeping in our bosoms, lorn and lone,
Try if tears cannot turn the heart to stone.

Laurence. Promise, dearest, when I die,
Not to mourn, nor weep, nor sigh;
Eyes like thine should never weep,
Nor sweet bosom sorrow keep.
Let nor stone, nor verse, nor aught
Mark where rests—what loved and thought;
If they ask thee where I lie,
Say, within thy memory.
Weep not thou o'er grave of mine,
Sprinkle on it sparkling wine;
That shall keep the grass all new
Like to an immortal dew;
And some fallen star shall stay,
Watching, while thou art away.
Scatter rose and ivy wreath
On the turf I rest beneath;
Dance, and sing my favorite song
Through the deep-blue twilight long;
In that rich and ringing tone,
Heaven to thee, love, lends alone.
When I'm gone, then, come again;
Talk to me in lightsome strain;
FESTUS.

Should I answer, start not thou!
I'll but say I'm blest as now;
Should no sound the silence break,
Think me, Oh! too blest to speak.
Let me lie till angels say,
Wake! the world's long week is past.
Spirit! this is holyday;
This is God's — the best and last.

HELEN. Come, Marian, having finished our parade,
We have leisure now to list another lay;
But since you have not been dancing, I'm afraid
Laurence and you are idle, lovesick, say?

MARIAN. Could I comply, I'd not remain thus mute.

FREDERIC. Shall I sing for you as a substitute?

I saw a rose was fading —
Fading 'neath mine eye;
When thus, with love's upbraiding,
I heard that past one sigh: —
Oh! give me back one blush —
But one from out the many
I loved to give to thee
Ere other I knew any —
Liked or looked on any.

For I am sad and lonely —
Lone, and like to die;
Oh! give me back one only,
I am too weak to cry.
The beam, the breeze, the dew,
Shun now my shrinking bosom;
Tears I have need but few,
Their brine can bring no blossom—
Me, nor blight nor blossom.

Then to that rose was failing—
Failing 'neath mine eye,
I said, 'Tis useless wailing;
Forget, forgive, and die.
One look to Heaven in prayer,
And one to me in kindness;
The deathwind shook its leaves,
And I was one with blindness—
Lone in burning blindness.

Harry. Although I would not needlessly intrude—
Fanny. To sing, not being asked, is rude.
Harry. To cease with such a dull, down-hearted ditty
Would be a wrong, I think, as well as pity.
Lucy. Pray, sing us something livelier, then.
Sophia. And don't be personal again.
Harry. Annie's eyes are like the night,
Nell's are like the morning gray,
Fanny's like the gloaming light,
Hal's are sunny as the day:
Bright—dark—blue—gray,
I could kiss them night and day:
Gray — blue — dark — bright —
Morning, evening, noon, and night.

Annie's brow's arched like the sky,
Nell's is white without a spot,
Hal's is as a palace high,
Fanny's lowly like a cot:
High — arched — low — white,
I could kiss them day and night;
White — low — arched — high,
Kiss them night and day could I.

Annie's lips are warm and bright,
Fanny's free and full of play,
Hal's are sweetest out of sight,
Nell's are always in the way;
Bright — warm — sweet — play,
I could kiss them night and day;
Play — sweet — warm — bright,
All the day and all the night.

WILL. Mulcted in song, I hasten to discharge
The debt I owe, and pay it thus in large.

Oh! Love's a bold pirate — the soul of the sea!
He impresses the proud, and he fetters the free;
His flag's a red heart, in the bows are his guns,
And the wind's always with him — the foe ever runs
Oh! Love's a bold pirate—the sword of the sea!
For the poor he hath plunder, and fame for the free;
At home, in a chase, he nor spares foe nor friend;
Though a stern chase, and long chase, the longest must end.

Oh! Love's a bold pirate—the pet of the sea!
He will do all, and dare all, 'gainst all that may be;
He hails her all fair, just before they fall to't,
And his foe makes his prize and his consort to boot.

HELEN. The day hath darkened into twilight, night
Hath glittered into starlight since we met;
The restorative dew hangs thick and bright
On herb, and tree, and flower: yon foamy jet
Flings up its bubbling music chillier now,
And droop the blooms that long have wreathed the brow.

Ladies, and you, bold serfs! I now propose
To bring this joyous vigil to a close,
And as all bidden have now paid their fine,
To leave these heroes to their fate—their wine.

CHARLES. Except yourself, dear despot, all
Have done their best to hum or squall;
But if your beautyship would condescend
To teach us what true melody might be,
There's not a creature present but would lend
His ears to listen for a century.

43
HELEN. Sir, I respect you for your flattery,
All compliments, of course, are strange to me;
The moral strength required for flattery now,
To a fair Queen, is great, you must allow:
I only envy you the power to make them.

CHARLES. 'Tis, sure, the better part to take them.

HELEN. We don't believe them when you pay them.

CHARLES. Nor we when we say them.

No longer then, ladies, I pray,
At our flattery or fickleness grieve;
If you never believe what we say,
We never say what we believe.

HELEN. From our rule and example, gentle, learn,
And lay this to your hearts, each one in turn:
Pay compliments, pay visits, pay respects,
But pay your just debts first.

HARRY. Our whole effects!

HELEN. The royal rule of pure equality
In complaisance and kindness still shall be
Confided in, and reverenced by me;
So shall my deed of abdication make
All love the loser, for the losing's sake.
Attend! my song the constancy discovers
Of a right royal pair of lovers.

Come, belovéd, let us roam
Forth into the golden fields;
Yon high palace marks our home,
Ours is all that nature yields;
Come, bethrothed and espoused,
Earth is rising towards the sun,
And with light and joy aroused
Meets the love within us one.

Open now thy sleep-dewèd eyes,
Show the subject-soul its queen;
Brighter than the new-born skies
Their delicious depths, I ween.
Don thee, love, thy royal white;
Needs no more divine array;
Fairer than the morning light,
Rule thou ever with the day.

Come the morrow, day divine,
All shall wake and bless the sun;
Those thou lovest shall be mine,
They, and thou, and I be one;
Crown and throne the world shall gain,
Thou, the universal state;
Bride of Beauty! rise and reign;
Love thy life, and Heaven thy fate.

Charles. The meaning whereof, as I take it,—
Helen. True; it's exactly what you make it.
George. There's only one thing wanting that could mend
That song;—a blaze of fireworks at the end.
Helen. Farewell, friends! let us hope to meet again
When others may be present whom we know.
Edward. Adieu! ye semi-deities! in vain
The world may worship idols.
George. Pray, do go!—
Walter. At last, the so-called soulless have departed,
Leaving sundry broken-hearted.
Frederic. To make the life of perfect mould,
Like that in Paradise of old,
Each must give their better part;—
We our soul, and they their heart.
Laurence. The night hath gone, and all the stars
Have vanished at the sun's bright warning;
Still the moon, ghost-like, haunts the heaven,
As though she deemed to her 'twas given:
What hath the moon to do with morning?
So love is fled, and all the fair
Gone; some with smiling, some with scorning,
Save one, the fairest far above.
But what have I to do with love,
More than the moon hath with the morning?
The moon hath lost her light, and seems
To dim the scene she was once adorning;
So my poor heart, its love light gone,
Still in the heavens where late it shone,
Lags like the moon upon the morning.
But I am likest to that moon in this,
That I am brightest when my love's away;
For when with her, my borrowed light is lost,
As is the moon's amid the dazzling day.

Harry. Come, pass the ruby round. There's nought so dull
As to behold a noble vessel, full
Of radiant blessings, halt upon its way;
So fairly give and fairly take, I say.

Progress is nature's unexcepted law,
'Twere better e'en to go from bad to worse,
Than 'tween two like degrees of ill, seesaw;
Stagnation is a universal curse.

There is nothing stands still—so old sages declare,
But the world's ever changing in earth, sea, and air;
All the powers of nature, in truth if we trace,
What are they?—what are they, but running a race?

The winds from all quarters career through the sky,
They blow hot, they blow cold, they blow swift, they blow high;
They follow, they flank, and they fly in our face;
What are they?—what are they, but running a race?

The rivers that run to the ends of the earth
Flow thousands of miles from the place of their birth;
From the old and the new world they pour out apace—
What are they?—what are they, but running a race?

* The worlds they call wanderers rolling on high,
That enlighten the earth and enliven the sky,
cc*
Going hundreds of miles in a minute through space—
What are they?—what are they, but running a race?
Then, with goblets before us, whatever they hold,
Let the hue of the nectar be purple, be gold,—
Let us say, as we sit among friends, face to face,
What are they?—what are they, but running a race?

Laurence. All this is lively. Beauty, love, and mirth
Might seem to flavor even vapid earth
To a pure spirit's lips. For my own part,
I own it sinks life deeper in my heart
At every fresh recurrence: but at times
A thought comes tolling o'er the darkened soul
Which we dare hardly guest; but ill it chimes
With scenes of joy like this, which from the roll
Of memory we oft would fain erase.

George. Not I, one jot, save your ill-omened face.

Walter. For sacred riddles this is neither time nor place.

Laurence. No; but of earth some sacred writings tell
Its flower was paradise, its fruit was hell.
Such is the fruit of worldly pleasure now;
And thus, perhaps, my meaning you may trace.

Harry. We do; but think it useless to avow
Such views at festive moments like the present.

Charles. Indeed, they call up notions quite unpleasant.
So, let us rout them by another draught
And thoughts bright as the beverage quaffed.

HARRY. The future is the world of youth—
The future is our joy;
We dream of honor, love, and truth,
And bliss without alloy.
But harp not now on love or truth,
Forget your dreams of glory;
The wine will double us our youth—
To-morrow dream again of sooth—
But now to what's before ye.
Oh! age will cloud youth's sunny brow,
And sorrows plough the cheek;
The mirth we spread, the joy we know,
Then 'twill be vain to seek.
The old say, life has more of ill
Than good—of grief, than gladness; still,
Within our cup one drop of joy,
Too small, if not too sweet, to cloy,
Alway doth remain.
With us it shall be more than love,
Or fame, or faith, or gain;
And sweet as Heaven's own fruit above,
The common sweeteners of life's bitter grain.
Yes! yes! the memory of this night,
In age's veriest midnight hours,
Shall flash on our minds with a northern-light light,
And a prelude of pleasure illumine the night,
Whose morn we shall breathe in immortal bowers.
Charles. Some say Truth lies in water, some in wine;
Suppose I mix them; now she must be mine.
Frank. Nothing again will serve to make us merry.
Frederic. 'Twas stupid in you, Laurence.
Laurence. Was it?
Will. Very.
Edward. Infernal cant, you'll always find,
Upsets all pleasant parties of this kind.
George. He has put the company, 'tis plain, to flight;
Walter. And so I say—
Charles. I'm going, too.
All. Good night!

Scene—A Visit.

Festus and Helen.

Helen. Come to the light, love! Let me look on thee!
Let me make sure I have thee. Is it thou?
Is this thy hand? Are these thy velvet lips,—
Thy lips so lovable? Nay, speak not yet!
For oft as I have dreamed of thee, it was Thy speaking woke me. I will dream no more.
Am I alive? And do I really look
Upon these soft and sea-blue eyes of thine,
Wherein I half believe I can espy
The riches of the sea? These dark, rolled locks!
O God! art Thou not glad, too, he is here?—
Where hast thou been so long?—never to hear,
Never to see, nor see one who had seen thee.
Come, now, confess it was not kind to treat
Me in this manner.

Festus. I confess, my love.
But I have been where neither tongue, nor pen,
Nor hand could give thee token where I was;
And seen,—but 'tis enough! I see thee now.
I would rather look upon thy shadow there,
Than Heaven's bright thrones forever.

Helen. Where hast been?
Festus. Say, am I altered?
Helen. Nowise.
Festus. It is well.
Then in the resurrection we may know
Each other. I have been among the worlds,
Angels and spirits bodiless.
Helen. Great God!
Can it be so?
Festus. It is:—and that both here
And elsewhere. When the stars come, thou shalt see
The track I travelled through the light of night;
Where I have been, and whence my visitors.
Helen. And thou hast been with angels all the while,
And still dost love me?
Festus. Constantly, as now.
But for the time I did devote my soul
To their divine society. I knew
Thou wouldst forgive, yet dared not trust myself
To see thee, or to pen one word, for fear
Thy love should overpower the plan conceived,
And acting, in my mind, of visiting
The spirits in their space-imbosomed homes.

Helen. Forgive thee! 'tis a deed which merits love.
And should I not be proud, too, who can say,
For me he left all angels?

Festus. I forethought
So thou wouldst say; but with an offering
Came I provided, even with a trophy
Of love angelic, given me for thee;
For angel bosoms know no jealousy.

Helen. Show me.

Festus. It is of jewels I received
From one who snatched them from the richest wreck
Of matter ever made; the holiest
And most resplendent.

Helen. Why, what could it be?
Jewels are baubles only; whether pearls
From the sea's lightless depths, or diamonds
Culled from the mountain's crown, or chrysolith,
Cat's eye, or moonstone,—toys are they at best.
Jewels are not of all things in my sight
Most precious.
Festus. Nor in mine. It is in the use
Of which they may be made their value lies;
In the pure thoughts of beauty they call up,
And qualities they emblem. So in that Thou wearest there, thy cross;—to me it is Suggestive of bright thoughts and hopes in Him
Whose one great sacrifice availeth all,
Living and dead, through all eternity.
Not to the wanderer over southern seas
Rises the constellation of the Cross
More lovelily o'er sky and calm blue wave,
Than does to me that bright one on thy breast.
As diamonds are purest of all things,
And but embodied light which fire consumes
And renders back to air, that nought remains,—
And as the cross is symbol of our creed,
So let that ornament signify to thee
The faith of Christ, all purity, all light,
Through fervency resolving into Heaven.
Each hath his cross, fair lady, on his heart;
Never may thine be heavier or darker
Than that now on thy breast, so light and bright,
Rising and falling with its bosom-swell.

Helen. I thank thee for that wish, and for the love
Which prompts it—the immeasurable love
I know is mine, and I with none would share.
Forgive me; I have not yet felt my wings.
Now, have I not been patient? Let me see
My promised present.
Festus. Look, then—they are here; Bracelets of chrysoprase.

Helen. Most beautiful!

Festus. Come, let me clasp them, dearest, on thine arms;
For these of those are worthy, and are named
In the foundation stones of the bright city,
Which is to be for the immortal saved,
Their last and blest abode; and such their hue,
The golden green of paradisal plains
Which lie about it boundlessly, and more
Intensely tinted with the burning beauty
Of God's eye, which alone doth light that land,
Than our earth's cold grass-garment with the sun;
Though even in the bright, hot, blue-skied East,
Where he doth live the life of light and Heaven;
Where, o'er the mountains, at midday is seen
The morning star, and the moon tans at night
The cheek of careless sleeper. Take them, love.
There are no nobler earthly ornaments
Than jewels of the city of the saved.

Helen. But how are these of that bright city? I
Am eager for their history.

Festus. They are Thereof prophetically, and have been
What I will show thee presently, when I
Relate the story of the angel who Gave them to me.

Helen. Well; I will wait till then,
Or any time thou choosest: 'tis enough
That I believe thee always; — but would know,
If not in me too curious to ask,
How came about these miracles? Hast thou raised
The Fiend of fiends, and made a compact dark,
Sealed with thy blood, symbolic of the soul,
Whereby all power is given thee for a time,
All means, all knowledge, to make more secure
Thy spirit's dread perdition at the end?
I of such awful stories oft have heard,
And the unlawful lore which ruins souls.
Myself have charms, foresee events in dreams;
Can prophesy, prognosticate, know well
The secret ties between many magic herbs
And mortal feelings, nor condemn myself
For knowing what is innocent; but thou!
Thy helps are mightier far, and more obscure.
Was it with wand and circle, book and skull,
With rites forbid and backward-jabbered prayers,
In cross-roads or in churchyard, at full moon,
And by instruction of the ghostly dead,
That thou hast wrought these wonders, and attained
Such high, transcendent powers and secrets? Speak!
Or is man's mastery over spirits not
Of such a vile and vulgar consequence?

Festus. Were not my heart as guiltless of all mirth
As is the oracle of an extinct god
Of its priest-prompted answer, I might smile
To list such askings. Mind's command o'er mind,
Spirit's o'er spirit, is the clear effect
And natural action of an inward gift,
Given of God, whereby the incarnate soul
Hath power to pass free out of earth and death
To immortality and Heaven, and mate
With beings of a kind, condition, lot,
All diverse from its own. This mastery
Means but communion, the power to quit
Life's little globule here, and coalesce
With the great mass about us. For the rest,
To raise the devil were an infant's task
To that of raising man. Why, every one
Conjures the Fiend from hell into himself
When passion chokes or blinds him. Sin is hell.

Helen. How dost thou bring a spirit to thee,
Festus?

Festus. It is my will which makes it visible.

Helen. What are those like, whom thou hast seen?

Festus. They come,
The denizens of other worlds, arrayed
In diverse form and feature, mostly lovely;
In limb and wing ethereal finer far
Than an ephemeris' pinion; others, armed
With gleaming plumes, that might o'ercome an air
Of adamantine denseness, pranked with fire.
All are of different offices and strengths,
Powers, orders, tendencies, in like degrees
As men, with even more variety;
Of different glories, duties, and delights.
Even as the light of meteor, satellite,
Planet and comet, sun, star, nebula,
Differ, and nature also, so do theirs.
With them is neither need, nor sex, nor age.
Nor generation, growth, decay, nor death;
Or none whom I have known; there may be such.
Mature they are created and complete,
Or seem to be. Perfect from God they come.
Yet have they different degrees of beauty,
Even as strength and holy excellence.
Some seem of milder and more feminine
Nature than others,—Beauty's proper sex,
Shown but by softer qualities of soul,
More lovable than awful, more devote
To deeds of individual piety,
And grace, than mighty missions fit to task
Sublimest spirits, or the toil intense
Of cultivating nations of their kind;
Or working out from the problem of the world
The great results of God,—result, sum, cause.
These ofttimes charged with delegated powers,
Formative or destructive; those, in chief,
Ordained to better and to beautify
Existence as it is; with careful love
To tend upon particular worlds or souls;
Warning and training whom they love to tread
The soft and blossom-bordered, silvery paths
Which lead and lure the soul to paradise,
Making the feet shine which do walk on them;
While each doth God's great will alike, and both
With their whole nature's fulness love His works.
To love them lifts the soul to Heaven.

HELEN.
Let me, then!

FESTUS.
Whence come they?

FESTUS.
Many of them come from orbs
Wherein the rudest matter is more worth
And fair than queenly gem; the dullest dust
Beneath their feet is rosy diamonds:—
Others, direct from Heaven; but all in high
And serious love towards those to whom they come.
None but the blest are free to visit where
They choose. The lost are slaves forever; here
Never but on their Master's merciless
Business, nor elsewhere. Still, sometimes with these Dark spirits have I held communion,
And in their souls' deep shadow, as within
A mountain cavern of the moon, conversed
With them, and wormed from them the gnawing truth
Of their extreme perdition; marking oft
Nature revealed by torture, as a leaf
Unfolds itself in fire, and writhes the while,
 Burning, yet unconsumed. Others there are
Come garlanded with flowers unwithering,
Or crowned with sunny jewels, clad in light,
And girded with the lightning, in their hands
Wands of pure rays or arrowy starbeams; some
Bright as the sun self-lit, in stature tall,
Strong, straight, and splendid as the golden reed Whereby the height, and length, and breadth, and depth
Of the descendent city of the skies,
In which God sometimes shall make glad with man,
Were measured by the angel;—the same reed
Wherewith our Lord was mocked, that angel found
Close by the cross and took; God made it gold,
And now it makes the sceptre of His Son
Over all worlds; the sole, bright rule of Heaven,
The measure of immortal life, the scale
Of power, love, bliss, and glory infinite;—
Some gorgeous and gigantic, who, with wings
Wide as the wings of armies in the field
Drawn out for death, sweep over Heaven, and eyes
Deep, dark as sea-worn caverns, with a torch
At the end, far back, glaring. Some with wings
Like an unfainting rainbow, studded round
With stones of every hue and excellence,
Writ o' er with mystic words which none may read
But those to whom their spiritual state
Gives correlative meaning fit thereto.
Some of these visit me in dreams; with some
Have I made one in visions, in their own
Abodes of brightness, blessedness, and power;
And know, moreover, I shall joy with them,
Ere long their sacred guest, through ages yet
To come, in worlds not now perhaps create,
As they have been mine here: and some of them
In unimaginable splendors I
Have walked with through their wingéd worlds of light,
Double and triple party-colored suns
And systems circling each the other, clad
In tints of light and air, whereto this earth
Hath nothing like, and man no knowledge of:—
Orbs heaped with mountains, to the which ours are Mere grave mounds, and their skies flower with stars,
Violet, rose or pearl-hued, or soft blue,
Golden or green, the light now blended, now
Alternate; many moons and planets, full,
Crescent, or gibbous-faced, illumining
In periodic and intricate beauty
At once those strange and most felicitous skies.
According to the nature of those spheres
Their natives are; some human-like, and some
Of great, gigantic grace and happiest air,
Yet solemn as the sun; they walk like winds,
Whose dwelling is all immaterial space,
And vanish slowly in the hollow heavens.
Some of still vaster size and mightier mien,
Whose movement is as thunder in a cloud,
Devouring space; some like to flickering ghosts
Of fire, while underneath their every step
Spring perfumes up and flowers, bedight in rays
Aerial of the purest, brightest skies;—
Others of sanguine hue, whose step is like
An instantaneous trembling of the Heavens;
Others again, whose forms for utter bright
Are indefinable; from place to place.
Their feet pass like the twinklings of the stars;
Some of a cold, pure bodily rayonnance,
As is the moon's of naked light, ungarbed
In circumspheral air, who glide like clouds;
And some in bands, some singly, some in groups;
For all perchance is starlife after death;
While others sworded, sceptred, crowned, and robed;
Spirits of power, who rule each one his star:
Spirits, who through all time have hoped and seen,
Through godless darkness and deistic dawn,
The solar revelation of Heaven's light;—
Spirits, whose form is fire, whose life is strength,
Precipitate as tempests, are:—to these
Add what gives earnest of inferior life,
Eagle, dove, lion, lamb, ox, serpent, horse;
Nor lightly estimate such signs, but mind
The potent meaning of the simplest sign,
To one whose mind is meaning to itself.
For angels can assume the form they please,
And transform things inanimate, as once
With earth's angelic watcher I beheld.
The lonely diamond which decked her pale
Transparent brow was worth a mansion; worth
A mine and an estate; so pure and clear,
All globular and gloriously sized,
Like one large drop of paradisal dew
Immortalized, it shone; and so it was,
Which from a leaf she gathered of the tree
Of perfect life on Eden's natal morn.

Helen. How I should love to visit other worlds,
Or see an angel!

Festus. Wilt thou now?

Helen. I dare not;
Not now, at least. I am not in the mood.
Ere I behold a spirit, I would pray.

Festus. Light as a leaf they step, or arrowy
Footing of breeze upon a waveless pool;
Sudden and soft, too, like a waft of light,
The beautiful immortals come to me;
Oh, ever lovely, ever welcome they!

Helen. Thou speakest me of visions; I would learn
The nature of all spiritual things.

Festus. Matter and mind comprise the universe,
All conscious nature and self-conscious art,
As the twin-tidal wave inarms the world.
Spirit and nature act contrariwise,
Yet harmonize in contrariety.
Now it is earth which riseth towards the sun,
And not the sun on earth: yet let us deem
God seeketh us, illuminating life;
Not that it is our earth rise into Heaven,
Forced by orbital reason towards the Truth
Even when retrogressive. In the pure,
Black, lifeless void, no star is to be seen,
Nothing but nothing seeming palpable.
It is only through their sensuous atmospheres
That worlds can view each other, or that light
Itself becomes enlightening. So with man.
So brightest stars are but the darkest dust
Illumined from without, and central fire
Is self-consummative of death alone:
So light, all colorless, all colors holds.
Art is man's nature, nature is God's art:
Eternal this, that temporal; and thus
Soul in itself may realize all time
By indagation of supremest spheres
Material and spiritual, born
Of effluent or influent Deity,
Whereby the universe revolves round God
In everlasting period,—He Himself
Conceiving, bearing, suffering, ending all,
Affiliating and inheavening:—power
And means vouched heretofore to some, and now
To him who words the wonders he hath seen.
There is a secret sign whereby the soul
Feels certainty of safety and of power
Imparted, public to the universe
Which then looks joyful as in sight of rest,
And yet unwist of by a single world;
Infallible to one who hath received
The birthright of the death-begotten life;
Stamped in the spirit, as the gleaming seal
Upon the brows of those imparadised,
The true tri-literal monogram of God.
High o'er the sensible Heavens translated far.
Beyond the interchanging universe
Of sense and substance, body, life and death,
And deathfulness of evil, being's bane,
The soul to whom this sign is given lives;
And is a soul of the first magnitude.
All truth is vague, all error is distinct;
One being less, one greater than man's soul:
Whereof the true transfiguration takes Place, and reception in supernal truth
When we view all things from a point of Heaven
Opposed to the world's wisest certainty.
For then all bright, high, seeming-scattered thoughts
By ardent contemplation star themselves
Into the shapes which Faith and Reason love
To fill up with a Heaven of their own.
The world is as a great sarcophagus,
Engraven inwardly and outwardly
With living emblems of its inner life
And soul-containing tenant of all time.
The same hath infinite meanings as the work
Of spirit and tenure of humanity;
Backwards to God, and forwards read for man:
Oft differ text and order; wise is he
Who scans and construes all in harmony.
A sacred side there is to every thing,
As given or forbidden, false or true.
According to the greater truth involved,
One side is always bright, one always dark,
Leaflike and moonlike; and each separate life
Is as a leaf which waits the shining breath
Of nature, our mysterious prophetess,
To give it its due order in the world.
But as God's own true name is uttered not
If known in Heaven the highest, nor on earth,
So, too, there are innominable depths,
Which cannot be revealed of human life,
And ought not if they could; the elements
Of the premortal manhood which inhered
In the conception of creative mind;
Since shown to few, and only dimly known.
Speech is divine, but silence Deity.
As sleep in life, and dreams in sleep, is truth
In dreams to man. Many the greatest truths
Have been made known in visions or in dreams.
For then it is the soul recalls the spheres
Of preëxistent nature, and evokes
The ghosts of coming ages, or unites
Past, present, future in one windlike touch,
Which loosens the world's zone, and renders mind
The master of creation. Be it so!
Once I received a vision—for the crown
Of nature is passivity, and our Best mood the pure recipient—in a state
Of twilight-like existence, such as that
Of universal substance, when the sun,
And light and darkness, moon, and Heaven and earth,
Were nigh all one, and nought distinct save souls,
Echoes of Light, reacting heavenwardly.
It was the spirit of the universe,
Whose breast was of like hemispheres of bliss.
Whereon the worlds were nursed, that I beheld.
The fragrance of the fadeless fields of Heaven,
The endless blessings of an act of grace,
Or mercy's matron bosom filled her words;
And each articulate air she did expire
O'erladen with the lore of ages, e'en
As earth was with her old baptismal flood;
In her deep eye immortal quiet dwelt
As though all Heaven had settled on one star.
She spake, and I regarded with such awe
As eaglet when he first beholds the sun.
And though what I remember be all true,
Yet, in so far as worded, it is not
The entire truth uncircumscribable;
Can a spar speak how it was crystallized?
She spake, I said, the spirit, and at her word
Behold the Heavens were opened as a book.
I am the world-soul, nature's spirit I.
Ere universe or constellation was,
System, or sun, or orb, or element,
Darkness, or light, or atom, I first lived;
I and necessity, though twain in life,
Yet one in being. Time and life are one.
But insomuch as nature is destroyed
In God's assumption to Divine estate
Of an especial soul, necessity
Ends in extreme original nothingness;
And leaves all supernatural existence free,
As breath in air, like-natured with the same,
Yet altered in condition, function, form,
And glorified. God is, and men exist.
Free agency extends 'tween man and man,
And every finite nature; between God
And man, and every finite being, fate.
What is divine is, of necessity, free.
I heard, and I received, and from my soul,
Intense in quiet, perfect in repose,
Like sleep's fantastic frost-work melted death;
And entering straight the heaven-surrounding state
Of deified existence among gods,
It grew ignited with divinity.
Again the world-soul voiced itself, and I
Drank in the fruitful glories of her words
As earth consumes the golden skyey clouds.
Two books there are which must be read; the one
Wherein the elements exist as leaves,
And all the worlds as signs and symbols; thus
Earth is the symbol of humanity,
Water of spirit, fire of Deity,
And air of all things; stars, the truths of Heaven.
Water and fire are elements divine;
Earth and air, human; Heaven and the soul
From one proceed, and the blue, heated skies;
Out of the other, body and abode.
The sun, too, symbols spirit, and the moon
Soul, and the earth life-essence through all space; And agents of destruction, like the flood, Presign regeneration; also fire. This present is the result of what is past And coming, but the temporal present only; The eternal present is before both past And future, and posterior to them both: And these are verified in the Eterne, In act as in religion; thus in man; Judgment is life, and memory like death, Imagination, immortality. The actual and ideal meet but once, Where pure impossibilities are facts. Judge doubtful things by certainest, and dark By what is clear, and dangerous by safe; And prophesy of God to all which live, And aboriginal Heaven. And of the soul, The other tome I spake of, believe thou, Body surrounds the human soul as in Divine nature, which is its contrary, God's infinite spirit bounds the universe. For Thy creation, although infinite, Is infinitely less than Thce, O God! Thine is the spirit, and the soul is Thine, And all the thousand instincts of the heart The universe is simple; God and I, Cause and effect, are all that in it is; And more; for Cause containeth its effect. Cause, operation, and effect are God,
Nature, and man: which both partake of one. Through error human souls accept the truth, As through distorting air, the light whereby They live, of sun or star; and thus through time, And ceaseless as the pulsings of the blood, The inspiration of the spirit acts In one or other's bosom. Through the world The soul receives God, but from God, the soul Receives the spirit; thus the chosen, thus the world; The cloud-led many, the star-guided wise; For spirit makes all time and nature clear, As of old water purified by fire.

Methought I answered as it might be, thus:
Life, like a floating island, comes and goes,
We know not, mean not how. From Heaven to Earth A star falls, and we track a cold dark mass Of trembling, half-transparent somethingness, Which is, in our conception, as unlike All astral issue and celestial birth As wind is unlike wisdom; thunder, snow. We know not that we are, nor how, nor why. The distance between finite, howsoe'er Great, and the infinite, is infinite.
Our life is incomplete and sectional; And the large unity of all we seek In vain to realize; yet much we strive; And every ideal of union, Which youth makes to itself, is beautiful, Or blissful, mostly. Still, through every sign,
From morn, all musical, to blank-starred night,
Death's wolflike shadow haunts the vital orb;
With spectral darkness, and eclipse of life,
Freezing the fiery marrow of the world.
While yet these words were vibrant on my tongue,
I saw the sun-god stall his flaming steeds
In customary splendor; which, in turn,
Shaking their lightning trappings off to earth,
And, snatching a few golden grains of sleep,
Solaced them with their corner in the west;
Towards where earth uplifts her crystal crown,
White with all yearéed snows and radiant rime;
While ever and again the dancing morn,
E'en in the mid abyss of solar night,
With roseate blaze impowers the shining skies,
And pure, prismatic fire, that lights the stars.
Stretching her hand into the nebulous depths,
Of everlasting space, again the spirit spake.
As the ethereal essence of the world,
Whereof all matter is mere increment,
Speak I in truth to thee; and now of earth;—
For as there is one Father of all things,
And as of spirit is all action born,
So of one substance is all nature made.
Regard not earth as the whole universe,
Nor minify the orb into a point
Where all relations vanish. Earth receives,
In an immortal influence, and gives back,
Out of her bright and generative heart,
To all that is therein conceived, and born
Of her exuberant bosom inwardly,
The vital virtues of the potent Heavens;
Backwards and forwards passing, night and day,
With an invisible radiance filling up
The interstitial skies. To all the forms
Of plant, fish, brute, bird, insect, and the lives
Insensible and unconceived, which were,
One time, as living continents, whereof
The elemental matter of the world
Is mainly made, so that men live on life—
Round to tyrannic man, whose soul's componed
Of diverse powers and passions, He who made
Out of life's infinite estate doth give
To all these forms renewal in the mass
Ceaseless; to man alone a personal
Regeneration; for as true as 'tis
That all are generated, so like surely
All are to be regenerated; all
Differ among each other in degree,
Of beauty, eminence, vitality;
The individuals of each species, too,
Among themselves. If some excel, the rest
Suffer not therefore. Wrong to none is wrought
By honor to a high, peculiar few,
Self-meritless, whose whole position stands
Ingenerable by themselves. Exists
This class eclect in all things; best in man;
In whom the motional music of the Heavens,

Festus.
The elemental workings of the world,
Upward and downward, circular and plane,
The spirit pure impassable of fire,
Are symbolled all in sunlike excellence.
Behold! the spirit said, and I beheld
Earth, the horizon black with numberless
Men, and a mountainous altar high amidst,
Shaped like a vast inverted pyramid,
Whereby four forms stood; one arrayed in white,
And one in uniformal black; in green
The third, and of all hues the fourth. And most
I marked at first the two first named. All bliss
Each claimed as his alone, denouncing one
The other:—both all warning that fierce fire
Burnt for their sake who sware not by a creed
Garbled, patched up, and contradictory;
Confounding text and comment, with no rule
Interpretative; now as literal,
Now figurative, holding laws like plain,
Which, where most true, impracticable were,
Where possible, intolerable. Love
Nathless, they said, this pair, from first to last,
Being its Author's nature, infinite
Love to a mortal creature, the sole cause
Which prompted God to sacrifice His Son,
In order that like infinite return
Of glory and of blessing might accrue
To the enfranchised universe; their creeds
And deeds as arctic from antarctic wide.
At either side they stood and pressed the world,
And prayed right earnestly and honestly
All men to serve God and obey the law,
Accept of Heaven's free grace, and something do
To help God in the saving of their souls.
And myriads sought their several priestly sides
And did as was enjoined them, and rejoiced.
Then something passed between them and the twain
Ceasing opponent duarchy atoned,
In friendship for past enmity, and straight
Culling all contraries from holy grounds,
Built up an idol of all elements
Most disaccordant. Thus his deathly feet
They framed of fire, of earth his lower limbs,
His upper part of water, his head, air;
And throned him on the broad and upturned base
Of that earth-piercing altar-pyramid.
And round about him last a fane they reared,
To which all earth in divers modes gave aid;
A circular temple-patent to the sun,
Sea-lavered, mountain-columned, kingdom-paved.
When, as he sat his throne, there rose a shout
From the foregathered multitudes, which caused
The circumspatial skies shake, cold with dread,
And earth revibrate to her inmost base.
In his right hand he held the sun and moon,
And in his left, a wingèd orb, cross-crowned;
Bare by his side hung down a sword of fire,
Curved comet-wise. A rosary of stars
Decked either wrist. With stars his breast was mailed
Like to a knight's of old, with scales steel-gilt,
Or like an ice plant, with perpetual dew,
Or diamond beetle round beglobed with light.
And the unsphered skies darkened momently.
To him was brought the world, bound hand and foot.
Which more intently worshipped than the poor,
Bewildered devotee of Eastern lands,
Whose idol car-wheels roll through human dust,
His golden, squatting demons diamond-eyed.
Round that great altar thousand lesser were,
Each one enringed with crowds. The monarch, there
Upon that central shrine where sat the god,
Laid down his crown; the warrior cast his sword,
The peer his glittering badge, the merchant-prince
His hoarded coffer. There the statesman placed
His seal of power, the priest his robe, the bard
And the harmonious master, lyre and pen:
Who soar or mine, in science or in art,
Their elements, and implements, and gifts;
The scribe, and the physician, and the wright,
His several offering. Thither hied the crowds
Of mediate millions, between gain and toil;
Thither the brawny-armed and brown-browed hind,
Whose wealth was in his will and daily work,
Repaired, and earth's luxurious, toilless tribes
Followed, with each their hands full of good things,
And felt their conscience lightened; blessed their lot,
And all went well and ended happily.
Those minor altars, where the hate and scorn
Of the majestic pair who served the highest,
And swore athwart the cross to make all souls
Believe alike in clockwork-like content.
Yet might they not. The many most succeed,
The great few fail; and among those few, these.
Each leader held within his hand and read
Choice scraps to those about him, from the book
Whose words are volumes, and whose laws are life:
To spiritual reason only. Hence
A countless train of misbeliefs arose
Like pure parhelia, high above all power
Of man or priest to hinder or destroy.
Some of belief thought most; of practice, some.
Some thought of God as darkness, some as light;
And worshipped each; some held that space was God
While others said, and wisely, God is, what?
Some held that God, and all the heavenly powers,
As with the starry panarchy of space,
Were of one essence, like divine and high;
Some that the Word and Holy Spirit were
Deific functions only of one God:
He who in Heaven was Father, was on Earth
Born as the Son, and, in the chosen twelve,
Spake him as tongue’d fire; conceiting thus:
God as the sun, His word our Lord, its light,
And its all-comforting heat, the Holy Ghost.
Some deemed that He, the all-existent One,
Rovolving all things orblike in Himself,
And future fates, abyss within abyss,
Through endless ages, hit at last on man
As the consummate accident of time,
And everlasting bubble, to whom were
Nought necessary, save necessity.
Some that in mystical quaternity
All Deity existed; and the first
Ycleped Ineffable, and the last, Truth;
Father and Son, gods intermediate.
These deemed that wholly contemplating God
The soul, suffused in Deity, required
No active virtue, but on God's own breast
Lay lulled in glory, and in unitive
Life with divinity, its end fulfilled,
Inordinately happy. Some maintained,
That it was necessary to believe
That whatsoe'er is done by men, is done
By God's Spirit; and thence conclude no sin
Exists, unless to those who think it such;
And that to live without all doubt or dread,
Were to restore to life the paradise
Initiate of the soul—that pleasant place,
Erst deafforested—and realize
The catholic salvation of the world.
Some held that, now and then, there speaks in all
The word of God, His light enlightening all,
If not resisted carnally. Some judged
The evil of sin and punishment, alike
Reflected on divine rule, if eterne;
And some believed, despite all threats of fire,
Here and hereafter, that the soul, ere yet
Clad with the body, had forelived in Heaven,
A holy creature; but that, sinning, earth
Was its amercement made, its prison flesh;
From which emerging, it shall gather back
Its preexistence, and by grace resume
The heavenly powers belonging it; in dreams,
They said, dim glimpses come of blessed states,
And shadowings of power, which to the soul
Seem inborn and accustomed as a star,
When first immersed in light it leaves the sun.
Some held, and erred, that makers there were twain;
One good, one evil; that the soul was made
By the good Lord, the body by the bad,
And sin was fleshly; that the Lord of Life
Lived in the sun, the Holy Spirit, air,
Wisdom, the moon, the Father the abyss
Of light inhabited; that Christ was Eve's
Tempter in Eden; that baptismal rites
Should be performed with fire, and milk and wine
Be held accursed. Some believed two souls
In every man; celestial this, and that
Infernal, but expellable by prayer
And holy habit, fasting, watching, alms;
Some thought the Christian world to reconcile,
And heathendom and Jewry, by a creed
Of one eternal Father-God, and two
Christhs; one in Heaven, the other born on earth;
And that the Holy Spirit wisdom was,
The sister of the Son. Some held that He
And Satan were two lower powers, whom God
Had pitted 'gainst each other during time;
But that the final conquest is the Lord's.
Others, that at His second coming, Christ
Would give His saints a carnal paradise;
Nothing in being vying with that vast Impossibility. Some deemed our Lord
Alone was God, the Father, and the Spirit;
And some that He was simply best of men;
Others, that Christ was God, and Jesus, man;
Believing not the aforetime unity
Of the Divine and human. Some maintained
That each believer was himself a Christ;
Some, that the mortal mother of our Lord
A goddess was, and sacrificed to her,
Pre-temporal, immortal. Some believed
The person of our Savior, while on earth,
Was every where at once, and that the same
At His ascension settled in the sun—
And that the body of the universe
With Him was coeternal. Some, that Christ
Received His flesh-frame of the elements,
Which, at His death, He paid back to the world
And rose to Heaven incorporeal. Others deemed
His body was a dreary phantom, only
Impassable of pain, or thirst, or death;
Making the love of God of no effect,
And thus the deicidal tribes made quit;
The deeds of nations, being thoughts of God.
Others, that Deity, in bread and wine,
Made into consecrated elements,
Resided; round it some, some under it;
As though the hand of man imparted God.
Some thought perfection was attainable
In this life, and with these means as in Heaven;
And that with man it rests to reinstate
The Adamic Eden, and by converse pure,
And holy life, redeem the sacred day,
When nature's every work was miracle;
When man, and brute, and angel, all communed
In happy ease, and fruits made good and wise;
As ere the immortal seraph-serpent stung
Heaven's virgin star, or brake young nature's seal,
Or left his lightning trail through all divine
Traditions, and became what now he is,
The spiritual discord of all life;
But, ah! from that primitial world to this,—
From Eden to Chaldea,—what a change,
From Paradise to Persia!—Some eschewed
All earth-lore, and would have, that God required
Good deeds alone from men; some that, nor law
Nor gospel profited the human soul;
That good works furthered not, ill hindered not
Salvation; but pure faith alone sufficed;—
Others, that neither worship, work, nor faith
Was requisite; that war and sociality
Were equal evils, and that marriage was
Nor type, nor bond, nor good, but simple sin.
Some said all deadly sin was past church power
To pardon, even on due penitence;
And that the blesséd twelve could never hope
Of aught but venial sins to be released,
Even of God Himself. And two there were
Of mortal men, who deemed that they, the last
God-witnesses on earth, could save or damn
Whome'er they willed; false birth of falsity!
Conformably to fate they lived and died,
Their souls absorpt of darkness, brides of death;
For, over all, death works his hellish will.
Some thought the gates of Heaven were sealed to all
Until the great re-rising; some, that the world
Was made by angels only, and not by God,
Who would not, with aught earthly, soil His hand.
Some in annihilation placed their hope,
Wherein to be absorbed was bliss thrice blest,
And deified the devil in their hearts
In dreams of everlasting nothingness.
Some thought a kind indifference towards aught
Which haps in this life, and full consciousness
Of blest necessity in every act,
And charity in all opined of man,
Made true religion and philosophy.
Some grains of truth-gold, some few lines of life,
Starring the vast formations of the false;
And for thus meddling with these mysteries,
Unmeant by Heaven to be cleared up on earth;—
Out-taking those who have eyes trained to see,
Nor all its scriptural darkesses illumed,
Those twin-compellers of conformity,
Erst marked, condemned, from time to time, to hell.
Rack, massacre, and fire, each bubble sect
Which rose in full-blown emptiness to show
Their own familiar charity, and prove
The inspiration which they claim of God,
Who tells all He is Love. Those sects themselves,
Full of molecular motion, fought like mites
Which fill a water-drop, and day by day
Consumed or cursed each other. For the rest,
Who stood round the great altar saying creeds,—
And each had his dissenting heretics,—
The third one simply smote by the sword-edge
All who dared doubt his darkly checkered tale,
Which was nor very truth, nor very lie,
But hung suspended between Heaven and Earth,
Baseless as utter void. The fourth was meek
In mood, as ignorant as tolerant;
Though every now and then he closed his eyes,
And rose, and slew promiscuously round.
The various modes of practice next I marked,
Wherein devoutest trust is ofttimes placed
Among mankind, and much my mind was moved;
And my soul sank within me like a star
Sea-setting, when it leaves all Heaven behind.
Some burnt, some drowned, some maimed, some clammed themselves
Or others, all in proof of piety;
Some sacrificed their children, some their sires,
Some fruits, some flowers, beasts and the young of beasts,
In honest, obstinate hope of earning Heaven:
Others heaped stone on stone, and shrine on shrine,
To mock the span of Heaven and the stars;
Silver inlaid with gold, gold decked with gem;
Others dug out the earth and worshipped fumes,
And paid respect to vapors, which, inhaled,
Bred holy inspiration. Some, in warm
And reeking entrails, read the signs of God,
Or deemed they did, prophetic. Others, sun
And moon, and stars, or fixed, or wandering,
Adored, in the belief that through them came
Vast spiritual inflow: earthborn fire
Or sunborn, rivers, mountains, seas, stones, herbs
Brute, insect, fish, bird, earth, and air, and man,
All these were sworn by, prayed to, in the wild,
Sad faith, that man’s humanity by them
Could gain some earnest of divinity.
Some only ate of certain meats, or laid
Under dread ban all flesh, and milk, and wine,
Extolling green food and the sparkling spring;
As though brutes only spiritually lived,
And virtue were a vegetable thing.
Some ate and drank, at stated intervals,
Or more or less, a certain something, which,
If what they say, we wrong the cannibals;
While others fasted forty days a year,
Prayed fifty times a day, or in the face
Of babes cold water plashed, wherewith, past doubt,
That generation was much edified,
And the original sin-burnt soul well cooled.
Others wore iron spikes around their waists,
Burnt fire in their bosoms; with their bread
Mixed dust and filth, ate grass, and naked lived;
Or crawled, for leagues, like serpents in the dust.
In sign of self-abasement. Base, indeed,
Such writhings, to propitiate our God,
In whom was perfected all sacrifice,
All penalty, all humblement, all death;
He who was God in Heaven ere man on earth,
Who left His universal work complete,
The spiritual as the natural;
When, at His bright ascent to Heaven, He gave
A second Sabbath to the universe;
Who of His own free will gives life to all,
And once, too, of His own free choice, chose death,
That all might of necessity be free;
Turning humanity into deity,
As water into wine, and saved the whole.
These things are true of all, some few except,
Versed in the ways of Heaven as are the stars,
Who, through all time, have trusted nought but God;
Whose seats are on the mounts of Paradise,
Hewn out of living rock, though here they feel
The flat deformity of creature life.
Once more I looked around, and hour by hour
The multitudes departed, yet increased;
But one way came they, countless ways they went;
Through age, birth, pestilence, vice, folly, war,
Disease, excess, woe, famine, sin, and fate;
And as I gazed, priest, altar, crowd, and god
Vanished, and were no more. On earth's bright head
The dew of morn and even fell as wont,
The tear of sorrow and the tear of joy.
Behold, now, Heaven! the Spirit said, and I
One vast and universal Heaven beheld;
God's universal and perpetual smile,
Which, harmonizing all things, all o'erspreads.
There every thing hath life, the elements
All vitalized, and glorified, and named
Love, wisdom, strength, and beauty, and all hues
Which nature owns, from earth's original blush
To Heaven's eternal azure, hallowed are;
While winds all musical, and odorous
Like breath of Deity, in sentient clouds,
The delicate chariots of journeying souls,
Issue their fruitful blessings round the skies.
There all-exalting joys abide; there flow
The fountains of eternal life, and streams
Of perfect virtue for soul-baptism;
There roll the wide abysmal mysteries,
Yet luminous with life; there grow the groves,
Whose trees of golden boles and pearly fruits,
Wind-moved forth, utter all harmonious praise.
Cities and fanes of diamond crown the hills,
Bright with the sole companionship of Heaven,
Of this pre-earthly paradise; wherein
Who enter are by kindest angels clad
In garments wrought of rainbows, and in robes
Woven of sunset clouds; while viny wreaths,
Gemberries bearing, form their coronals,
Exuberant of all fruitage. Food they need not,
Who live on life and quaff eternal joy,
And rest in peace as in the down of doves.
There many pass all time, the hour of God,
In pure and whole contentment. Others, still,
In ceaseless, boundless progress, as from star
To star, from bliss to bliss, pass, until all
Return to God renewed, like rays of light,
The all-attractive and delightful light,
Redeemed up to the sun. In one band there,
Jew, Christian, Moslem, Heathen, gracious live
In mutual forgiveness, blessing each
The other; what, too, in their several creeds
Is proven false, each casts away, what true,
All keep uniting and amending; for
In all was truth, though thrice the truth in one.
As to the sleepless eye, form forth at last
The long, immeasurable layers of light,
And beams of fire enormous in the East,
The broad foundations of the Heaven-domed day,
All fineless as the future, so uprose
On mine the great celestial certainty.
The mask of matter fell off. I beheld,
Void of all seeming, the sole substance, mind,
The actual ideal of the world.
An absolutest essence filled my soul,
And, superseding all its modes and powers,
Gave to the spirit consciousness divine;
A sense of vast existence in the skies,
Boundless commune with spiritual light,
And ultimate eternity of Heaven.
And I returned mine hungry eyes to the light
Of the great Spirit's eyes, which, past the first
Intensifying blindness, clearlier saw
The words she uttered of triumphant truth;
For, truly as my vision heightened, lo!
The universal volume of the Heavens,
Star-lettered in celestial characters,
Moved musically into worlds like these,
Which her breath framed, and varied momently;
And I perceived that thus she spake of God:—
God is the sole and self-existent, one
Superessential being, of whom was
He who is with the Father coeterne,
The first and last of being; and of both
The Spirit, and these all are one and same
In Godhood, yet distinct in Deity.
From the Son's hand came all things visible,
And from the Spirit, all invisible;
Forth-flowing from, and ebbing back to Him,
Creation's God, regeneration's Lord.
Man's Savior must be God; and such was Christ.
The Father of the faithful, and the first
Of men was each in Him retyped; and thus
The chosen and the world are blessed both.
And all effect commensurate with its cause,
Each infinite, Creation stands redeemed
By Him, first, last, and mediate, God with man.
Full in the bosom of humanity,
As on the waters of the unborn world,
The spirit God came down, uniting thus
The mortal and eternal in the word
'Foreuttered ere all ages, blessing all.
This is the legend which surrounds the world,
Though the best part be nigh obliterate.
Men are of one kind, therefore, and two sorts,
Irrelative, as in mortality;
United only in the spirit state.
With each is imperfection, but to these
Comes by God's grace one elemental shock
To fuse the ruinous chaos wrought by sin,
And nature make communicant of Heaven.
Both gain the end so sought, and must; but those
Labor along with wheels, while these have wings.
To these, God gives His spirit; while, for all,
The Son laid down the Heavens as a crown,
And clothed Himself in clay; thus taking up
Of all the nature, that all might in Him
Be one; and full and holy equalness
Belong humanity as angelhood,
Of glory varied, level all in bliss.
The nations all which die to be redeemed
Shall find desire unite with destiny.
And for the chosen, 'tis enough to know;
God knoweth all whom He doth choose and save;
And they know that He knows. Though all the powers
Of air array themselves in lines of fire,
And arm them with the armory of death;
Though all the hosts of hell encamp them round,
High as the tented mountains of the earth,
Yet, at a wave of His hand, like to slaves,
They vanish from the assiegement of the saints.
Transition is, to all which live, life's law;
To some of downward and deterior lot;
The soul subdued to superstition sinks—
To some, the link of supramundane bliss,
Whose souls are dominations incarnate,
Yea, sons of stars, which, darting out of Heaven,
Made themselves mortal for the mother's sake;
Who with original motion fling off truths,
Of perfect light, oracular of God,
Which, in their minds, who worthily receive,
Are full of inborn virtue more than known,
Accompletive of destiny divine,
And, like the luminous rudiments of Heaven,
Which gradually gravitate to worlds,
Corroborate their nature and make free
Their souls to course through the blank void of time
To the bright fulness of eternity.
O'er all extends God's love; for greater need
Is that the base or ignorant soul should rise,
And be made noble, wise, blest, than slave on
In hell, through burning ages, to adjust
The balance sin on earth had wronged; for sin,
Irreconcilable to Deity,
Yet unavoidable to human soul,
And, wherefore, He hath absolutely made
His own hands answerable, shall become
The contrary of all things, and not be.
These are the great initials of the world:
Being is one, the central, infinite cause,
Common to both creator and create,
The great substratum of the universe:
Knowing and doing, and the fact of form
The coexistent laws of one extreme,
The other all imbounding and alone.
From one divine, all permeant unity,
Proceeds the multitudinous infinite,
Mental, material, and essential—God,
In justice to Himself and love to all,
Basing in elemental equalness
The whole on grace; thus earth and moon were made
Like syllables of light, uttered of God;
The earth conceived in music, and the moon,
Lady of all the orbéd deities,
Like her who wears in Heaven the twelve-starred crown,
And with all creatures blest of God; who, with
A sevenfold blessing and inviolate rest,
Yea, with His Sabbath, sealed the perfect world,
Making it over to eternity,
And angel musings; the bright universe,
The double-tabled book of Heaven and Earth,
Despite all, due deficiency and sin,
Which in all souls inhere till God assumes,
Progressing aye, possessing, too, all bliss
Elect and universal in the Heavens.
From God, the sun-creator, nature was,
Ethereal essences, all elements,
And souls therein indigenous, and man
Symbolic of all being. Out of earth
The matron moon was moulded, and the sea
Filled up the shining chasm. Both fulfil
One orbit, and one nature, and all orbs
With them, one fate, one universal end.
From the projective moment of all light
The moon was in the sun, and in the sun
The form of earth was, and the sun in Heaven
The incarnation of the fiery skies.
And when in earth the sun and moon make one,
Nature is glorified, and enters Heaven.
The spirit bursts its immaterial shell
And form impalpable, regaining thus
The vast vacuity which fills all life,
And wherein dwells the incommunicable.
Again the Spirit, as a gale of light,
Whose words, like cloudless thunder, wrought in me
Meet apperception of the sum of things.
The natural creation ended first,
Commenced the spiritual, which in God
Aforehand lived; thus time unfolds the seed
Sown in eternity and reaped therein;
The great paternal and invisible fire,
Which eateth that it issueth, and wherein
All filiated nature ceaseth work;
Being an infinite means as well as end.
Thy name, O Immortality, to man
Sounds clear, essential music; through the soul
Thrilling, as through the heartstrings of a star
Its tidal pulses and dim throbs of light
Ere fraternized in Heaven; yea, round that hope,
So vast, yet vague, which, like the northern morn,
One hour usurps the midsky, and the next
Lies buried 'neath the pole, are gathered thoughts
And truths, which, with their weight, determine life;
As motion in an atom leads at last
To a world's orbit — mote and motion given.
For the exalted Spirit, prepared with power,
Sublimes and fuses in itself all else;
And thus, self-conscious of its inner life,
Makes all externals subject, and maintains
That rule o'er thoughts and things, which in itself
Is present proof of what the world most seeks,
The boundless union of the soul with God.
Now matter makes not one continuous orb,
Nor is light all-where massed alike. The stars
Perradiated each like thunderbolts
Stand, clustered into omniformal spheres.
The wise well know true union is in Heaven
And pure totality, and there alone.
Behold! the Spirit said, and I beheld
A bright, miraculous mystery of God—
The divine marriage of the sun and moon.
The sun was flaming high in Heaven; the moon,
Mighty, though mild, and all the saintly stars
Softer than sunlight, stronger than the moon,
Shining at once in grandeur and grave bliss.
It was the world's All-sire gave the bride. The stars
Were her immortal bride maidens, and strewed
Along the glittering path she trode through Heaven,
Life-blooms, and wreathed sunrays of all hues.
Deep in all dayless time, degreeless space,
The shining fane stood; and the angels struck
Their lyres of light, and even to the feet
Of the Divine Ones bowed them, with serene
Acclaim, afar-off hailing them, and cried,
Welcome, thou Lord of Life; thou Bride of Light!
All joy, all bliss be yours in Heaven and Earth,
And all the universal blessers choose.
Choicest of all the chosen, art thou here?
Thy love is more delicious than the rose;
Yea, purer than the lily or the light.
Lord of the day! the world awaits thee now;
Earth's eyes are dim with watching for this day;
The bread is broken, and the wine is poured,
And all the guests are gathered from the bounds
Of Heaven's imperial horizon to this
The bright, palatial centre. All things serve
The hallowing rite which nature owns with God.
And so they became one. In golden he,
In silver car came she down the blue skies,
But on return they clomb the clouds in one,
And vanished in their snow. The marriage feast
Was held a universal holiday
Throughout the light-lit world: nor since have ceased
The great congratulations. Peace and bliss
Pervade the perfect state, and all is love.
Still as a star, which overflows with light,
She stood and spake intuitive of Heaven,
The world-divining spirit, whilom named.
Now such as man is to himself, is His Divine idea; but the God which is
Is not the God men worship, not alone
Ineffable, but inconceivable;
How shall an atom comprehend the Heaven?
Two points men occupy in space and time,
And half exist of matter and in form:
Thus, His existence is their opposite;
And all is either God or nothingness,
Being with non-being identical.
All terms are relative expressing bound,
But Deity, interminable being,
Hath ever, therefore, been unnamed; but men,
Framed to exist in act and utterance,
And grasping ever at the love of God,
Strained to the breast of silence, breathe His name
In pious perpetuity, and throw
Off, with orbicular action, sphere on sphere,
Like circlets of reiterated light
Of thought on objects, vastest and divine,
In hope to know the great unknowable,
The all-prophetic, universal I;
Within whose ample essence all man's thought
Respecting it, the infinite abstract
And limitless negation, whether good
Being, or life, or wisdom, the abyss,
Silence, or truth, love, mind, will, intellect,
Causer of causes, all theosophic lore
Of man-born, or angelic mind, is lost,
Like a stray wind which from some airy height
Soars, suicidal, up the dark inane.
She ceased, the all-created, gazing down deep
Into her own serene and shining breast;
O'er which inviolate and sublime abyss,
Her all-embracing arms she crossed in peace.
She ceased, and all was silence. Earth and Heaven,
Like solar seas, unfathomably bright,
Rolled forth their inmost radiance in twin tides,
Interminable. Since the first-begotten day,
Until the last-born eve, when all shall end,
And life's great vein within the imbosoming Heavens
Be utterly dried up; till night shall come
As some cloud-monster eats up star on star,
The children of the light; till nevermore
Shall cloud refresh earth's lip, nor breeze her breast,
Hath been beheld such glory, nor shall be,
Of nature serving God; she, sibyl-like,
Instinct with inspiration, and He her
Endowing with all bliss, unendingly.

HELEN. But why art thou, of all men, favored thus?
To say there is a mystery in this,
Or aught, is only to confess God. Speak!

FESTUS. It is God's will that I possess this power,
Thus to attract great spirits to mine own,
As steel, magnetically charged, draws steel;
Himself the magnet of the universe,
Round whom all spirits tremble, and towards whom
All tend.

HELEN. If as thou sayest, it is good:—
May it be an immortal good to thee.

FESTUS. There is no keeping back the power we have.
He hath no power who hath not power to use.
Some of these beings whom I speak of are
Pure spirits, other bodies soulical;
For spirit is to soul as wind to air.
They give me all I seek, and at a wish
Would furnish treasures, thrones, or palaces;
But all these things have I eschewed, and chosen
Command of mind alone, and of the world
Unbodied and all-lovely.
Helen. Is not this pleasure too much for mortal to be good?

Festus. All pleasure is with Thee, God! elsewhere, none.

Not silver-ceiled hall nor golden throne,
Set thick with priceless gems, as Heaven with stars,
Or the high heart of youth with its bright hopes;—
Nor marble, gleaming like the white moonlight,
As 'twere an apparition of a palace
Inlaid with light, as is a waterfall;—
Not rainbow-pinions, colored like yon cloud,
The sun's broad banner o'er his evening tent,
Can match the bright imaginings of a child
Upon the glories of his coming years;
How equal, then, the full-assured faith
Of him to whom the Savior hath vouchsafed
The Heaven of His bosom? What can tempt
In its performance equal to that promise?
My soul stands fast to Heaven as doth a star;
And only God can move it, who moves all.
There are who might have soared to what I spurned;
And like to heavenly orders human souls;
Some fitted most for contemplation, some
For action, those for thrones, and these for wheels.

Helen. Tell me what they discourse upon, these angels.

Festus. They speak of what is past or coming, less
Of present things or actions. Some say most
About the future, others of the gone,
The dim traditions of eternity,
Or Time's first golden moments. One there was—
From whose sweet lips elapsed as from a well,
Continuously, truths which made my soul,
As they sank in it, fertile with rich thoughts—
Spake to me oft of Heaven, and our talk
Was of divine things always—angels, Heaven,
Salvation, immortality, and God;
The different states of spirits, and the kinds
Of being in all orbs, or physical,
Or intellectual. I never tired
Preferring questions, but at each response
My soul drew back, sealike, into its depths,
To urge another charge on him. This spirit
Came to me daily for a long, long time,
Whene'er I prayed his presence. Many a world
He knew right well, which man's eye never yet
Hath marked, nor ever may mark while on earth;
Yet grew his knowledge every time he came.
His thoughts all great, and solemn, and serene,
Like the immensest features of an orb,
Whose eyes are blue seas, and whose clear, broad brow
Some cultured continent, came ever round
From truth to truth—day bringing as they came.
He was to me an all-explaining spirit,
Teaching divine things by analogy
With mortal and material. Thus of God,
He showed, as the three primal rays make one
Sole beam of Light, so the three Persons make One God; neither without the other is.
However bright or beautiful itself
The theme he touched, he made it more so by
His own light, like a firefly on a flower.
And one of all I knew the most of, yet
The least can I say of him; for full oft
Our thoughts drown speech, like to a foaming force,
Which thunders down the echo it creates.
Yet must I somewhat tell of him. He was
The spirit-evil of the universe,
Impersonate. Oh, strange and wild to know!
Perdition and destruction dwelt in him,
Like to a pair of eagles in one nest.
Hollow and wasteful as a whirlwind was
His soul; his heart as earthquake, and ingulfed
World upon world. In him they disappeared,
As might a morsel in a lion's maw.
The world which met him rolled aside to let him
Pass on his piercing path. His eyeballs burned
Revolving lightnings, like a world on fire;
Their very night was fatal, as the shade
Of Death's dark valley. And his space-spread wings—
Wide as the wings of darkness, when she rose
Scowling, and backing upwards, as the sun,
Giant of light, first donned his burning crown,
Gladdening all Heaven with his inaugural smile—
Were stained with the blood of many a starry world:
Yea, I have seen him seize upon an orb,
And cast it, careless, into worldless space,
As I might cast a pebble in the sea.
His might upon this earth was wondrous, most.
He stood a match for mountains. Ocean's depths
He clove unto their rock-bed, as a sword,
Through blood and muscle, to the central bone,
With one swoop of his arm. His brow was pale—
Pale as the lifeblood of the undying worm
Which writhes around its frame of vital fire.
Eclipse-like fell his thought upon the mind,
Space-piercing shadow alighting on the face
Of some fair planet circling deep in Heaven;
Causing it shudder as an angel when
He hears the thunder-curse of demon foe.
His voice blew like the desolating gust
Which strips the trees, and strews the earth with death.

His words were ever like a wheel of fire,
Rolling and burning,—this way now, now that:
Now whirling forth a blinding beam, now soft
And deep as Heaven's own luminous blue—and now
Like to a conqueror's chariot wheel they came,
Sodden with blood and slow, revolving death:
And every tone fell on the ear and heart
Heavy, and harsh, and startling, like the first
Handful of mould cast on the coffined dead,
As though he claimed them his.

Lucifer, entering. Dost recognize
The portrait, lady?
FESTUS.

HELEN. Festus! who is this?
What portrait?—
FESTUS. Wherefore comest thou? Did I not Claim privacy one evening?
LUCIFER. Why, indeed—
I simply called, as I was on my way
To Jupiter—and he's a mouthful, mind;—
To keep the proverbs, too, in countenance.
Any commands for our planetary friends?
I go. Make my excuses. [Goes
FESTUS. A mistake,
Dearest; but rectified. (Apart.) And he is gone!
Hell hath its own again. Some sorrow chills
Ever the spirit, like a cloudlet nursed
In the star-giant's bosom.
HELEN. Tell me, love,
More of these angels.
FESTUS. There was one I loved
Of those immortals of a lofty air,
Dimly divine and sad, and side by side
Him whom I spake of first, she oft would stand
With her fair form—shadow illuminate—
Like to the dark moon in the young one's arms.
She never murmured at the doom which made
The sorrow that contained her, as the air
Infolds the orb whereon we dwell, but spake
Of God's will alway as most good and wise.
She had but little pleasure; but her all,
Such as it was, was in devising plans
Of bliss to come, or in the tales of Time,
And the sweet, early earth. She was, in truth,
Our earth's own angel. Ofttimes would she dwell
With long and luminous sweetness on her theme,
Unwearying, unpausing, as a world.
The sun would rise and set; the soul-like moon,
In passive beauty and receptive light,—
Absorbing inspiration from the sun,
As doth from God, His prophet, ceaselessly,—
She, too, would rise and set; and the far stars,
The third estate of Light, complete the round
Of the divine day;—still our angel spake,
And still I listened to the eloquent tongue,
Which, e'en on earth, retained the tone of Heaven.
The shadow of a cloud upon a lake,
O'er which the wind hath all day held his breath,
Is not more calm and fair than her dear face—
So sweetly sad and so consolingly,
When she spake, even on the end of earth.
Save that her eye grew darker, and her brow
Brighter with thought, as with galactic light
Mid Heaven when clearest,—at such times, not I
Had known that earth were dearer unto her
Than other of the visitants divine,
Which hallow oft mine hours;—save, too, that then,
As though to touch but on that topic had,
Torpedo-like, numbed thought, she would straight cease
All converse suddenly, and kneel, and seem
Inwardly praying with much power,—rise,
And vanish into Heaven. My mind is full
Of stories she hath told me of our world.
No word an angel utters lose I, ever.
One I will tell thee, now.

Helen. Do, let me hear;
Thy talk is the sweet extract of all speech,
And holds mine ear in blissful slavery.

Festus. It was on a lovely summer afternoon,
Close by the grassy marge of a deep tarn,
Nigh halfway up a mountain, that we stood,
I and the angel, when she told me this.
Above us rose the gray rocks, by our side
Forests of pines, and the bright, breaking wavelets
Came crowding, dancing to the brink, like thoughts
Unto our lips. Before us shone the sun.
The angel waved her hand ere she began,
As bidding earth be still. The birds ceased singing,
And the trees breathing, and the lake smoothed down
Each shining wrinkle, and the wind drew off.
Time leant him o'er his scythe, and, listening, wept.
The circling world reined in her lightning pace
A moment; Ocean hushed his snow-maned steeds,
And a cloud hid the sun, as does the face
A meditative hand: then spake she thus:—
Scarce had the sweet song of the morning stars,
Which rang through space at the first sign of life
Our earth gave, springing from the lap of God
On to her orbit, ended, when from Heaven
Came down a white-winged host; and in the East, Where Eden's Pleasance was, first furled their wings, Alighting like to snowflakes. There they built, Out of the riches of the soil around, A house to God. There were the ruby rocks; And there, in blocks, the quarried diamonds lay; Opal and emerald mountain, amethyst, Sapphire, and chrysoprase, and jacinth stood With the still action of a star, all light, Like sea-based icebergs, blinding. These, with tools Tempered in Heaven, the band angelic wrought, And raised, and fitted, having first laid down The deep foundations of the holy dome On bright and beaten gold; and all the while A song of glory hovered round the work, Like rainbow round a fountain. Day and night Went on the hallowed labor till 'twas done. And yet but thrice the sun set, and but thrice The moon arose; so quick is work divine. Tower, and roof, and pinnacle without Were solid diamond. Within, the dome Was eye-blue sapphire, sown with gold-bright stars And clustering constellations; the wide floor All emerald, earthlike, veined with gold and silver, Marble and mineral of every hue, And marvellous quality; the meanest thing, Where all things were magnificent, was gold,— The plainest. The high altar there was shaped Out of one ruby, heartlike. Columned round
With alabaster pure was all. And now,
So high and bright it shone in the midday light,
It could be seen from Heaven. Upon their thrones
The sun-eyed angels hailed it, and there rose
A hurricane of blissfulness in Heaven,
Which echoed for a thousand years. One dark,
One solitary and foreseeing thought,
Passed, like a planet's transit o'er the sun,
Across the brow of God; but soon He smiled
Towards earth, and that smile did consecrate
The temple to Himself. And they who built
Bowed themselves down and worshipped in its walls.
High on the front were writ these words—To God!
The heavenly built this for the earthly ones,
That in His worship both might mix on earth,
As afterward they hope to do in Heaven.
Had man stood good in Eden, this had been;
He fell, and Eden vanished. The bright place
Reared by the angels, of all precious things,
For the joint worship of the sons of Earth
And Heaven, fell with him, on the very day
He should have met God and His angels there—
The very day he disobeyed and joined
The host of Death, black-banneered. Eden fell;
The groves and grounds, which God the Lord's own feet
Had hallowed; the all-hued and odorous bowers
Where angels wandered, wishing them in Heaven;
The trees of life and knowledge—trees of death
And madness, as they proved to man—all fell;
And that bright fane fell first. No death-doomed eye
Gazed on its glory. Earthquakes gulped it down.
The Temple of the Angels, vast enough
To hold all nations worshipping at once,
Lay in its grave; the cherubs' flaming swords
The sole, sad torches of its funeral.
Till at the flood, when the world's giant heart
Burst like a shell, it scattered East and West,
And far and wide, among less noble ruins,
The fragments of that angel-built fane,
Which was in Eden, and of which all stones
That now are precious, were; and still shall be,
Gathered again unto a happier end,
In the pure City of the Son of God,
And temple yet to be rebuilt in Zion;
Which, though once overthrown, and once again
Torn down to its foundations, in the quick
Of earth, shall, soul-like, yet re-rise from ruin—
High, holy, happy, stainless as a star,
Imperishable as eternity.
—The angel ended; and the winds, waves, clouds,
The sun, the woods, and merry birds went on
As theretofore, in brightness, strength, and music.
One scarce could think that earth at all had fallen
To look upon her beauty. If the brand
Of sin were on her brow, it was surely hid
In natural art from every eye but God's.
All things seemed innocence and happiness.
I was all thanks. And look! the angel said,
Take these, and give to one thou lovest best:
Mine own hands saved from them the shining ruin
Whereof I late have told thee; and she gave
What now are greenly glowing on thine arms.
Ere I could answer, she was up, star-high,
Winging her way through Heaven.

HELEN. How shall I thank thee
Enough, or that kind angel who hath made
The gift to me dear, doubly? I shall be Afraid almost to wear them, but would not
Part with them for the treasures of all worlds.
How show my thanks?

FESTUS. Love me as now, dear beauty!
Present or absent always, and 'twill be
More than enough of recompense for me.

HELEN. Hast met that angel late-while?

FESTUS. I have not.
Yet oft, methinks, I see her catch a glimpse
Of her sun-circleing pinions, or bright feet,
Which fitter seem for rainbows than for earth,
Or Heaven's triumphal arch, more firm and pure
Than the world's whitest marble;—see her seated oft
On some high, snowy cloud-cliff, harp in hand,
Singing the sun to sleep, as down he lays
His head of glory on the rocking deep:
And so sing thou to me.

HELEN. There, rest thyself. [Sings.
Oh! not the diamond, starry bright,
Can so delight my view
As doth the moonstone's changing light
And gleamy, glowing hue;
Now blue as Heaven, and then anon
As golden as the sun,
It hath a charm in every change—
In brightening, darkening, one.

And so with beauty, so with love
And everlasting mind,
It takes a tint from Heaven above,
And shines as it's inclined;
Or from the sun, or towards the sun,
With blind or brilliant eye,
And only lights as it reflects
The life-light of the sky.

He sleeps! The fate of many a gracious moral
This, to be stranded on a drowsy ear.

Scene — Home.

Festus, and Helen at her Piano.—Dusk.

Helen. I cannot live away from thee. How can
A flower live without its root?
Festus. I, too,
Must love, or die.
HELEN. But I must have. Attend!
I am to say and do just as I please;
I may command thee, may I?—that I will.
Festus. I love to be enslaved. Oh! I would rather Obey thee, beauty! than rule men by millions.
HELEN. Near, as afar, I will have love the same—
With a bright sameness, like this diamond,
Which, wherever the light be, shines like bright.
And thou shalt say all sorts of pretty things
To me; mind, to me only: write love-songs
About me, and I will sing them to myself;
Perhaps to thee, sometime, as it were now,
If I should happen to be very kind.
Festus. Sing now!
HELEN. No!
Festus. Tyrant! I will banish thee.
HELEN. Nay, if to sing and play would please thee, I
Would die to music. It was very wrong
To say I would deny thee any thing;
But be not angry with me; for, though God
Forgave me, I could ne'er forgive myself,
If I brought sorrow to thee; could I, love?
Festus. As thou art empress of my bosom, no!
HELEN. Nought fear I but an unkind word from thee.
Dark death may frighten children, Hell the wretch
Who feels that he deserves it; but for me,
I know I cannot do nor say aught worthy
Of the pure pain a frown of thine can cause,
Or a cold, careless look. No! never frown.
If I do wrong, forgive me, or I die;
And thou wilt then be wretcheder than I;—
The unforgiving than the unforgiven.

Festus. I do absolve thee, beauty, of all faults,
Past, present, or to come.

Helen. Well, that will do.
What was I saying? I love this instrument;
It speaks, it thinks—nay, I could kiss it: look!
There are three things I love half killingly;—
Thee lastly, and this next, and myself first.

Festus. Thou art a silly, tiresome thing, and yet
I never weary of thee; but could gaze,
Faint with excess and not satiety,
Upon thy countenance, with the serious joy
With which we eye and eye the unbounded space
Which is the visible attribute of God,
Who makes all things within Himself; and thus
It is the Heaven we hope for, and can find
No point from which to take its altitude;
For the Infinite is upwards, and above
The highest thing created—upwards aye:
So I could, thinking on thy face, believe
An infinite expression, heightening still
The longer that I thought, and leaving thee,
Coming to thee, or being with thee,—love!

Helen. I am so happy when with thee.

Festus. And I.
They tell us virtue lives in self-denial.
My virtue is indulgence. I was born
To gratify myself unboundedly,
So that I wronged none else. These arms were given me
To clasp the beautiful, and cleave the wave;
These limbs to leap and wander where I will;
These eyes to look on every thing without Effort; these ears to list my loved one's voice;
These lips to be divinized by her kiss:
And every sense, pulse, passion, power, to be Swollen into sunny ripeness.

HELEN.
Virtue is one
With nature, or 'tis nothing; it is love.

FESTUS. I come fresh from thee every time we meet,
Steeped in the still sweet dew of thy soft beauty,
Like earth at day-dawn, lifting up her head
Out of her sleep, star-watched, to face the sun—
So I, to front the world, on leaving thee.
Oh! there is inspiration in thy look,
Poesy, prophecy. Come hither, love;
The evening air is sweet.

HELEN.
It comes on us
Fresher and clearer through these dewy vine-leaves,
Fit for the forehead of the young wine-god.

FESTUS. A large, red egg of light the moon lies like
On the dark moor-hill, and now, rising slow,
Beams on the clear flood, smilingly intent,
Like a fair face, which loves to look on itself,
Saying, "There is no wonder that men love me,
For I am beautiful!"—as I heard thee.

Helen. It was not right to overhear me that.

Festus. 'Twas very wrong to do what I could not help;
But vanity speaks out.

Helen. Well, I don't mind;
I never knew that I was as I am
Till others told me.

Festus. Now were soon enough.

Helen. Ah, nothing comes to us too soon but sorrow.

Festus. For all were happiness, if all might live
Long, or die soon, enough: for even us.

Helen. Dost not remember, when, the other eve,
Thy friend the student called, there was a tale
Upon thy tongue he interrupted?

Festus. Was there?—

Helen. A tale out of the poets, about love,
And happiness, and sorrow, and such things.

Festus. But I forget such things when thou art by.
Besides, I asked him here again, to-night;
Here, at this hour; and he is punctual.

Helen. In truth, then, I despair of hearing it.
He keeps his word relentlessly. With not
More pride an Indian shows his foeman's scalp
Than he his watch for punctuality.
Festus. But tales of love are far more readily
Made than remembered.

Helen. Telltale, make one, then.

Festus. Love is the art of hearts and heart of arts.
Conjunctive looks and interjectional sighs
Are its vocabulary's greater half.
Well, then, my story says, there was a pair
Of lovers, once—

Helen. Once! nay, how singular!

Festus. But where they lived, indeed, I quite for get;—
Say any where—say here: their names were—I
Forget those, too; say any one's, say ours.

Helen. Most probable, most pertinent, so far!

Festus. The lady was, of course, most beautiful,
And made her lover do just as she pleased;
And consequently he did very wrong.
They met, sang, walked, talked folly, just as all
Such couples do; adored each other; thought,
Spoke, wrote, dreamed of and for nought on earth
Except themselves; and so on.

Helen. Pray proceed!—

Festus. That's all.

Helen. Oh, no!

Festus. Well, thus the tale ends; stay
No, I cannot remember nor invent.

Helen. Do think!

Festus I can't.
HELEN. Oh, then, I don't like that:
'Tis not in earnest.

FESTUS. Well, in earnest, then.

She did but look upon him, and his blood
Blushed deeper even from his inmost heart;
For at each glance of those sweet eyes a soul
Looked forth as from the azure gates of Heaven;
She laid her finger on him, and he felt
As might a formless mass of marble feel
While feature after feature of a god
Were being wrought from out of it. She spake,
And his love-wilder ed and idolatrous soul
Clung to the airy music of her words,
Like a bird on a bough, high swaying in the wind.
He looked upon her beauty and forgot,
As in a sense of drowning, all things else;
And right and wrong seemed one, seemed nothing;
she

Was beauty, and that beauty every thing:
He looked upon her as the sun on earth:
Until, like him, he gazed himself away
From Heaven so doing; till he even wept,—
Wept on her bosom as a storm-charged cloud
Weeps itself out upon a hill, and cried—
I, too, could look on thee until I wept,—
Blind me with kisses! Let me look no longer;
Or change the action of thy loveliness,
Lest long same-seemingness should send me mad!—
Blind me with kisses; I would ruin sight
To give its virtue to thy lips, whereon
I would die now, or ever live: and she,
Soft as a feather-footed cloud on Heaven,
While her sad face grew bright like night with stars,
Would turn her brow to his, and both be happy;—
Numbered among the constellations they!—
Then as tired wanderer, snow-blinded, sinks
And swoons upon the swelling drift, and dies,
So on her dazzling bosom would he lay
His famished lips, and end their travels there.
Oh, happy they! not he would go to Heaven;
Not, though he might that moment.

Helen. Nor I, now.

Festus. Helen, my love!

Helen. Yes, I am here.

Festus. It has
Been such a day as that, thou knowest, when first
I said I loved thee; that long, sunny day
We passed upon the waters—heeding nought,
Seeing nought, but each other.

Helen. I remember.
The only wise thing that I ever did—
The only good—was to love thee, and therefore
I would have no one else as wise as I.

Didst thou not say that student would be here?

Festus. I think I hear him every minute come.

Helen. It is not kind. We should be more alone.

There was a time thou wouldst have no one else.

Festus. Am I not with thee all day?
FESTUS. Yes, I know;
But often and often thou art thinking not
Of me.

FESTUS. My good child!—

HELEN. Well, I know thou lovest me;
And so I cannot bear thee to think, speak,
Or be with any but me.

FESTUS. Then I will not.

HELEN. Oh, thou wouldst promise me the clock round. Now,
Promise me this—that I shall never die,
And I'll believe thee when I am dead—not till.
But let it pass. I am at peace with thee;
And pardon thee, and give thee leave to live.

FESTUS. Magnanimous!

HELEN. When Earth, and Heaven, and all
Things seem so bright and lovely for our sakes,
It were a sin not to be happy. See!
The moon is up; it is the dawn of night.
Stands by her side one bold, bright, steady star—
Star of her heart, and heir to all her light,
Whereon she looks so proudly mild and calm,
As though she were the mother of that star,
And knew he was a chief sun in his sphere,
But by her side, in the great strife of lights
To shine to God, he had filially failed,
And hid his arrows and his bow of beams.
Mother of stars! the Heavens look up to thee.
They shine the brighter but to hide thy waning;
They wait and wane for thee to enlarge thy beauty; They give thee all their glory, night by night; Their number makes not less thy loneliness Nor loveliness.

Festus. Heaven's beauty grows on us; And when the elder worlds have ta'en their seats, Come the divine ones, gathering one by one, And family by family, with still And holy air, into the house of God— The house of light He hath builted for Himself, And worship Him in silence and in sadness. Immortal and immovable. And there, Night after night, they meet to worship God. For us this witness of the worlds is given, That we may add ourselves to their great glory, And worship with them. They are there for lights To light us on our way through Heaven to God; And we, too, have the power of light in us. Ye stars, how bright ye shine to-night! mayhap Ye are the resurrection of the worlds,— Glorified globes of light! Shall ours be like ye? Nay, but it is! this wild, dark earth of ours, Whose face is furrowed like a losing gamester's, Is shining round, and bright, and smooth in air Millions of miles off. Not a single path Of thought I tread, but that it leads to God. And when her time is out, and earth again Hath travailled with the divine dust of man, Then the world's womb shall open, and her son...
Be born again, all glorified immortals.
And she, their mother, purified by fire,
Shall sit her down in Heaven, a bride of God,
And handmaid of the ever-being One.
Our earth is learning all accomplishments
To fit her for her bridehood.

HELEN.
He is here.

FESTUS.  Welcome.

STUDENT.  I thought the night was beautiful,
But find the in-door scene still lovelier.

HELEN.  Ah! all is beautiful where beauty is.

STUDENT.  Night hath made many bards; she is so lovely.
For it is beauty maketh poesy,
As from the dancing eye come tears of light.
Night hath made many bards; she is so lovely.
And they have praised her to her starry face
So long, that she hath blushed and left them, often.
When first and last we met, we talked on studies;
Poetry, only, I confess is mine,
And is the only thing I think or read of:—
Feeding my soul upon the soft, and sweet,
And delicate imaginings of song;
For as nightingales do upon glowworms feed,
So poets live upon the living light
Of nature and of beauty; they love light.

FESTUS.  But poetry is not confined to books.
For the creative spirit which thou seekest
Is in thee, and about thee; yea, it hath
God's everywhereness.
Student. Truly. It was for this
I sought to know thy thoughts, and hear the course
Thou wouldst lay out for one who longs to win
A name among the nations.

Festus. First of all,
Care not about the name, but bind thyself,
Body and soul, to nature hiddenly.
Lo, the great march of stars from earth to earth,
Through Heaven. The earth speaks inwardly alone.
Let no man know thy business, save some friend,—
A man of mind, above the run of men;
For it is with all men and with all things.
The bard must have a kind, courageous heart,
And natural chivalry, to aid the weak.
He must believe the best of every thing;
Love all below, and worship all above.
All animals are living hieroglyphs.
The dashing dog, and stealthy-stepping cat,
Hawk, bull, and all that breathe, mean something more
To the true eye than their shapes show; for all
Were made in love, and made to be beloved.
Thus must he think as to earth's lower life,
Who seeks to win the world to thought and love,
As doth the bard, whose habit is all kindness
To every thing.

Helen. I love to hear of such.
Could we but think with the intensity
We love with, one might do great things, I think.
Festus. Kindness is wisdom. There is none in life
But needs it, and may learn; eye-reasoning man,
And spirit unassisted, unobscured.

Student. Go on, I pray. I came to be informed.
Thou knowest my ambition, and I joy
To feel thou feedest it with purest food.

Festus. I cannot tell thee all I feel; and know
But little save myself, and am not ashamed
To say, that I have studied my own life,
And know it is like to a tear-blistered letter,
Which holdeth fruit and proof of deeper feeling
Than the poor pen can utter, or the eye
Discover; and that often my heart's thoughts
Will rise and shake my breast, as madmen shake
The stanchions of their dungeons, and howl out.

Helen. But thou wast telling us of poesy
And the kind nature-hearted bards.

Festus. I was.
I knew one once—he was a friend of mine;
I knew him well—his mind, habits, and works,
Taste, temper, temperament, and every thing;
Yet with as kind a heart as beats, he was,
Earthlike, no sooner made than marred. Though young,
He wrote amid the ruins of his heart;
They were his throne and theme;—like some lone king,
Who tells the story of the land he lost,
And how he lost it.
Student. Tell us more of him.

Helen. Nay, but it saddens thee.

Festus. 'Tis like enough;
We slip away like shadows into shade;
We end, and make no mark we had begun;
We come to nothing, like a pure intent.
When we have hoped, sought, striven, and lost our aim,
Then the truth fronts us, beaming out of darkness,
Like a white brow, through its overshadowing hair—
As though the day were overcast, my Helen!
But I was speaking of my friend. He was Quick, generous, simple, obstinate in end,
High-hearted from his youth; his spirit rose
In many a glittering fold and gleamy crest,
Hydra-like to its hinderance; mastering all,
Save one thing—love; and that out-hearted him.
Nor did he think enough, till it was over,
How bright a thing he was breaking, or he would Surely have shunned it, nor have let his life
Be pulled to pieces like a rose by a child;
And his heart's passions made him oft do that Which made him writhe to think on what he had done,
And thin his blood by weeping at a night.
If madness wrought the sin, the sin wrought madness,
And made a round of ruin. It is sad
To see the light of beauty wane away,
Know eyes are dimming, bosom shrivelling, feet
Losing their spring, and limbs their lily roundness;
But it is worse to feel our heart-spring gone,
To lose hope, care not for the coming thing,
And feel all things go to decay with us,
As 'twere our life's eleventh month; and yet
All this he went through young.

HELEN.

Poor soul! I should
Have loved him for his sorrows.

FESTUS.

It is not love
Brings sorrow, but love's objects.

STUDENT.

Then he loved.

FESTUS. I said so. I have seen him, when he hath had
A letter from his lady dear; he blessed
The paper that her hand had travelled over,
And her eye looked on, and would think he saw
Gleams of that light she lavished from her eyes
Wandering amid the words of love there traced,
Like glowworms among beds of flowers. He seemed
To bear with being but because she loved him.
She was the sheath wherein his soul had rest,
As hath a sword from war: and he, at night,
Would solemnly and singularly curse
Each minute that he had not thought of her.

HELEN. Now that was like a lover! and she loved
Him, and him only.

FESTUS. Well, perhaps it was so.
But he could not restrain his heart, but loved
In that voluptuous purity of taste
Which dwells on beauty coldly, and yet kindly,
As night dew, whensoe'er he met with beauty.

HELEN. It was a pity, that inconstancy—
If she he loved were but as good and fair
As he was worthy of.

STUDENT. It was his way.

FESTUS. There is a dark and bright to every thing;
To every thing but beauty such as thine,
And that is all bright. If a fault in him,
'Twas one which made him do the sweetest wrongs
Man ever did. And yet a whisper went
That he did wrong: and if that whisper had
Echo in him or not, it mattered little;
Or right or wrong, he were alike unhappy.
Ah me! ah me! that there should be so much
To call up love, so little to delight!
The best enjoyment is half disappointment
To that we mean or would have, in this world.
And there were many strange and sudden lights
Beckoned him towards them; they were wreckers' lights:
But he shunned these, and righted when she rose,
Moon of his life, that ebbed and flowed with her.
A sea of sorrow struck him, but he held
On; dashed all sorrow from him as a bark
Spray from her bow bounding; he lifted up
His head, and the deep ate his shadow merely.

HELEN. A poet not in love is out at sea;
He must have a lay-figure.
Festus. I meant not
To screen, but to describe, this friend of mine.

Helen. Describe the lady, too; of course she was Above all praise, and all comparison.

Festus. Why, true. Her heart was all humanity,
Her soul all God's; in spirit and in form,
Like fair. Her cheek had the pale, pearly pink
Of seashells, the world's sweetest tint, as though
She lived, one half might deem, on roses sopped
In silver dew; she spake as with the voice
Of spherical harmony, which greets the soul
When at the hour of death the saved one knows
His sister angels near; her eye was as
The golden pane the setting sun doth just
Emblaze; which shows, till Heaven comes down again,
All other lights but grades of gloom; her dark,
Long, rolling locks were as a stream the slave
Might search for gold, and, searching, find. Her frown—

Helen. Nay, could she frown?

Festus. Ay, but a radiant frown
In common with the stars, which men malign
Who call malignant. Stars are always kind.

Helen. Enough. I have her picture perfect.

Cease.

Student. What were his griefs?

Festus. He who hath most of heart
Knows most of sorrow; not a thing he saw
Nor did but was to him, at times, a woe;
At times indifferent, at times a joy.
Folly, and sin, and memory make a curse
Wherewith the future fires may vie in vain.
The sorrows of the soul are graver still.

Student. Where and when did he study? Did he mix
Much with the world, or was he a recluse?

Festus. He had no times of study, and no place;
All places and all times to him were one.
His soul was like the wind-harp, which he loved,
And sounded only when the spirit blew.
Sometimes in feasts and follies, for he went
Lifelike through all things; and his thoughts then rose
Like sparkles in the bright wine, brighter still.
Sometimes in dreams, and then the shining words
Would wake him in the dark before his face.
All things talked thoughts to him. The sea went mad,
And the wind whined as 'twere in pain, to show
Each one his meaning; and the awful sun
Thundered his thoughts into him; and at night
The stars would whisper theirs, the moon sigh hers.
The spirit speaks all tongues and understands;
Both God's and angel's, man's and all dumb things,
Down to an insect's inarticulate hum
And an inaudible organ. And it was
The spirit spake to him of every thing;
And with the moony eyes, like those we see,
Thousands on thousands, crowding air in dreams,
Looked into him its mighty meanings, till
He felt the power fulfil him, as a cloud
In every fibre feels the forming wind.
He spake the world's one tongue; in earth and
Heaven
There is but one—it is the word of truth.
To him the eye let out its hidden meaning,
And young and old made their hearts over to him;
And thoughts were told to him as unto none
Save one who heareth said and unsaid, all.
And his heart held these as a grate its gleeds,
Where others warm them.

Student. I would I had known him.

Festus. All things were inspiration unto him:
Wood, wold, hill, field, sea, city, solitude,
And crowds, and streets, and man where'er he was;
And the blue eye of God which is above us;
Brook-bounded pine spinnies, where spirits flit;
And haunted pits the rustic hurries by,
Where cold, wet ghosts sit ringing jingling bells;
Old orchards' leaf-roofed aisles, and red-cheeked load
And the blood-colored tears which yew-trees weep
O'er churchyard graves, like murderers remorseful.
The dark green rings where fairies sit and sup,
Crushing the violet dew in the acorn cup;
Where by his new-made bride the bridegroom sips,
The white moon shimmering on their longing lips;
The large, o'erloaded, wealthy-looking wains
Quietly swaggering home through leafy lanes,
Leaving on all low branches, as they come,
Straws for the birds, ears of the harvest home.
Summer's warm soil, or winter's cruel sky,
Clear, cold, and icy-blue, like a sea-eagle's eye;
All things to Him bare thoughts of minstrelsy.
He drew his light from that he was amidst,
As doth a lamp from air which hath itself
Matter of light, although it show not. His
Was but the power to light what might be lit.
He met a muse in every lovely maid;
And learned a song from every lip he loved.
But his heart ripened most 'neath Southern eyes,
Which sunned their sweets into him all day long:
For fortune called him Southwards, towards the sun.

HELEN. Did he love music?

FESTUS. The only music he
Or learned or listened to was from the lips
Of her he loved, and that he learned by heart.
Albeit she would try to teach him tunes,
And put his fingers on the keys; but he Could only see her eyes, and hear her voice,
And feel her touch.

HELEN. Why, he was much like thee.

FESTUS. We had some points in common.

STUDENT. Was he proud?

FESTUS. Lowliness is the base of every virtue;
And he who goes the lowest, builds the safest.
My God keeps all his pity for the proud.

STUDENT. Was he world-wise?
Festus. The only wonder is He knew so much, leading the life he did.

Student. Yet it may seem less strange when we think back,
That we, in the dark chamber of the heart,
Sitting alone, see the world tabled to us;
And the world wonders how recluses know
So much, and, most of all, how we know them.
It is they who paint themselves upon our hearts
In their own lights and darknesses, not we.
One stream of light is to us from above,
And that is that we see by—light of God.

Festus. We do not make our thoughts; they grow in us
Like grain in wood: the growth is of the skies,
Which are of nature; nature is of God.
The world is full of glorious likenesses.
The poet's power is to sort these out,
And to make music from the common strings
With which the world is strung; to make the dumb
Earth utter heavenly harmony, and draw
Life clear, and sweet, and harmless as spring water
Welling its way through flowers. Without faith,
Illimitable faith, strong as a state's
In its own might, in God, no bard can be.
All things are signs of other, and of nature.
It is at night we see Heaven moveth, and
A darkness thick with suns. The thoughts we think
Subsist the same in God as stars in Heaven.
And as these specks of light will prove great worlds
When we approach them sometime free from flesh,
So, too, our thoughts will become magnified
To mindlike things immortal. And as space
Is but a property of God, wherein
Is laid all matter, other attributes
May be the infinite homes of mind and soul.
And thoughts rise from our souls, as from the sea
The clouds sublimed in Heaven. The cloud is cold,
Although a-blaze with lightning—though it shine
At all points like a constellation; so
We live not to ourselves—our work is life;
In bright and ceaseless labor, as a star
Which shineth unto all worlds but itself.

Helen. And were this friend and bard of whom thou speak'st,
And she whom he did love, happy together?

Festus. True love is ever tragic, grievous, grave.
Bards and their beauties are like double stars,
One in their bright effect.

Helen. Whose light is love.

Student. Or is it poesy thou meanest?

Festus. Both:
For love is poesy—it doth create;
From fading features, dim soul, doubtful heart,
And this world's wretched happiness, a life
Which is as near to Heaven as are the stars.
They parted; and she named Heaven's judgment seat
As their next place of meeting: and 'twas kept
By her—at least, so far that no where else
Could it be made until the day of doom.

Helen. So soon men’s passion passes! yea, it sinks
Like foam into the troubled wave which bore it.
Merciful God! let me entreat Thy mercy!
I have seen all the woes of men—pain, death,
Remorse, and worldly ruin; they are little,
Weighed with the woe of woman when forsaken
By him she loved and trusted. Hear, too, thou!
Lady of Heaven, Mother of God and man,
Who made the world His brother, one with God—
Maid-mother! mould of God, who wrought in thee
By model, as He doth in the world’s womb,
So that the universe is great with God—
Thou in whom God did deify Himself,
Betaking Him into immortality,
As in Thy Son He took it into Him,
And from the temporal and eternal made
Of the soul-world one same and ever God!
Oh, for the sake of thine own womanhood,
Pray away aught of evil from her soul,
And take her out of anguish unto thee,
Always, as thou didst this one!

Festus. Who doth not Believe that that he loveth cannot die?
There is no mote of death in thine eye’s beams
To hint of dust, or darkness, or decay;
Eclipse upon eclipse, and death on death;
No! immortality sits mirrored there
Like a fair face, long looking on itself;
Yet thou shalt lie in death's angelic garb
As in a dream of dress, my beautiful!
The worm shall trail across thine unsunned sweets,
And feast him on the heart men pined to death for;
Yea, have a happier knowledge of thy beauties
Than best-loved lover's dream e'er duped him with.

HeLEN. It is unkind to think of me in this wise.
Surely, the stars must feel that they are bright—
In beauty, number, nature, infinite;
And the strong sense we have of God in us
Makes me believe my soul can never cease.
The temples perish, but the God still lives.

Festus. It is therefore that I love thee; for that when
The fiery perfection of the world,
The sun, shall be a shadow and burnt out,
There is an impulse to eternity
Raised by this moment's love.

Student. I pray it may!
Time is the crescent shape to bounded eye
Of what is ever perfect unto God.
The bosom heaves to Heaven, and to the stars;
Our very hearts throb upwards, our eyes look;
Our aspirations always are divine:
Yet is it in the gloom of soul we see
Most of the God about us, as at night.
For then the soul, like the mother-maid of Christ,
Is overshadowed by the Holy Spirit;
And in creative darkness doth conceive
Its humanized Divinity of life.

Festus. Think then God shows his face to us no less
In spiritual darkness than in light.

Helen. But of thy friend? I would hear more of him.

Perhaps much happiness in friendship made
Amends for his love's sorrows.

Festus. Ask me not.

Helen. But loved he never after? Came there none
To roll the stone from his sepulchral heart,
And sit in it an angel?

Festus. Ah, my life!

My more than life, my immortality!
Both man and womankind belie their nature
When they are not kind: and thy words are kind,
And beautiful, and loving like thyself;
Thine eye and thy tongue's tone, and all that speak
Thy soul, are like it. There's a something in
The shape of harps, as though they had been made
By music: beauty's the effect of soul,
And he of whom thou askest loved again.
Could'st thou have loved one who was unlike men?
Whose heart was wrinkled long before his brow?
Who would have cursed himself if he had dared
Tempt God to ratify his curse in fire:
And yet with whom to look on beauty was
A need, a thirst, a passion?

HELEN. Yes, I think
I could have loved him; but, no—not unless
He was like thee; unless he had been thee.
Tell me, what was it rendered him so wretched
At heart?

Festus. I will not tell thee.

Student. But tell me
How and on what he wrote, this friend of thine?

Festus. Love, mirth, woe, pleasure was in turn his theme,
And the great good which beauty does the soul;
And the God-made necessity of things.
And like that noble knight in olden tale,
Who changed his armor's hue at each fresh charge
By virtue of his lady-love's strange ring,
So that none knew him save his private page
And she who cried, God save him, every time
He brake spears with the grave till he quelled all—
So he applied him to all themes that came;
Loving the most to breast the rapid deeps
Where others had been drowned, and heeding nought
Where danger might not fill the place of fame.
And 'mid the magic circle of those sounds,
His lyre rayed out, spell-bound himself he stood,
Like a stilled storm. It is no task for suns
To shine. He knew himself a bard ordained,
More than inspired, of God, inspirited,—
Making himself like an electric rod,
A lure for lightning feelings; and his words
Felt like the things that fall in thunder, which
The mind, when in a dark, hot, cloudful state,
Doth make metallic, meteoric, ball-like.
He spake to spirits with a spirit tongue,
Who came compelled by wizard word of truth,
And rayed them round him from the ends of Heaven.
For as be all bards, he was born of beauty,
And with a natural fitness to draw down
All tones and shades of beauty to his soul,
Even as the rainbow-tinted shell, which lies
Miles deep at bottom of the sea, hath all
Colors of skies, and flowers, and gems, and plumes,
And all by nature, which doth reproduce
Like loveliness in seeming opposites.
Our life is like the wizard's charméd ring:
Death's heads and loathsome things fill up the ground;
But spirits wing about and wait on us,
While yet the hour of enchantment is.
And while we keep in we are safe, and can Force them to do our bidding. And he raised
The rebel in himself, and in his mind
Walked with him through the world.

Student. He wrote of this?
Festus. He wrote a poem.

Student. What was said of it?
Festus. Oh, much was said—much more than understood;
One said, that he was mad; another, wise;
Another, wisely mad. The book is there.
Judge thou among them.

Student. Well, but who said what?

Festus. Some said that he blasphemed; and these men lied
To all eternity, unless such men
Be saved, when God shall raze that lie from life
And from His own eternal memory:
But still the word is lied; though it were writ
In honey dew upon a lily leaf,
With quill of nightingale, like love letters
From Oberon sent to the bright Titania,
Fairest of all the fays—for that he used
The name of God as spirits use it, barely,
Yet surely more sublime in nakedness,
Statue-like, than in a whole tongue of dress.
Thou knowest, God! that to the full of worship
All things are worshipful; and Thy great name,
In all its awful brevity, hath nought
Unholy breeding in it, but doth bless
Rather the tongue that utters it: for me,
I ask no higher office than to fling
My spirit at Thy feet, and cry Thy name,
God! through eternity. The man who sees
Irreverence in that name must have been used
To take that name in vain, and the same man
Would see obscenity in pure white statues.
Call all things by their names. Hell, call thou hell; Archangel, call archangel; and God, God.

Student. And what said he of such?

Festus. He held his peace

A season, as a tree its sap till spring,
Preparing to unfold itself, and let
All rigor do its worst, which only served
To harden him, though nothing nesh at first.
And then he said at last, what, at the first,
He deemed would have been seen by other men,
By men, at least, above low-water mark,
Who take it, they lead others; that it is they
Who set their shoulders to the stalled world's wheel
And give it a hitch forwards.

Helen. There were some
Encouraged him with good will, surely?

Festus. Many.
The kind, the noble, and the able cheered him;
The lovely, likewise: others knew he nought of.
And yet he loved not praise, nor sighed for fame.
Men's praise begets an awe of one's own self
Within us, till we fear our heart, lest it,
Magician-like, show more than we can bear.
Nor was he fameless; but obscurity
Hath many a sacred use. The clouds which hide
The mental mountains rising nighest Heaven
Are full of finest lightning, and a breath
Can give those gathered shadows fearful life,
And launch their light in thunder o'er the world.
Student. And thought he well of that he wrote?

Festus. Perchance.

Perchance we suffer, and perchance succeed.
Perchance he would his tongue had perished ere
It uttered half he said, from childhood up
To manhood, and so on; for much I heard
From him required expiation, much
Soul sacrifice and penance for heart-deeds
Which passion had accomplished; yea, perchance,
He wished, how vain! that fruitful heart and breast
Had withered like a witch's ere he had trained
The parasites of feeling that he did
About it; and perchance, for all I know,
He would his brain had died ere it conceived
One half the thought-seeds that took life in it,
And in his soul's dark sanctuary dwelt.
Yet his blue eye's dark ball grew greater with Delight, and darker, as he viewed the things
He made; not monsters outside of the fane,
Grinning and howling, but seraphic forms—
Embodied thoughts of worship, wisdom, love,
Joining their fire-tipped wings across the shrine
Where his heart's relics lay, and where were wrought
Immortal miracles upon men's minds.

Student. Take up the book, and if thou understandest,
Unfold it to me.

Festus. What I can, I will.
Well I remember me of thee, poor book!
But there is consolation e'en for thee.
Fair hands have turned thee over, and bright eyes
Sprinkled their sparkles o'er thee with their prayers.
The poet's pen is the true divining rod
Which trembles towards the inner founts of feeling;
Bringing to light and use, else hid from all,
The many sweet, clear sources which we have
Of good and beauty in our own deep bosom;
And marks the variations of all mind,
As does the needle an air-investing storm's.

Student. How does the book begin, go on, and end?

Festus. It has a plan, but no plot. Life hath none.

Helen. Tell us, love; we will listen, and not speak.

I wish I understood it, for I know
You would rather hear me than yourselves talk.

Student. Surely.

I'd give up half the organs in my head,
Besides all undiscovered faculties,
To list to such a lecturer; and then
Have quite enough, perhaps, to comprehend.

Helen. 'Twere needless that, to one half-witted now.

Festus. There is a porch, wherefrom is something seen
Of the main dome beyond. Though shadows cross
Each other's path, yet let us go through it.
And lo! an opening scene in Heaven, wherein
The foredoom of all things, spirit and matter,
Is shown, and the permission of temptation;
The angelic worship of the Trinity,
By God's name uttered thrice; the joys and powers
Of souls o'erblest, and the sweet offices
Of warden-angel told; and the complete
Well-fixed necessity and end of all things.
From Heaven we come to Earth, and so do souls.
For next succeeds a soft and sunset scene,
Wherein is shown the collapsed, empty state
In which all worldly pleasures leave us; youth's,
Though natural, fitful, unavailing, struggle
Against a great temptation come unlooked for:
And that to sin is to curse God in deed.
The soul, long used to truth, still keeps its strength,
Though plunged upon a sudden 'mid the false;
As hands, thrust into a dark room, retain
Their sunlent light a season. So with this.
The lines have under meanings, and the scene
Of self-forgetfulness and indecision
Breaks off, not ends. A starry, stirless night
Follows, which shadows out youth's barren longings
For goodness, greatness, marvels, mysteries.
Whence comes this dream of immortality,
And the resurgent essence? Let us think!
What mean we by the dead? The dead have life,
The changed; and, if they come, it is to show
Their change is for the better. The bait takes.
Man and his foe shake hands upon their bargain.
The youth sets out for joy, and, 'neath the care
Of his good enemy, begins his course.
This they begin together, aiding each
The other, and abusing others.

HELEN. I
Was waiting for an eloquential pause
In this mysterious, allegorical,
Mythical, theological, odd story.
So now, then, I shall ask myself to sing;
And granting I agree to my request,
I think you ought to thank me.

STUDENT. That we will.
But not just now.

HELEN. Oh! yes, now; yes, this moment.
I'm in the humor.

STUDENT. We are not.

FESTUS. Yes, let her!

HELEN. What shall I sing?

FESTUS. Sing something merry, love.

HELEN. I won't: I'll sing the dullest thing I know;
One of thine own songs.

STUDENT. What a compliment!

FESTUS. Sing what thou lik'st, then.

HELEN. No; what thou lik'st.

STUDENT. Well,
Something about love, and it can't be wrong.
For love the sunny world supplies
With laughing lips and happy eyes.
Festus. And 'twill be sooner over.

Student. And so better.

Helen. Like an island in a river
      Art thou, my love, to me;
    And I journey by thee ever,
      With a gentle ecstasy.
  I arise to fall before thee;
   I come to kiss thy feet;
To adorn thee and adore thee,
   Mine only one! my sweet!

And thy love hath power upon me,
  Like a dream upon a brain;
For the loveliness which won me,
    With the love, too, doth remain.
And my life it beautifieth,
   Though love be but a shade,
Known of only ere it dieth,
    By the darkness it hath made.

Was that addressed to me?

Student. Well, now resume.

Festus. Trial alone of ill and folly gives Clear proofs of the world's vanities; but little
Good comes of sermons, prophecies, or warnings,
Though from the steps of an old gray market-cross
The devil is holding forth to the faithless. There
A social prayer is offered up to God.
FESTUS.

The next scene seems to promise fair; for sure
If that there be one scene in life, wherefrom
Evil is absent, it is pure, early love.

HELEN. Alas! when beauty pleads the cause of virtue,
The chief temptation to embrace it's wanting.

FESTUS. A man in love sees wonders. But not love
Makes the soul happy: so the youth gets hopeless.
To this comes on a stern and stormy quarrel
'Tween the two foe friends—Youth demanding what
Cannot be; and the other withholding safe
And easy grants. They part and meet, as though
Nothing had happened, in the next scene: none
Know how we reconcile ourselves to evil.
Follows a rapid birdseye view of earth,
A stirring up of the dust of all the nations;
True travellers they through all the lands of life,
Moral, emotional, or love's sunny zone,
The palm-graced pilgrims of truth's holy land
And universal season of the sun,
Who, taking pleasure in all reason, find
The science of supremest ultimates,
And self-suggestive wisdom in themselves.
So through all schools, the cold and gloomy porch,
Massive, impassive—garden rose-embowered,
And stately grove of lofty lore select,
The truth-sought soul progresses; till we find
Our home is where she leads, and we are guests
But of our guide; the shrine she shows, herself. Then comes a village feast; a kind of home Unto the traveller—where, with the world, We mix in private, talking divers things; A country merry-making, where all speak According to their sorts and the occasion. Deeper than ever lead-line went, behold We search the rayless central sun within. We penetrate all mysteries, but are Unfitted long to dwell in the recess Of our own nature, and we long for light. True aspiration riseth from research. Next, by the o’erthrown altar of a fane, Foundation-shattered, like the ripened heart, We find ourselves in worship. Let us hope The spirit, form, and offering, grateful all. Stone, pyramid, tower, obelisk, fane, spire, Temple, and circular city, to one truth, Fountain and river, and the sun-searched depths Of all-accepting ocean, testify. In one of Earth’s head cities, after this, We tower-like rise, and with an eminent eye Glance round society, insatiate;— The high unknown as yet unrealized. In less time than the twinkling of a star, Insphered in air, the arch-fiend and the youth, Like twilight and midnight, discourse and rise. Thence to another planet, for the book, Stream-like, doth steal the images of stars,
And trembles at its boldness, where we meet
The spirit of the first night of temptation,
And mix with many of those lofty musings
Which sow in us the seeds of higher kind
And brighter being. Heavenly poesy,
Which shines among the powers of the mind,
As that bright star she dwells in, 'mid the worlds
Which make the system of the sun, is there too.
But these high things are lost, and drowned, and dimmed,
Like a blue eye in tears, that trickle from it
Like angels leaving Heaven on their errands
Of love, behind them, in the scene succeeding;—
A scene of song, and dance, and mirth, and wine,
And damsels, in whose lily skin the blue
Veins branch themselves in hidden luxury,
Hues of the heaven they seem to have vanished from.
Mere joys; but saddened and sublimed at close
By sweet remembrance of immortal ones
Once loved, aye hallowed. Still, in scenes like this,
Youth lingers longest, drawing out his time
As a goldbeater does his wire, until
'Twould reach round earth.

Student. And be of no use then.

Festus. Blame not the bard for showing this, but mind
He wrote of youth as passionate genius,
Its flights and follies—both its sensual ends
And common places. To behold an eagle
Batting the sunny ceiling of the world
With his dark wings, one well might deem his heart
On Heaven; but, no! it is fixed on flesh and blood,
And soon his talons tell it. Pass we on!
A brief and solemn parley o'er a grave
Follows, in which youth vows to trust in God,
Be the end what it may. A prescient view
Of what is true repentance to the soul,
Spirit-informed, expands; and over all
The spiritual harmonies of Heaven
By the raised soul are heard, and God's great rule
To creatures justified. And next we find Ourselves in Heaven. Even man's deadly life
Can be there, by God's leave. Once brought to God,
The soul's foredoom is set before it brightly,
And Heaven's designs are seen to be brought to bear.
In that bright state shall God's will be our own,
And our will what we will, and faith be choice,
The rule which reconciles all contraries,
Sets free necessity and sanctifies.
Where to let both prophetic past attest,
And self-fulfilling future of all joy.
A lightning revelation of the Heavens,
And what is in them. Let it not be said
He sought his God in the self-slayer's way,
Whose highest aim was but to worship in
All humbleness; for he was called thereto,
To show the holy God, in three scenes, first
And last in Three-lihood, and midst in One:
Although less hard to shape the wide-winged wind
O'er the bright heights of air. He will forgive:
For we, this moment, and all living souls—
All matter, are as much within His presence,
And known through, like a glass film in the sun,
As we can ever be. Another scene
Of natural luxury, and joy, and love.

Helen. Moonlight and music, and kisses, and wine,
And beauty which must be for rhyme-sake divine;
Went it not so, I pray?

Festus. Through sundry worlds
The mortal wends, returning, and relates
To her he loves—and joyously they greet,
As boat by breeze and billow backed by tide—
His bright experience of celestial homes;
Where spiritual natures, kind and high,
Light-born, which can divine immortal things,
Abide, imbosomed in Eternity.
Something he tells, too, of the friendly fiend,
Something of ancient ages, infant Earth,
And all maternal Nature, God-inspired;—
Secret inclosing secret, like the balls
Of carved ivory, containing each
One than itself less, than itself one more,
And like life's double riddle so involved
The sole solution makes the mystery.
To this succeeds a scene explaining much,
Of retrospective and prospective cast,
Between the bard, his beauty, and his friend,
Regarding soul, and heart, and intellect.
Our story ties us here to earth again,
And sea all aged—gray at once with years,
And green with youth. Now, evil is in love;
And ever those who are unhappiest have
Their hearts' desire the oftenest, but in dreams.
Dreams are mind-clouds, high and unshapen beauties,
Or but God-shaped, like mountains, which contain
Much and rich matter; often not for us,
But for another. Dreams are rudiments
Of the great state to come. We dream what is
About to happen to us.

Helen. What may be
The dream in this case?

Festus. It is one of death.

Helen. Of death! is that all? Well, I too have had—
What every one hath once, at least, in life—
A vision of the region of the dead;
It was the land of shadows: yea, the land
Itself was but a shadow, and the race
Which seemed therein were voices, forms of forms,
And echoes of themselves. And there was nought
Of substance seemed, save one thing in the midst,
A great, red sepulchre—a granite grave;
And at the bottom lay a skeleton,
From whose decaying jaws the shades were born;
Making its only sign of life, its dying
Continually. Some were bright, some dark. Those that were bright went upwards heavenly; They which were dark grew darker, and remained. A land of change, yet did the half things nothing That I could see; but passed stilly on, Taking no note of other, mate or child; For all had lost their love when they put off The beauty of the body. And as I Looked on, the grave before me backed away; And I began to dream it was a dream; And I rushed after it: when the earth quaked, Opened and shut, like the eye of one in fits; It shut to with a shout. The grave was gone; And in the stead there stood a gleedlike throne, Which all the shadows shook to see, and swooned; For fiends were standing, loaded with long chains, The links whereof were fire, waiting the word To bind and cast the shadows into hell; For Death the second sat upon that throne, Which set on fire the air, not to be breathed. And as he lifted up his arm to speak, Fear preyed upon all souls, like fire on paper, And mine among the rest, and I awoke.

Student. By Hades! 'twas most awful.

Festus. And when love Merges in creature-worship, let us mind; We know not what it is we love: perhaps It is incarnate evil. In the time It takes to turn a leaf, we are in Heaven;
Making our way among the wheeling worlds,
Millions of suns, half infinite each, and space
Forever shone into, forever dark,
As God is, to and by created mind,
Upheld by the companion spirit. There
The nature of the all in one, and whence
Evil; the fixed impossibility
Of creatures' perfectness, until made one
With God; and the necessity of ill,
As yet, are things all touched upon and proven.
The next scene shows us hell, in the mad mock
Of mortal revelry— the quelling truth
That all life's sinful follies run to hell;
That lies, debauches, murders never die,
But live in hell forever; make, are hell.
And truth is there, too. Hell is its own moral.
Perdition certain to the unrepentant;
Redemption on a like scale with creation;
And all creation needing it, and having.
Then comes a scene of passion, brought about
By the bad spirit's means for its own ends,
Whom we know not when come, so dark we grow;
Making it but a blind for further ill.
And then a rest in light, as though 'tween Earth
And Heaven there were a mediate spirit point,
A bright effect original of God
Enlightening all ways inwardly and round;
Whence is detected in the following scene.
Laid by the lonely seashore, as before,
Where the great waves come in frothed, like a horse
Put to his heart-burst speed, sobbing up hill,
How evil works his victim's death, to clear
His way, and keep his name of murderer;
As he, in other parts, makes good his titles,
Deceiver, liar, tempter, and accuser;
Hater of man, and, most of all, of God.
In the next scene, we picture back our life,
Contrasting the pure joys of earlier years
With the unsatedness of current sin;
And the sad feel that love's own heart turns sick
Like a bad pearl; but that the feeling still
Is adamantine, though the splendid thing
Whereon it writes its record is of all
Frailest; and though earth shows to good and bad
The same blind kindness, beautiful to see,
Wherewith our lovely mother loveth us,
The world in vain unbosometh her beauty,
We have no lust to live; for things may be
Corrupted into beauty: and that love,
Where all the passions blend, as hues in white,
Tires at the last, as day would, if all day
And no night. So despair of heart increases.
The last lure—power—is proffered, taken. All
Hangs on the last desire, whatever it be.
What follows is of earth, and setteth forth
God's mercy, and the mystery of sin;
And a great gathering of the worlds round God,
Told by the youth to his truthful, trustful, love;
Who, light and lowly as a little glowworm,
Sheddeth her beauty round her like a rose,
Sweet-smelling dew, upon the ground it grows on.
The pure know evil by repulsion, both
From surface and from centre; the impure
By likeness and attraction to themselves.
There is instinctive wisdom and acquired.
A scene of prescient solitude and soul
Commune with Heaven; repentance, prayer, faith,
Which are all things inspired alone of God,
Who signifies salvation, follows this.
In the next scene, we feel the end draw nigh.
Nor power, nor knowledge, love nor pleasure make
The Heaven-affianced spirit false to God;
Though doubt for long may triumph and despair,
Leave the soul blindfold on the edge of hell.
A change is wrought on earth as great as that
In its first ages, when the elements,
Less gross and palpable than air, were changed
To mountainous and adamantine mass,
Now 'neath the feet of nations—figuring forth
The fateful mind which is to govern all,
Controlling the great evil; for it is mind
Which shall rule and be ruled, and not the body,
In the last age of human sway on earth;—
Ambition ruined by its own success;
Aims lost, power useless: love, pure love, the last
Of mortal things that nestles in the heart.
There is a love which acts to death, and through death,
And may come white, and bright, and pure, like paper
From refuse, or from clearest things at first;
It is beyond the accidents of life.
For things we make no count of have in them
The seeds of life, use, beauty, like the cores
Of apples that we fling away;—nought now
Is left but trust in God, who tries the heart
And saves it, at the last, from its own ruin—
The parting spirit fluttering like a flag,
Half from its earthy staff. The death-change comes.
Death is another life. We bow our heads
At going out, we think, and enter straight:
Another golden chamber of the King's,
Larger than this we leave, and lovelier.
And then in shadowy glimpses, disconnect,
The story, flower-like, closes thus its leaves.
The will of God is all in all. He makes,
Destroys, remakes, for His own pleasure, all.
After inferior nature is subdued,
The evil is confined. All elements
Conglobe themselves from chaos, purified.
The re-begotten world is born again.
The body and the soul cease; spirit lives:
And gloriously falsified are all
Earth's caverned prophecies of bodyhood.
Spirits rise up, and rule, and link with Heaven;—
The soul state is searched into; dormant Death,
Evil, and all the dark gods of the heart,
And the idolatrous passions, ruined, chained,
And worshipless, are seen; and there, the Word
Heard and obeyed;—next comes the truth divine,
Redintegrative;—Evil's last and worst
Endeavor vanquished by Almighty good.
The last scene shows the final doom of earth,
Souls' judgment, and salvation of the youth,
As was fore-fixed on from and in the first:
The universe expurgated of evil,
And hell for aye abolished; all create,
Redeemed, their God all love, themselves all bliss.
Heaven is the birth of spirit and the world
Passed, embryonic only in its kind.
We may say that the sun is dead and gone
Forever; and may swear he will rise no more;
The skies may put on mourning for their god,
And earth heap ashes on her head: but who Shall keep the sun back, when he thinks to rise?
Where is the chain shall bind him? Where the cell
Shall hold him? Hell he would burn down to embers;
And would lift up the world with a lever of light
Out of his way: yet, know ye, 'twere thrice less
To do thrice this, than keep the soul from God.
O'er earth, and cloud, and sky, and star, and Heaven
It dwells with God uprisen as a prayer.
Now, the religion of the book is this,
Followed out from the book of God writ of old.
All creatures being faulty by their nature,
And by God made all liable to sin,
God only could atone—and unto none
Except Himself—for universal sin.
It is thus that God did sacrifice to God,
Himself unto Himself, in the great way
Of Triune mystery. His death, as man,
Was real as our own; and as, except
In the destruction of all life, there could
Be no atonement for its sin, while life
Doth necessarily result from God,
As thought and outward action from ourselves;
So the atonement must be to and by Him,
Which makes it justice equally with love;
For all His powers and attributes are equal,
And must make one in any act of His;
And every act of God is infinite.
He acts through all in all: the truth we know
He doth Himself inbreathe; the ill we do
He hath atoned for; and the Scriptures show
That God doth suffer for the sins of those Whom He hath made, that are liable to sin.
In all of us He hath His agony;
We are the cross, and death of God, and grave.
Him love then all the more, and worship Him
Who lived and died, and rose from death for us,
And is, and reigns forever, God in all.
Let each man think himself an act of God,
His mind a thought, his life a breath of God;
And let each try, by great thoughts and good deeds,
To show the most of Heaven he hath in him.
Many who read the word of life much doubt
Whether salvation be of grace, or faith,
Election, or repentance, or good works,
Or God's high will: reconcile all of them.
Each of the persons of the Triune God
Hath had His dispensation, hath it now;
The Father by His prophets, and the Son
In his own days, by His own deeds: and now
The Spirit, by the ministry of Christ;
And thus by law, by gospel, and by grace,
The scheme of God's salvation is complete.
Salvation, then, is Godlike, threefold; so
That, under one or other, all may come;
By will of God alone, by faith in Christ,
And by repentance, and good works, and grace.
So there is one salvation of the Father,
One of the Son, another of the Spirit;
Each the salvation of the Three in One.
The mortal in this lay is saved of will,
In manner as this hymn unfolds, which hath
Just warranty for every word from God's.

O God! Thou wondrous One in Three,
    As mortals must Thee deem;
Thou only canst be said to be,
    We but at best to seem.
For Thou dost save, and Thou may'rt slay,
    Canst make a mortal soul
In Thee eternal; in a day
    Wilt bring to nought the whole.
Thou hardenest, and Thou openest hearts,
   As in Thy Word is shown;
Thou savest and destroyest parts
   By Thy right will alone.
Let down Thy grace, then, Lord! on all
   Whom Thou wilt save to live;
Oh! if they stumble, stop their fall!
   Oh! if they fall, forgive!

They are forgiven from the first;
   They are predestined Thine;
And though in sin they were the worst,
   In Thee they are divine.
They are, and were, and will be, Lord!
   In one, in Heaven, in Thee,
Yea, with the Spirit and the Word,
   One God in Trinity.

These principles and doctrines pending not
Upon the action of the poem here,
But over and above it, influencing
Nevertheless the story, as the course
Of stars inwoven with our system, earth,
Vary the view of this life's hemisphere,
And mingle it more palpably with Heaven,
And with its changeless, ceaseless, boundless God.
It is thus that by creating to and from
Eternity, and multiplying ever
His own one Being through the universe,
He doth eternize happiness, and make
Good infinite by making all in Him.
There is but one great right and good; and ill
And wrong are shades thereof, not substances.
Nothing can be antagonist to God.
The Spirit speaks of God in Heaven's own tongue.
No mystery to those who love, but learned
As is our mother tongue, from Him, the parent;
By whom created, fashioned, flesh and spirit,
All forms and feelings of all kinds of beauty
Are burned into our heart-clay, pattern-like.
Much, too, is writ, elsewhere and here, not yet
Made clear, nor can be till earth come of age;
Like the unfinished rudiments of light
Which gather time by time into a star.
Thus have I shown the meaning of the book,
And the most truthful likeness of a mind,
Which hath as yet been limned; the mind of youth
In strength and failings, in its overcomings,
And in its short comings; the kingly ends,
The universalizing heart of youth;
Its love of power, heed not how had, although
With surety of self-ruin at the end.
Every thing urged against it proves its truth
And faithfulness to nature. Some cried out
'Twas inconsistent; so 'twas meant to be.
Such is the very stamp of youth and nature;
And the continual losing sight of its aims,
And the desertion of its most expressed
And dearest rules and objects, — this is youth.
Student. I look on life as keeping me from God, Stars, Heaven, and angels' bosoms. I lay ill; And the dark, hot blood throbbing through and through me; They bled me, and I swooned; and as I died, Or seemed to die, a soft, sweet sadness fell With a voluptuous weakness on my soul, That made me feel all happy. But my heart Would live, and rose, and wrestled with the soul, Which stretched its wings and strained its strength in vain, Twining around it as a snake an eagle. Mine eyes unclosed again, and I looked up, And saw the sweet, blue twilight, and one star, One only star in Heaven; and then I wished That I had died and gone to it; and straight Was glad I lived again, to love once more. And so our souls turn round upon themselves, Like orbs upon their axles: what was night Is day; what day, night. God will guide us on, Body and soul, through life and death, to judgment.

Festus. Earth hath her deserts mixed with fruitful plains; The work of God is barren in some parts; A rose is not all flower, but hath much Which is of lower beauty, yet like needful; And he who in great makings doth like these, Doth only that which is most natural. Like life, too, it is boundlessly unequal,
Now soaring, and now grovelling. at one time
All harmony, and then again all harshness,
With an ever-changing style of thought and speech.
The work is still consistent with itself;
As one part often bears upon another,
Lifting it to the light, where most it needs.
The thoughts we have of men are bold as men;
Our thoughts of God are thin and fleet as ghosts;
But it was not his meaning to draw men,
Such as he heard they were in the old world
And sometimes mixed with; he blessed God he knew
But little of the world, that little good;
While some sighed out that little was its all.
So for the persons and the scenes he drew,
Oft in a dim and dreamy imagery
Shapen, half shapen, misshapen, unshapen,
They are the shadowy creatures which youth dreams
Live in the world embodied, but are not,
Save in the mind's, which is the mightier one.
They are the names of things which we believe in,
Ideas not embodied, alas, not!
And the sad fate which many of those meet
Whom the youth loves and quits, means nought so ill
As the betrayer's sin, salvationless
Almost: it is but desertion, not betrayal;
And forced on him according to a promise
Made at the first unto him, and to be Wrought out in brief time; and the same fair souls
Saved, stand for our desires made pure in Heaven.
Let us work out our natures; we can do
No wrong in them,—they are divine, eterne:
I follow my attraction, and obey
Nature, as earth does, circling round her source
Of life and light, and keeping true in Heaven,
Though not perfect in round, which nothing is.
'Twas the heart-book of love, well nigh all grief;
For the heart leaves its likeness best in that
O'erwhelming sorrow which burns up and buries,
Like to the eloquent impression left
In lava, of Pompeian maiden's bosom.
All passions, and all pleasures, and all powers
Of man's heart, are brought in, and mind and frame.
He made this work the business of his life;
It was his mission, and was laid on him.
He was a laborer on the ways of God,
And had his hire in peace, and power to work.
He wrote it not in the contempt of rule,
And not in hate; but in the self-made rule
That there was none to him, but to himself
He was his sole rule, and had right to be.
The faults are faults of nature, and prove art
Man's nature, that a thing of art, like it,
Should be so pure in kind.

HELEN. I do believe
The world is a forged thing, and hath not got
The die of God upon it. It will not pass
In Heaven, I tell ye.

STUDENT. How shouldst thou know aught
Of Heaven, unless by contrast?
Festus. Pray now, cease;
Ye two are jarring ever, though as with
The bickering beauty of two swords, whose strife,
Though deadly, maketh music I could listen,
Did not each stab, whichever way, pain me.

Helen. Oh, I could stand and rend myself with rage
To think I am so weak, that all are so;
Mere minims in the music made from us—
While I would be a hand to sweep from end
To end, from infinite to infinite,
The world's great chord. The beautiful of old
Had but to say some god had been with them,
And their worst fault was hallowed to their best deed.
That was to live. Could we uproot the past,
Which grows and throws its chilling shade o'er us,
Lengthening every hour and darkening it;
Or could we plant the future where we would,
And make it flourish, that, too, were to live.
But it is not more true that what is, is,
Than that what is not, is not. It is enough
To bear the ever present, as we do.
The city of the past is laid in ruins;
Its echo-echoing walls at a whisper fall:
The coming is not yet built; nor as yet
Its deep foundations laid; but seems, at once,
Like the air-city, goodly and well watered,
Which the dry wind doth dream of on the sands
Where he dies away with his wanderings:
While we enjoy the hope thereof, and perish;
Not seeing that the desert present is
Our end.

Festus. The brightest natures oft have darkest
End, as fire smoke.

Student. I will read the book, in the hope
Of learning somewhat from it.

Festus. Thou mayst learn
A hearty thanksgiving for blessings here,
And proud prediction of a state to come,
Of love, and life, and power, unlimited;
And uttered in a sound and homely tongue,
Fit to be used by all who think while speaking.
With here and there some old, hard, uncouth words,
Which have withal a quaint and meaning richness,
As stones make more the power of the soil.
The world hath said its say for and against;
And after praise and blame cometh the truth.
Living men look on all who live askance.
Were he a cold, gray ghost, he would have honor;
And though as man he must have mixed with men,
Yet the true bard doth make himself ghost-like;
He lives apart from men; he wakes and walks
By nights; he puts himself into the world
Above him; and he is what but few see.
He knows, too, to the old hid treasure, truth:
And the world wonders, shortly, how some one
Hath come so rich of soul; it little dreams
Of the poor ghost that made him. Yet he comes
To none save of his own blood, and lets pass
Many a generation till his like
Turns up; moreover, this same genius
Comes, ghost-like, to those only who are lonely
In life and in desire; never to crowds:
And it can make its way through every thing,
And is never happy till it tells its secret;
But pale and pressed down with the inward weight
Of unborn works, it sickens nigh to death,
Often; but who like happy at a birth?

STUDENT. Say what a poet ought to do and be.

FESTUS. Though it may scarce become me, knowing little,
Yet what I have thought out upon that theme,
And deem true, I will tell thee.

HELEN. Now I know
You two will talk of nothing else all night;
So I will to my music. Sweet! I come.
Art thou not glad to see me? What a time
Since I have touched thine eloquent, white fingers.
Hast thou forgot me? Mind, now! Knowest thou not
My greeting? Ah! I love thee. Talk away!
Never mind me; I shall not you.

STUDENT. Agreed!

HELEN. By the sweet muse of music, I could swear
I do believe it smiles upon me; see it
Full of unuttered music, like a bird;
Rich in invisible treasures, like a bud
Of unborn sweets, and thick about the heart
With ripe and rosy beauty—full to trembling.
I love it like a sister. Hark!—its tones;
They melt the soul within one like a sword,
Albeit sheathed, by lightning. Talk to me,
Lovely one! Answer me, thou beauty!

Student. Hear her!

Festus. Experience and imagination are
Mother and sire of song—the harp and hand.
The bard's aim is to give us thoughts: his art
Lieth in giving them as bright as may be.
And even when their looks are earthy, still
If opened, like geoids, they may be found
Full of all sparkling, sparry loveliness.
They should be wrought, not cast; like tempered steel,
Burnt and cooled, burnt again, and cooled again.
A thought is like a ray of light—complex
In nature, simple only in effect.
Words are the motes of thought, and nothing more.
Words are like sea-shells on the shore; they show
Where the mind ends, and not how far it has been.
Let every thought, too, soldier-like, be stripped,
And roughly looked over. The dress of words,
Like to the Roman girl's enticing garb,
Should let the play of limb be seen through it,
And the round, rising form. A mist of words,
Like haloes round the moon, though they enlarge
The seeming size of thoughts, make the light less
Doubly. It is the thought writ down we want, Not its effect — not likenesses of likenesses. And such descriptions are not, more than gloves Instead of hands to shake, enough for us. As in the good the fair; simplicity Is nature's first step, and the last of art. Student. But is the power — is poesy inborn, Or is it to be gained by art or toil? Festus. It is underived, except from God; but where Strongest, asks most of human care and aid. Great bards toil much and most; but most at first, Ere they can learn to concentrate the soul For hours upon a thought to carry it. Student. Why, I have sat for hours and never moved, Saving my hands, clock-like, in writing round Day after day of thought, and lapse of life. Festus. Many make books, few poems, which may do Well for their gains, but they do nought for truth, Nor man, true bard's main aim. Perish the books, But the creations live. Some steal a thought, And clip it round the edge, and challenge him Whose 'twas to swear to it. To serve things thus, Is as foul witches to cut up old moons Into new stars. Some never rise above A pretty fault, like faulty dahlias; And of whose best things it is kindly said,
The thought is fair; but, to be perfect, wants
A little heightening, like a pretty face
With a low forehead. Do thou more than such,
Or else do nothing. And in poetry,
There is a poet-worship, one of other
Which is idolatry, and not the true
Love-service of the soul to God, which hath Alone of His inbreathing, and is rendered
Unto Him, from the first, without man's mean,
By those whom He makes worthy of His worship;
Who kneel at once to Him, and at no shrine,
Save in the world's wide ear, do they confess them
Of faults which are all truths; and thorough which,
As the world says them over to itself,
He heareth and absolveth; for the bard
Speaks but what all feel more or less within
The heart's heart, and the sin confessed is done
Away with, and forever.

Student. What of style?

Festus. There is no style is good but nature's style.
And the great ancients' writings, beside ours,
Look like illuminated manuscripts
Before plain press print; all had different minds,
And followed only their own bents: for this
Nor copied that, nor that the other; each
Is finished in his writing, each is best
For his own mind, and that it was upon;
And all have lived, are living, and shall live;
But these have died, are dying, and shall die;
Yea, copyists shall die, spark out and out.
Minds which combine and make alone can tell
The bearings and workings of all things
In and upon each other. All the parts
Of nature meet and fit: wit, wisdom, worth,
Goodness and greatness; to sublimity
Beauty arises, like a planet world,
Laboring slowly, seemingly, up Heaven;
But with an infinite pace to some immortal eyes.
And he who means to be a great bard must
Measure himself against pure mind, and fling
His soul into a stream of thought, as will
A swimmer hurl himself into the water.
But never swimmer on the stream, nor bird
On wind, feels half so strong, or swift, or glad,
As bard borne high on his mind above himself:
As though he should begin a lay like this,
Where spiritual element is all;
Thought chafing thought, as bough bough, till o!
burn,
Like the star-written prophecies of Heaven.
The shattered shadow of eternity
Upon the troubled world, even as the sun
Shows brokenly on wavy waters, time;
All time is but a second to the dead.
The smoke of the great burning of the world
Had trailed across the skies for many an age,
And was fast wearing into air away,
When a saint stood before the throne, and cried—
Blessed be Thou, Lord God of all the worlds
That have been, and that are, and are to be!
For Thy destruction is like infinite
With Thy creation, just and wise in both:
Give me a world. And God said, Be it so:
And the world was: and then go on to show
How this new orb was made, and where it shone;
Who ruled, abode, worshipped, and loved therein;
Their natures, duties, hopes: let it be pure,
Wise, holy, beautiful; if not to be Without it, made so by constraint of God—
Kindly forced good: we have had enough of sin
And folly here to wish for and love change.
Let him show God as going thither mildly,
Father-like, blessing all and cursing none;
And that there never will be need for them
That He shall come in glory new to Himself,
With light to which the lightning shall be shadow,
And the sun sadness; borne upon a car
With wheels of burning worlds, within whose rims
Whole hells burn, and beneath whose course the stars
Dry up like dew-drops. But of this enough;
I mean that he must weigh himself as he
Will be weighed after by posterity;
After us all are critics, to a man.
Write to the mind and heart, and let the ear
Glean after what it can. The voice of great
Or graceful thoughts is sweeter far than all
Word-music; and great thoughts, like great deeds, need
No trumpet. Never be in haste in writing.
Let that thou utterest be of nature’s flow,
Not art’s; a fountain’s, not a pump’s. But once
Begun, work thou all things into thy work;
And set thyself about it, as the sea
About earth, lashing at it day and night.
And leave the stamp of thine own soul in it
As thorough as the fossil flower in clay.
The theme shall start and struggle in thy breast,
Like to a spirit in its tomb at rising,
Rending the stones, and crying, Resurrection!

STUDENT. What theme remains?

FESTUS. Thyself, thy race, thy love,
The faithless and the full of faith in God;
Thy race’s destiny, thy sacred love.
Every believer is God’s miracle.
Nothing will stand whose staple is not love;
The love of God, or man, or lovely woman;
The first is scarcely touched, the next scarce felt,
The third is desecrated; lift it up;
Redeem it, hallow it, blend the three in one
Great holy work. It shall be read in Heaven
By all the saved of sinners of all time.
Preachers shall point to it, and tell their wards
It is a handful of eternal truth;
Make ye a heartful of it: men shall will
That it be buried with them in their hands:
The young, the gay, the innocent, the brave,
The fair, with soul and body both all love,
Shall run to it with joy; and the old man,
Still hearty in decline, whose happy life
Hath blossomed downwards, like the purple bellflower,
Closing the book, shall utter lowlily—
Death, thou art infinite; it is life is little.
Believe thou art inspired, and thou art.
Look at the bard and others; never heed
The petty hints of envy. If a fault
It be in bard to deem himself inspired,
'Tis one which hath had many followers
Before him. He is wont to make, unite,
Believe; the world to part, and doubt, and narrow.
That he believes, he utters. What the world
Utters, it trusts not. But the time may come
When all, along with those who seek to raise
Men's minds, and have enough of pain, without Suffering from envy, may be God-inspired
To utter truth, and feel like love for men.
Poets are henceforth the world's teachers. Still
The world is all in sects, which makes one loathe it.

STUDENT. The men of mind are mountains, and their heads
Are sunned long ere the rest of earth. I would Be one such.

FESTUS. It is well. Burn to be great.
Each mountain stands inspired as touching Heaven.
Pay not thy praise to lofty things alone.
The plains are everlasting as the hills.
The bard cannot have two pursuits: aught else
Comes on the mind with the like shock as though
Two worlds had gone to war, and met in air.
Hope never greed from poesy; as well
Search for the fairy gold at the rainbow’s foot.
And now that thou hast heard thus much from one
Not wont to seek, nor give, nor take advice,
Remember, whatsoever thou art as man,
Suffer the world, entreat it, and forgive.
They who forgive most shall be most forgiven.
Dear Helen, I will tell thee what I love
Next to thee — poesy.

Helen. Can any thing
Be even second to me in thy love?
Doth it not distance all things?

Festus. To say sooth,
I once loved many things ere I met with thee,
My one blue break of beauty in the clouds;
Bending thyself to me as Heaven to Earth.

Helen. My love is like the moon; seems now to grow,
And now to lessen: but it is only so
Because thou canst not see it all at once.
It knows not day, nor morrow, like the sun;
Unchangeable as space it still shall be
When yon bright suns, which are themselves but sands
In the great glass of Time, shall be run out.

Festus. Man is but half man without woman;
and,
As do idolaters their heavenless gods,
We deify the things which we adore.

Helen. Our life is comely as a whole; nay, more;
Like rich, brown ringlets, with odd hairs all gold.
We women have four seasons, like the year.
Our spring is in our lightsome, girlish days,
When the heart laughs within us for sheer joy,
Ere yet we know what love is, or the ill
Of being loved by those whom we love not.
Summer is when we love and are beloved,
And seems short; from its very splendor seems
To pass the quickest: crowned with flowers it flies.
Autumn, when some young thing with tiny hands,
And rosy cheeks, and flossy, tendrilled locks,
Is wantoning about us day and night.
And winter is when these we love have perished;
For the heart ices then. And the next spring
Is in another world, if one there be.
Some miss one season, some another; this
Shall have them early, and that late; and yet
The year wear round with all, as best it may.
There is no rule for it; but in the main
It is as I have said.

Festus. My life with thee
Is like a song, and the sweet music thou,
Which doth accompany it.

Student. Say, did thy friend
Write aught beside the work thou tell'st of?

Festus. Nothing.

After that, like the burning peak, he fell
Into himself, and was missing ever after.

Student. If not a secret, pray who was he?

Festus.

Scene—Garden and Bower by the Sea.

Lucifer and Elissa.

Lucifer. Night comes, world-jewelled, as my bride should be.
The stars rush forth in myriads as to wage
War with the lines of Darkness; and the moon,
Pale ghost of Night, comes haunting the cold earth
After the sun's red sea-death—quietless.
Immortal Night! I love thee. Thou and I
Are of one seed—the eldest blood of God.
He makes; we mar together all things—all
But our own selves. Love makes thee cold and tremble,
And me all fire. Do off that starry robe;
Catch me up to thee. Let us love, and die,
And weld our souls together, Night! But here
Cometh mine earthly. My Elissa! welcome.
Festus. 467

Elissa. Is't not a lovely, nay, a heavenly eve?

Lucifer. Thy presence only makes it so to me.
The moments thou art with me are like stars
Peering through my dark life.

Elissa. Nay, speak not so,
Or I shall weep, and thou wilt turn away
From woman's tears: yet are they woman's wealth.

Lucifer. Then keep thy treasures, lady! I would not have
The world, if prized at one sad tear of thine.
One tear of beauty can outweigh a world
Even of sin and sorrow, heavy as this;
But beauty cannot sin, and should not weep,
For she is mortal. Oh! let deathless things
Alone weep. Why should aught that dies be sad?

Elissa. The noble mind is oft too generous,
And, by protecting, weakens lesser ones;
And tears must come of feeling, though they quench
As oft the light which love lit in the eye.

Lucifer. And thy love ever hangs about my heart,
Like the pure pearl wreath which enrings thy brow.
I meant not to be mournful. Tell me, now,
How thou hast passed the hours since last we met?

Elissa. I have staid the livelong day within this bower,—
It was here that thou didst promise me to come,—
Watching from wanton morn to repentant eve
The selfsame roses ope and close; untired,
Listening the same birds' first and latest songs—
And still thou camest not. To the mind which waits
Upon one hour, the others are but slaves.
The week hath but one day—the day one hour—
That hour of the heart—that lord of time.

Lucifer. Sweet one! I raced with light and passed the laggard
To meet thee—or, I mean I could have done—
Yea, have outsped the very dart of Death—
So much I sought; and were I living light
From God, with leave to range the world, and choose
Another brow than His whereon to beam—
To mark what even an angel could but covet—
A something lovelier than Heaven's loveliness—
To thee I straight would dart, unheeding all
The lives of other worlds, even those who name
Themselves thy kind; for oft my mind o'ersoars
The stars; and, pondering upon what may be
Of their chief lording natures, man's seems worst—
The darkest, meanest, which, through all these worlds,
Drags what is deathless, may be, down to dust.

Elissa. Speak not so bitterly of humankind;
I know that thou dost love it. Hast not heard
Of those great spirits, who, the greater grow,
The better we are able them to prize?
Great minds can never cease; yet have they not
A separate estate of deathlessness:
The future is a remnant of their life:
Our time is part of theirs, not theirs of ours;
They know the thoughts of ages long before.
FESTUS.

It is not the weak mind feels the great mind's might; None but the great can test it. Does the oak
Or reed feel the strong storm most? Oh! unsay
What thou hast said of man; nor deem me wrong.
Mind cannot mind despise—it is itself.
Mind must love mind: the great and good are friends;
And he is but half great who is not good.
And, Oh! humanity is the fairest flower
Blooming in earthly breasts; so sweet and pure,
That it might freshen even the fadeless wreaths
Twined round the golden harps of those in Heaven.

LUCIFER. For thy sake I will love even man, or aught.

Spirit were I, and a mere mortal thou,
For thy sake I would even seek to die;
That, dead or living, I might still be with thee.
But no! I'll deem thee deathless—mind and make,
And worthier of some spirit's love than mine;
Yea, of the first born of God's sons, could he,
In that sweet shade thy beauty casts o'er all,
One moment lay and cool his burning soul;
Or might the ark of his wide flood-like woe
But rest upon that mount of peace and bliss—
Thy heart imbosomed in all beauteousness.
Nay, lady! shrink not. Thinkest thou I am he?

ELISSA. Thou art too noble, far. I oft have wished,
Ere I knew thee, I had some spirit's love;
But thou art more like what I sought than man,
And a forbidden quest, it seems; for thou
Hast more of awe than love about thee, like
The mystery of dreams which we can feel,
But cannot touch.

LUCIFER. Nay, think not so! It is wrong.
Come, let us sit in this thy favorite bower,
And I will hear thee sing. I love that voice,
Dipping more softly on the subject ear
Than that calm kiss the willow gives the wave—
A soft, rich tone, a rainbow of sweet sounds,
Just spanning the soothed sense. Come, nay me not.

ELISSA. Do thou lead out some lay; I'll follow thine.

LUCIFER. Well, I agree. It will spare me much of shame
In coming after thee. My song is said
Of Lucifer, the star. See, there he shines!

| Sings. |

I am Lucifer, the star;
Oh! think on me,
As I lighten from afar
The Heavens and thee!
In town, or tower,
Or this fair bower,
Oh! think on me;
Though a wandering star,
As the loveliest are,
I love but thee.

Lady! when I brightest beam,
Love, look on me!
I am not what I may seem
To the world or thee;
But fain would love
With thee above,
Where thou wilt be.
But if love be a dream,
As the world doth deem,
What is't to me?

Elissa. Could we but deem the stars had hearts, and loved,
They would seem happier, holier, even than now;
And, ah! why not? they are so beautiful.
And love is part and union in itself
Of all that is in nature, brilliant, pure—
Of all in feeling, sacred and sublime.
Surely the stars are images of love:
The sunbeam and the starbeam both bring love.
The sky, the sea, the rainbow, and the stream
And dark blue hill, where all the loveliness
Of Earth and Heaven, in sweet, ecstatic strife,
Seem mingling hues which might immortal be,
If length of life by height of beauty went,
All seem but made for love—love made for all:
We do become all heart with those we love:
It is nature's self—it is every where—it is here.

Lucifer. To me there is but one place in the world,
And that where thou art; for, where'er I be,
Thy love doth seek its way into my heart,
As will a bird into her secret nest:
Then sit and sing; sweet wing of beauty, sing.

Elissa. Bright one! who dwellest in the happy skies,
Rejoicing in thy light as does the brave
In his keen, flashing sword, and his strong arm’s
Swift swoop, canst thou, from among the sons of men,
Single out those who love thee as do I
Thee from thy fellow-glories? If so, star,
Turn hither thy bright front; I love thee, friend.
Thou hast no deeds of darkness. All thou dost
Is to us light and beauty: yea, thou art
A globe, all glory; thou, who at the first
Didst answer to the angels which in Heaven
Sang the bright birth of earth, and even now,
As star by star is born, dost sing the same
With countless hosts in infinite delight,
Be unto me a moment! Write thy bright
Light on my heart before the sun shall rise
And vanquish sight. Thou art the prophecy
Of light which He fulfils. Speak, shining star!
Drop from thy golden lips the truths of Heaven.
First of all stars, and favorite of the skies,
Apostle of the sun — thou upon whom
His mantle resteth — speak, prophetic beauty!
Speak, shining star, out of the heights of Heaven;
Beautiful being, speak to God for man!
Is it because of beauty thou wast chosen
To be the sign of sin? For, surely sin
Must be surpassing lovely when, for her,
Men forfeit God's reward of deathless bliss
And life divine; or, is it that such beauty,
Sometimes before the truth, and sometimes after,
As is a moral or a prophecy,
Is ever warning? Why wert thou accorded
To the great Evil? Is it because thou art,
Of all the sun's bright servants, nearest earth?
And shall we then forget that Christ hath said
He is thyself, the light-bringer of Heaven?
Star of the morning! unto us thou art
The presage of a day of power. Like thee
Let us rejoice in life, then, and proclaim
A glory coming, greater than our own.
All ages are but stars to that which comes,
Sunlike. Oh! speak, star! Lift thou up thy voice
Out of yon radiant ranks, and I on earth,
As thou in Heaven, will bless the Lord God, ever.
Hear, Lucifer, thou star! I answer thee.

Oh! ask me not to look and love,
But bid me worship thee;
For thou art earthly things above,
As far as angels be:
Then, whether in the eve or morn
Thou dost the maiden skies adorn,
Oh! let me worship thee!
I am but as this drop of dew;
Oh! let me worship thee!
Thy light, thy strength, is ever new,
Even as the angels' be:
And as this dew-drop, till it dies,
Bosoms the golden stars and skies,
Oh! let me worship thee!

But, dearest, why that dark look?

Lucifer.

Let it not
Cloud thine even with its shadow: but the ground
Of all great thoughts is sadness; and I mused
Upon past happiness. Well—be it past!
Did Lucifer, as I do, gaze on thee,
The flame of woe would flicker in his breast,
And straight die out—the brightness of thy beauty
Quenching it as the sun doth earthly fire.

Elissa.  Nay, look not on me so intensely sad.

Lucifer. Forgive me: it was an agony of bliss.
I love thee, and am full of happiness.
My bosom bounds beneath thy smile as doth
The sea's unto the moon, his mighty mistress;
Lying and looking up to her, and saying—
Lovely! lovely! lovely! lady of the Heavens!
Oh! when the thoughts of other joyous days—
Perchance, if such may be, of happier times—
Are falling gently on the memory
Like autumn's leaves, distained with dusky gold,
Yet softly as a snowflake; and the smile
Of kindliness, like thine, is beaming on me—
Oh! pardon, if I lose myself, nor know
Whether I be with Heaven or thee

Elissa. Use not
Such ardent phrase, nor mix the claim of aught
On earth with thoughts more than with hopes of Heaven.

Lucifer. Hopes, lady! I have none.

Elissa. Thou must have. All
Have hopes, however wretched they may be,
Or blest. It is hope which lifts the lark so high—
Hope of a lighter air and bluer sky;
And the poor hack which drops down on the flints—
Upon whose eye the dust is settling—
He hopes to die. No being is, which hath
Not love and hope.

Lucifer. Yes—one! The ancient Ill,
Dwelling and damned through all which is: that spirit
Whose heart is hate—who is the foe of God—
The foe of all.

Elissa. How knowest thou such doth live?
Love is the happy privilege of mind—
Love is the reason of all living things.
A Trinity there seems of principles,
Which represent and rule created life—
The love of self, our fellows, and our God.
In all throughout one common feeling reigns:
FESTUS.

Each doth maintain and is maintained by the other:
All are compatible—all needful; one
To life—to virtue one—and one to bliss;
Which, thus together, make the power, the end,
And the perfection of created being.
From these three principles doth every deed,
Desire, and will, and reasoning, good or bad, come;
To these they all determine—sum and scheme;
The three are one in centre and in round;
Wrapping the world of life as do the skies
Our world. Hail! air of love, by which we live!
How sweet, how fragrant! Spirit, though unseen—
Void of gross sign—is scarce a simple essence,
Immortal, immaterial, though it be.
One only simple essence liveth—God,
Creator uncreate. The brutes beneath,
The angels high above us, with ourselves,
Are but compounded things of mind and form.
In all things animate is therefore cored
An elemental sameness of existence;
For God, being Love, in love created all,
As He contains the whole, and penetrates.
Seraphs love God, and angels love the good:
We love each other; and these lower lives,
Which walk the earth in thousand diverse shapes,
According to their reason, love us too:
The most intelligent affect us most.
Nay, man's chief wisdom's love— the love of God.
The new religion—final, perfect, pure—
Was that of Christ and love. His great command—
His all-sufficing precept—wasn't not love?
Truly to love ourselves we must love God—
To love God we must all His creatures love—
To love His creatures, both ourselves and Him.
Thus love is all that's wise, fair, good, and happy.

Lucifer. How knowest thou God doth live?

Why did He not,
With that creating hand which sprinkled stars
On space's bosom, bidding her breathe and wake
From the long, death-like trance in which she lay,—
With that same hand which scattered o'er the sky,
As this small dust I strew upon the wind,
Yon countless orbs, aye fixing each on Him
Its flaming eye, which winks and blenches oft
Beneath His glance,—with the finger of that hand
Which spangled o'er infinity with suns,
And wrapped it round about Him as a robe,—
Why did He not write out His own great name
In spheres of fire, that Heaven might alway tell
To every creature, God? If not, then why
Should I believe when I behold around me
Nought scarce, save ill and woe?

Elissa. God surely lives!
Without God all things are in tunnel darkness.
Let there be God, and all are sun—all God.
And to the just soul, in a future state,
Defect's dark mist, thick-spreading o'er this vale,
Shall dim the eye no more, nor bound survey;
And evil, now which boweth being down
As dew the grass, shall only fit all life
For fresher growth, and for intenser day,
Where God shall dry all tears as the sun dew.
   LUCIFER. Oh! lady, I am wretched.
   ELISSA. Say not so.
With thee, I could not deem myself unhappy.
Hark to the sea! It sounds like the near hum
Of a great city.
   LUCIFER. Say, the city earth;
For such these orbs are in the realms of space.
   ELISSA. I dreamed once that the night came down to me;
In figure, Oh! too like thine own for truth,
And looked into me with his thousand eyes,
And that made me unhappy; but it passed,
And I half wished it back. Mind hath its earth
And Heaven. The many petty, common thoughts
On which we daily tread, as it were, make one,
And above which few look; the other is
That high and welkin-like infinity—
The brighter, upper half of the mind's world,
Thick with great sun-like and constellate thoughts;
And in the night of mind, which is our sleep,
These thoughts shine out in dreams. Dreams double life;
They are the heart's bright shadow on life's flood;
And even the step from death to deathlessness—
From this earth's gross existence unto Heaven—
FESTUS.

Can scarce be more than from the harsh, hot day
To sleep's soft scenes, the moonlight of the mind.
The wave is never weary of the wind.
But in mountainous playfulness leaps to it
Always; but mind gets weary of the world,
And glooms itself in sleep, like a sweet smile,
Line by line, settling into proper sadness;
For sleep seems part of our immortality:
And why should any thing that dies be sad?
Last night I dreamed I walked within a hall —
The inside of the world. Long, shroud-like lights
Lit up its lift-like dome and pale, wide walls,
Horizon-like; and every one was there:
It was the house of Death, and Death was there.
We could not see him, but he was a feeling:
We knew he was around us — heard us — eyed us;
But where wast thou? I never met thee once.
And all was still as nothing; or as God,
Deep judging, when the thought of making first
Quickened and stirred within Him; and He made
All Heaven at one thought, as at a glance.
Noise was there none; and yet there was a sound
Which seemed to be half like silence, half like sound.
All crept about, still as the cold, wet worms,
Which slid among our feet, we could not 'scape from.
Round me were ruined fragments of dead gods —
Those shadows of the mystery of One —
And the red worms, too, flourished over these,
For marble is a shadow weighed with mind;
Each being, as men of old believed, distinct
In form, and place, and power. But Oh! not all
The gathered gods of Eld could shine like ours.
No more than all yon stars could make a sun.
But, truly, then men lived in moral night,
'Neath a dim starlight of religious truth.
I felt my spirit's spring gush out more clear,
Gazing on these: they beautified my mind
As rocks and flowers reflected do a well.
Mind makes itself like that it lives amidst,
And on; and thus, among dreams, imaginings,
And scenes of awe, and purity, and power,
Grows sternly sweet and calm—all beautiful
With godlike coldness and unconsciousness
Of mortal passion, mental toil; until,
Like to the marble model of a god,
It doth assume a firm and dazzling form,
Scarcely less incorruptible than that
It emblems: and so grew, methought, my mind.
Matter hath many qualities; mind, one:
It is irresistible: pure power—pure god.
While wandering on I met what seemed myself:
Was it not strange that we should meet, and there?
But all is strange in dreaming, as in death,
And waking, as in life: nought is not strange.
Methought that I was happy, because dead.
All hurried to and fro; and many cried
To each other—Can I do thee any good?
But no one heeded: nothing could avail:
The world was one great grave. I looked, and saw
Time on his two great wings—one, night—one, day—
Fly, moth-like, right into the flickering sun;
So that the sun went out, and they both perished.
And one gat up and spake—a holy man—
Exhorting them; but each and all cried out—
Go to!—it helps not—means not: we are dead.
Death spake no word, methought, but me he made
Speak for him; and I dreamed that I was Death;
Then, that Death only lived: all things were mixed;
Up and down shooting, like the brain's fierce dance
In a delirium, when we are apt to die.
Hell is my heir; what kin to me is Heaven?
Bring out your hearts before me. Give your limbs
To whom ye list or love. My son, Decay,
Will take them: give them him. I want your hearts,
That I may take them up to God. There came
These words amongst us, but we knew not whence;
It was as if the air spake. And there rose
Out of the earth a giant thing, all earth;
His eye was earthy, and his arm was earthy;
He had no heart. He but said, I am Decay;
And, as he spake, he crumbled into earth,
And there was nothing of him. But we all
Lifted our faces up at the word, God,
And spied a dark star, high above in the midst
Of others, numberless as are the dead.
And all plucked out their hearts, and held them in
Their right hands. Many tried to pick out specks
And stains, but could not: each gave up his heart.
And something—all things—nothing—it was Death,
Said, as before, from air—Let us to God!
And straight we rose, leaving behind the raw
Worms and dead gods, all of us—soared and soared
Right upwards, till the star I told thee of Looked like a moon—the moon became a sun:
The sun—there came a hand between the sun and us,
And its five fingers made five nights in air.
God tore the glory from the sun's broad brow,
And flung the flaming scalp off flat to hell.
I saw Him do it; and it passed close by us.
And then I heard a long, cold, skeleton-scream,
Like a trumpet whining through a catacomb,
Which made the sides of that great grave shake in.
I saw the world and vision of the dead
Dim itself off—and all was life. I woke,
And felt the high sun blazoning on my brow,
His own almighty mockery of woe,
And fierce and infinite laugh at things which cease.
Hell hath its light—and Heaven; he burns with both.
And my dream broke, like life from the last limb—
Quivering; so loath I felt to let it go,
Just as I thought I had caught sight of Heaven.
It came to nought, as dreams of Heaven on earth
Do always.

LUCIFER. It is time we part again.
ELISSA. Farewell, then, gentle stars! To-night,
farewell!
For we all part at once. It is thus the bright
Visions and joys of youth break up—but they Forever. When ye shine again I will Be with ye; for I love ye next to him.
To all, adieu! When shall I see thee next?

Lucifer. Lady, I know not.

Elissa. Say!

Lucifer. Never, perchance.

Elissa. There is but one immortal in the world
Who need say—never!

Lucifer. What if I were he?

Elissa. But thou art not he; and thou shalt not say it.

Stars rise and set—rise, set, and rise again
In their sublime-like beauty, through all time.
Why should not we, too, ever meet, like them?

Lucifer. I see no beauty—feel no love—all things
Are unlovely.

Elissa. O Earth! be deaf; and Heaven!
Shut thy blue eye. He doth blaspheme the world.
Dost not love me?

Lucifer. Love thee? Ay! Earth and Heaven
Together could not make a love like mine.

Elissa. When wilt thou come again? To-morrow?

Lucifer. Well.

And then I cross yon sea ere I return;
For I have matters in another land.
Fear not.
Elissa. When will our parting days be over?

Lucifer. Oh! soon—soon! Think of me, love, on the waters!

Be happy! and, for me, I love few thing more
Than at night to ride upon the broad-backed billow,
Seaing along and plunging on his precipitous path;
While the red moon is westering low away,
And the mad waves are fighting for the stars,
Like men for—what they know not.

Elissa. Scowler!

Lucifer. Saint!

Elissa. The world hath much that is great; and but one sea,
Which is her spirit; and to her it stands
As the mad monarch passion to the heart—
Fathomless, overwhelming, which receives
The rivers of all feeling; in whose depths
Lie wrecked the riches of all nature. God,
When He did make thee, moved upon thee then,
And left His impress there, the same even now
As when thy last wave leapt from chaos.—Hark!
Nay, there is some one coming.

Festus, entering. It is I.

I said we should be sure to meet thee here;
For I have brought one who would speak with thee.

Lucifer. Thanks! and where is he?

Festus. Yonder. He would not Come up so far as this.

Lucifer. Who is it?
Festus. I know not
Who he may be, or what; but I can guess.
Lucifer. Remain a moment, love, till I return.
Elissa. Nay—let me leave!
Lucifer. Not yet: do not dislike him
He is a friend, and—more another time.
Festus. I am sorry, lady, to have caused this parting.
I fear I am unwelcome.
Elissa. We were parting.
Festus. Then am I doubly sorry; for I know
It is the saddest and the sacredest
Moment of all with those who love.
Elissa. He is coming!
So I forgive thee.
Lucifer. I must leave thee, love:
I know not for how long; it rests with thee
If it seem long at all. Eternity
Might pass, and I not know it in thy love.
Elissa. If to believe that I do love thee always
May make time fly the fleeter—
Lucifer. I'll believe it—
Trust me. I leave this lady in thy charge,
Festus. Be kind—wait on her—may he, love?
Elissa. Thou knowest. I receive him as thy friend
Whenever he come.
Festus. I ask no higher title
Than friend of the lovely and the generous.

OOO
Elissa. Farewell!

Festus. Lady! I will not forget my trust.

[Apart.] The breeze which curls the lake's bright lip, but lifts
A purer, deeper water to the light;
The ruffling of the wild bird's wing but wakes
A warmer beauty and a downier depth.
That startled shrink, that faintest blossom-blush
Of constancy alarmed!—Love! if thou hast
One weapon in that shining armory,
The quiver on thy shoulder, where thou keep'st
Each arrowy eye-beam feathered with a sigh;—
If from that bow, shaped so like beauty's lip,
Strung with its string of pearls, thou wilt twang forth
But one dart, fair into the mark I mean,—
Do it, and I will worship thee forever:
Yea, I will give thee glory, and a name
Known, sunlike, in all nations. Heart, be still!

Lucifer. This parting over—

Elissa. Yes, this one—and then?

Lucifer. Why, then another, may be.

Elissa. No—no more.

I'll be unhappy if thou tell'st me so.

Lucifer. Well, then—no more.

Elissa. But, when wilt thou come back?

Lucifer. Almost before thou wishest. He will know.

Elissa. I shall be always asking him. Farewell!
FESTUS. 487

LUCIFER. Shine on, ye stars! and light her to her rest;
Scarce are ye worthy for her handmaidens.
Why, Hell would laugh to learn I had been in love.
I have affairs in hell. Wilt go with me?
FESTUS. Yes, in a month or two:—not just this minute.
LUCIFER. I shall be there and back again ere then.
FESTUS. Meanwhile I can amuse myself: so, go!
But sometime I would fain behold thy home,
And pass the gates of fire.
LUCIFER. And so thou shalt, My home is every where where spirit is.
All things are as I meant them. Fare thee well.
FESTUS. The strongest passion which I have, is honor:
I would I had none: it is in my way.

Scene—Every where.

LUCIFER AND FESTUS.

FESTUS. Why, Earth is in the very midst of Heaven.
And space, though void of things, feels full of God.
Hath space no limit?
LUCIFER. None to thee. Yet, if Infinite, it would equal God; and that To think of is most vain.
Festus. And yet if not
Infinite, how can God exist therein?

Lucifer. I say not.

Festus. No. So soon when placed besides
The infinite, the poor immortal fails.

Lucifer. Space is God's space: eternity is His Eternity; His, Heaven. He only holds
Perfections which are but the impossible
To other beings.

Festus. We are things of time.

Lucifer. With God time is not. Unto Him all is Present eternity. Worlds, beings, years,
With all their natures, powers, and events,
The range whereof, when making, He ordains,
Unfold themselves like flowers. He foresees
Not, but sees all at once. Time must not be Contrasted with eternity: it is not
A second of the everlasting year.
Perfections, although infinite with God,
Are all identical; as much of Him—
And holy is His mercy, merciful
His wisdom, wise His love, and kind His wrath—
As form, extension, parts, are requisites
Of matter. Spirit hath no parts. It is
One substance, whole and indivisible,
Whatever else. Souls see each other clear
At one glance, as two drops of rain in air
Might look into each other, had they life.
Death does away disguise.
FESTUS.  Even here, I feel
Among these mighty things, that, as I am,
I am akin to God;—that I am part
Of the use universal, and can grasp
Some portion of that reason in the which
The whole is ruled and founded;—that I have
A spirit nobler in its cause and end,
Lovelier in order, greater in its powers,
Than all these bright immensities—how swift!
And doth creation's tide forever flow,
Nor ebb with like destruction? World on world,
Are they forever heaping up, and still
The mighty measure never full?

LUCIFER.  To act
Is power's habit; alway to create,
God's; which, thus ever causing worlds, to Him
Nought cumbrous more than new down to a wing,
Aye multiplies at once my power and pain.
I have seen many frames of being pass.
This generation of the universe
Will soon be gathered to its grave. These worlds,
Which bear its sky-pall, soon will follow thine.
I, both. All things must die.

FESTUS.  What are ye, orbs?
The words of God—the Scriptures of the skies?
For words with Him cannot be passing, nor Less real, vast, or glorious than yourselves.
The world is a great poem, and the worlds
The words it is writ in, and we souls the thoughts. Ye cannot die.

Lucifer. Think not on death. Here all Is life, light, beauty. Harp not so on death.

Festus. I cannot help me, spirit! Chide no more. As whó dare gaze the sun, doth after see Betwixt him and else a dark sun in his eye; So I, once having braved my burning doom, See nought beside—or that in every thing. Hark, what is that I hear?

Lucifer. An angel weeping—Earth's guardian angel. She is ever weeping.

Festus. See where she flies, spirit-torn, round the heavens, Like a fore-feel of madness about the brain.

Angel of Earth. Stars, stars! Stop your bright cars! Stint your breath— Repent ere worse— Think of the death Of the universe. Fear doom, and fear The fate of your kin-sphere. As a corse in the tomb, Earth! thou art laid in doom— The worm is at thy heart. I see all things part:— The bright air thicken, Thunder-stricken:
Birds from the sky
Shower like leaves:
Streamlets stop
Like ice on eaves:
The sun go blind:
Swoon the wind
On the high hill top—
Swoon and die:
Earth rear off her cities
As a horse his rider;
And still, with each death-strain,
Her heart-wound tear wider;
The lion roar and die
With his eyeballs on the sky:
The eagle scream
And drop like a beam:
Men crowd and cry,
Out on this deathful dream!
A low, dull sound—
'Tis the march of many bones
Under ground;
Up! and they fling,
Like a fly's wing,
Off them the gray gravestones;
They sit in their biers—
Father and mother,
Man and wife,
Sister and brother,
As in life;
Lady and lover—
Love all over.
Their flesh re-appears—
Their hearts beat—
Their eyes have tears:
Woe! woe!
Do they speak?
Stir? No!
Tongues were too weak,
Save to repeat
Woe!
But they smile
In a while;
For to wipe from His word
The dust of years,
He comes! he comes! the Lord,
Man-God, re-appears;
To bless, and to save
From death and the grave—
To redeem and deliver
Forever and ever!
The dead rise—
Death dies.
Go, Time, and sink
Thy great thoughts in the sea!
And quench thy red link!
Let him flutter to rest
On thy God-nursing breast,
Eternity!
Festus.

Mother Eternity!
What is for me?
Festus. Poor angel! Ah! it is the good who suffer.

Look! like a cloud, she hath wept herself away.
What of this world we view, and all yon worlds?
If God made not all things from nothing, how
Is He creator? Something must exist
If otherwise, eternal with Himself;
And all things had not origin in Him.

Lucifer. He made all things of Him. The visible world
Is as the Christ of nature; God the maker
In matter made self-manifest through time.
All things are formed of all things—all of God.
The world is made of wonders. Every day
Is born a new creation. Every orb
Hath its revealed word; and every race
Of being hath its judgment, or shall have.

Festus. Are all these worlds, then, stocked with souls like man's—
Free, fallible, and sinful?

Lucifer. Ay, they are.
All creature-minds, like man's, are fallible.
The seraph, who in Heaven highest stands,
May fall to ruin deepest. God is mind—
Pure, perfect, sinless. Man imperfect is—
Momently sinning. Evil then results
From imperfection. The idea of good
Is owned in imperfection's lowest form.
God would not, could not, make aught wholly ill,
Nor aught not like to err. Man never was Perfect nor pure, or he would be so now.
Thy nature hath some excellences — these
Oft thwarted by low lusts and wicked wills.
What then? They are necessitate in kind,
As change in nature, or as shade to light.
No darkness hath the sun — no weakness God:
These only be the faulty qualities
Of secondary natures — planets, men.
God hath no attributes, unless To Be
Be one: 'twould mix Him with the things He hath made.
God is all God, as life is that which lives.
I am a mighty spirit, and yet I
Am but to God what lightning is to light:
Lightning slays one thing — light makes all things live.
Bear, then, thy necessary ills with grace:
No positive estate or principle
Is Evil — debtor wholly for its form
And measure to defect — defect to good.
Good's the sole, positive principle in the world;
It is only thus, that what God makes, He loves —
And must: the others are but off-shoots. Ill
Is limited. One cannot form a scheme
For universal evil; not even I.

Festus. Can imperfection from perfection come?
Can God make aught defective?
Lucifer. How aught else?
There are but three proportions in all things—
The greater—equal—less. God could not make.
A God above Himself, nor equal with—
By nature and necessity the Highest;
So, if He make, it must be lesser minds—
Little and less from angels down to men,
Whose natures are imperfect, as His own
Must be all-perfect. These two states are not,
Except as whole unto its parts, opposed;
And evil is itself no ill unless Creation be.

Festus. Is God the cause of evil?

Lucifer. So far as evil comes from imperfection,
And imperfection from the things He hath made,
And what He hath made from His will to make.

Festus. Oh! let me rest, be it but a moment's pause!
This endless, light-like journey wearies me.
Remember, still my spirit toils in dust—
A dark, close cloud.

Lucifer. Alight, then, on this orb.
I am not wearied: I will watch by thee.
He sleeps—he dreams. How far men see in dreams!
In dreams they can accomplish worlds of things:
The heart then suffers a fusion of all feeling
Back to its youthful hours of innocence,
And nakedness, and paradise; ere yet
The world had wound a perishing garb around it;
While yet its God came down and spake to it.
Such and so great are dreams. My might, my being
To him is but a dream's. And, could a state
To come fill up their dream-stretched minds, they might.
Be gods. And may it not be so? Then man
Is worth my ruining. What does he dream?
With all the sway his spirit now exerts
O'er time, space, thought, it is but a shadowy sway,
Light as a mountain shadow on a lake.
Mine is the mountain's self. A touch would shake
To nought whatever his soul now feels or acts;
But not a worldquake could touch aught of mine:
Thus much we differ. I will not envy man.
Power alone makes being bearable.
And yet this dream-power is mind-power—real:
All things are real: fiction cannot be.
A thought is real as the world—a dream
True as all God doth know—with whom all is true;
The deep, dense sleep of half-dead exhaustedness!
Would I could feel it. Ah! he wakes at last.

Festus. Oh! I have dreamed a dream so beautiful!
Methought I lay, as it were, here; and, lo!
A spirit came and gave me wings of light,
Which thrice I waved delighted. Up we flew
Sheer through the shining air, far past the sun's
Broad blazing disk—past where the great great snake
Binds in his bright coil half the host of Heaven,—
Past thee, Orion! who, with arm uplift,
Like him the divine Evil of the world,
Threatening the throne of God, dost ever stand
Sublimely impious; and thy mighty mace
Whirling on high, down from its glorious seat
Drops, crushed and shattered, many a shining world.
And so the brave and beautiful of old
Believed thou wast a giant, made of worlds:
And they were right, if thus they bodied out
The immortal mind; for it hath starlike beauty,
And worldly might; and is as high above
The things it scorns, and will make war with God,
Though He gave it Earth and Heaven, and arms to win
Them both; and, spite of lust and pride, to earn them.
And now thy soul informs yon hundred stars,
As mine my limbs—well, 'tis a noble end.
What now to thee be mortal maid or goddess?
Look! she who fled thee once now loves and longs
To clasp thee to her cold and beamy breast.
Pine moon! thou art as far below him now
As once she was above thee, thou of the world-belt!
And she who had thee, and who knew thee god,
Died of her boast, and lies in her own dust.
And she who loved thee, the young, blushy Morning,
Who caught thee in her arms, and bore thee off
Far o'er the lashing seas to a lonely isle,
Where she might pleasure longer and in secret—
That love undid thee; and it is so now:
Whether the beauty seek, or flee, or have,
FESTUS.

'Tis a like ill—this beauty doubly mortal.
What though the moon with madness slew thee there,
Let me believe it was within the arms
That loved thee even in the stroke of death,
And that there snapped the lightning link of life.
Kill, but not conquer, man nor mind may gods.
Thou image of the Almighty error, man!
Banished and banned to Heaven, by a weak world,
Which makes the minds, it cannot master gods.
And thou, the first and greatest of half-gods,
Which they in olden time did star together
To an idolatrous immortality;
Who nationalized the skies, and gave all stars
Unto the spirits of the good and brave,
Forestalling Heaven by ages—wondrous men!
And if—beguiled by wine, and the low wiles
Thou wouldst not creep to meet, and a drunken sleep,
Like to high noon in the midst of all his might,
Close by the brink of immortality—
The deep dominions of thy sea-sire, thou
Didst lose thy light by kings who hate the great,
Thou only hadst to stand up to the sun,
And gain again thine eyes. So the great king,
The world, the tyrant we elect, in vain
Puts out the eyes of mind: it looks to God,
And reaps its light again. Wherefore, revenge!
Out with the sword! the world will run before thee,
Orion! belted giant of the skies,
Thou with the treble strain of godhood in thee—
March! there is nought to hinder thee in Heaven:—
Past that great sickle saved for one day's work,
When He who sowed shall reap Creation's field;—
Past those high diademed orbs which show to man
His crown to come;—up through the starry strings
Of that high harp close by the feet of God,
Which He, methought, took up and struck, till
Heaven,
In love's immortal madness, rang and reeled;
The stars fell on their faces; and, far off,
The wild world halted—shook his burning mane—
Then, like a fresh-blown trumpet blast, went on,
Or like a god gone mad. On, on he flew,
I and the spirit, far beyond all things
Of measure, motion, time and aught create;
Where the stars stood on the edge of the first nothing,
And looked each other in the face and fled,—
Past even the last, long starless void, to God;
Whom straight I heard, methought, commanding thus:
Immortal! I am God. Hie back to earth,
And say to all, that God doth say—Love God!

Festus. And my dream changed to one of general doom.

Wilt hear it?

Lucifer. Ay, say on! It is but a dream.

Festus. God made all mind and motion cease; and, lo!
The whole was death and peace. An endless time
Obtained, in which the power of all made failed.
God bade the worlds to judgment, and they came—
Pale, trembling, corpse-like. To the souls therein
Then spake the Maker: Deathless spirits, rise!
And straight they thronged around the throne. His arm
The Almighty then uplift, and smote the worlds
Once, and they fell in fragments like to spray,
And vanished in their native void. He shook
The stars from Heaven like rain-drops from a bough;
Like tears they poured adown creation's face.
Spirit and space were all things. Matter, death,
And time, left even not a wake to tell
Where once their track o'er being. God's own light,
Undarkened and unhindered by a sun,
Glowed forth alone in glory. And through all
A clear and tremulous sense of God prevailed,
Like to the blush of love upon the cheek,
Or the full feeling lightening through the eye,
Or the quick music in the chords of harps.
God judged all creatures unto bliss or woe,
According to their deeds, and faith, and His Own will: and straight the saved upraised a voice
Which seemed to emulate eternity
In its triumphant over-blessedness.
The lost leaped up and cursed God to His face—
A curse might make the sun turn cold to hear;
And thee, in all thy burning glory, tremble,
In front of all thine angels, like a chord.
Rage writhed each brow into a changeless scowl.
Madly they mocked at God, and dared His eye,
Safe in their curse of deathlessness. To hell
They hied like storms; and, cursing all things, each
Soul wrapped him in his shroud of fire for aye,
With one long, loud howl, which seemed to deafen
Heaven—
And then I woke.

Lucifer. A wild, fantastic dream;
A mere mirage of mind. Come, let us leave:
We have seen enough of this world.

Festus. Lift me up, then.
World upon world, how they come rolling on!
But none that I see are so fair as earth:
There is so much to love that is purely earth.
Now I could wander all day in the wood,
Where nature, like a sibyl, writes the fate
Of all that live on her red forest leaves;
And have no other aim than wandering
Within that wood, and wind my arms around
Its gray, gaunt trunks, and think and feel to them;
While the wind, sinking, moans over the earth
Like a giant over some dead captive dame,
Whom death hath saved from madness and his love;—
Could tramp across the brown and springy moor,
And over the purple ling, and never tire;—
Could look upon the ripple of a river,
Or on a tree’s long shadow down a hill,
For a whole summer’s day, wishing the sun
Would drink my soul up to him as he draws
Dew from the earth. These things are in my mind,
And suns and systems cannot drive them out,
Nor universal system of all suns.
Dost ravage all these worlds?

LUCIFER. Ay, all mine own.

Where spirit is, there evil; and the world
Is full of me as ocean is of brine.

FESTUS. God is all perfect; man imperfect. Thou?

LUCIFER. I am the imperfection of the whole—
The pitch profoundest of the fallible.
Myself the all of evil which exists—
The ocean heaped into a single surge.

FESTUS. O God! why wouldst Thou make the universe?

LUCIFER. Child! quench yon suns; strip death of its decay;
Men of their follies—hell of all its woe!
These if thou didst, thou couldst not banish me.
I am the shadow which Creation casts
From God's own light.—But here we are, at hell.
Hark to the thunderous roaring of its fires!
Yet, ere we further pass—stop! dost thou shrink?

FESTUS. At nought—not I! Come on, fiend!
follow me!
Lucifer and Festus entering.

Lucifer. Behold my world! Man's science counts it not Upon the brightest sky. He never knows
How near it comes to him: but, swathed in clouds
As though in plumed and palléd state, it steals
Hearse-like and thief-like round the universe,
Forever rolling and returning not—
Robbing all worlds of many an angel soul—
With its light hidden in its breast, which burns
With all concentrate and superfluent woe.
Nor sun nor moon illume it, and to those
Which dwell in it, not live, the starry skies
Have told no time since first they entered there.
Worlds have been built, and to their central base
Ruined and razed to the last atom; they
Of neither know, nor can—unconscious, save
To agony—nought knowing even of God
But His omnipotence to execute
Torture on those He hath in wrath endowed
With Heaven's own immortality, to make
Them feel what woe the Almighty can inflict,
And the all-feeble suffer, and not be Annihilated as they would. Be sure
That this is hell. The blood which hath imbrued
Earth's breast, since first men met in war, may hope
Yet to be formed again and reascend,
Each drop its individual vein; the foam-bubble,
Sun-drawn out of the sea into the clouds,
To scale the cataract down which it fell,
Or seek its primal source in earth's hot heart;
But for the lost to rise to or regain
Heaven, or to hope, it is impossible.

Festus. Are all these angels then, or men, or both?
Or mortals of all worlds?

Lucifer. Immortals all.

Festus. What numbers?

Lucifer. All are spirits fallen through sin
At various periods of eternity;
And not by one offence, to one same doom,
And at one moment, did they down from Heaven
Like to the rapid droppings of a shower;
No! each distinct as thunderpeals, they fell,
Save those that fell with me. With me began
Sin even in Heaven; with me but sin remains.
Once, I alone was Hell. Behold my fruits!

Festus. What do yon fiends? Some 'mong them look like mortals:
Their hearts shine through them like live coals through ashes.
They look like madmen gone delirious.
Oh, horror! Let me hence.

Lucifer. Nay, hear.

Festus. I hear
A strain incongruous as a merry dirge,
Or sacramental bacchanal might be.

Lucifer. Men are they not, but devils at the best;
And I would have thee mark them.

Festus.

Fiends. Heap high the fires of hell! let woe not languish,
Heap up with everlasting flame, heap higher;
There let the man-fiend consummate in anguish
Howl through the fathomless profound of fire.
To tempt and ruin those that once were solely
God's, and torment them when with us they dwell—
This is our end, and their existence wholly
Hid in the doom no demon dares to tell,
But is shadowed in the harrowing eternity of hell.
Deeper than the bowl the drunkard drained so gladly,
Deadlier than the lie which scorched the liar's tongue,
Keener than the blade the murderer plied so madly,
Eats aye into the essence the worm that all hath stung.
And for that they succumbed to the toils wherewith
we bound them,
Their bread is burning brimstone,—their drink is bubbling fire;
For they live upon the nature of the tortures that surround them,
And their life is in the death they shall never see expire;
Lo! it floweth from the fountains of the ever-seething ire.
Festus. Nay, let me quit! now know I what hell is.
What are they—drunkards, liars, murderers?

Lucifer. Can wine destroy the soul? or hell's fierce flames
Feed upon holy water, wherewith priest
Baptizeth sinless babe? Can liar make
God lie? or cheat his neighbor of his soul?
No! God's salvation waiteth not on man's
Weak will nor ministry; nor man's perdition
Upon his brother's hatred or neglect.
Can murderer slay the soul? or suicide
Drug immortality? Their sin is great,
And is eternally condemned of God;
But of their nature, the which Death destroys,
Their own as well as victim's recompense.
When Time hath overcome the ruin wrought
Upon their hearts who loved the dead, that they
Who suffered most have most forgiven ill,—
Shall the dead slay the living ceaselessly?—
Shall God, who is all Love, reverse, reserve,
Here in hell, ages afterwards, those crimes?
And because man hath sinned a moment, crown
All crime in instituting punishment,
Unending for an instantaneous wrong?
Shall that be justice? It were more than vengeance
Yet such the Deity men fable, such
The hell whereto they doom themselves.

Festus. No more.
The world is all-sufficient for itself;
And Hell and Heaven are not the equivalents
Of earth's iniquities and righteousness.

Lucifer. Can those who are idolaters defraud
God of His worship? who adore the world,
Gold, or, as savages, the stars and Heaven,
And elements of earth? None worship Him,
But with and in His spirit. Nought attains
His love but that proceedeth from it first.
His praise is everlasting in all worlds
And starry ages of eternity.
Can they who covet the world's worthiest goods,—
Wealth, honor, power, knowledge, rank, or aught,—
Merit eternal torment for a sin
Wherewith is bound the world's prosperity
And human glory? Nought eternal is
But that which is of God. All pain and woe
Are therefore finite. Can the robber steal
From God or Heaven a thing, or from the soul?
Or the deflowerer desecrate and undo
The espousals of the spirit with its Lord?
How weak is virtue, then, and vice, how vain!
How wretched human righteousness—and sin,
How despicable to the soul assured,
Since neither hath a recompense. The one
By Him destroyed who can alone unmake
That he hath made; the other perfected,
United, deified in God the Son
With His own nature. Infinite Universe!
Thou hast no like, no second favorite
To mortal man of God's.
Festus. What mean the words
Of yonder fiendish chant, then?
Lucifer. Words and shapes
Are equally as soon assumed by spirits.
Sin, with deep draughts of fiery venom fed,
Drains to the latest dreg of murderous flame
Its self-consuming fate, self-punitive
In cyclical necessity of self,
By pure destruction. If 'twas God's good will Brought all things into being, then His hate
Cannot do less than all annihilate.
What is unholy He detests to death.
Evil at last corrupts itself away,
Left to itself; but His high will o'errides,
O'errules, indeed, the child of His right hand.
When therefore all is ended, and at last
Time's sun, declining down the eternal skies,
Leaves his last shining shadow on the sea,
And in the boundless abyss entombs his beams;
When final evening folds the universe
Heavily round, then hell shall drain the dread
Cup of perdition to the last drop. Death
Is of all things thou thinkest most like sleep:
The dead think otherwise. But wherefore thus?
What mean my words to thee?
Festus. In sooth, I know not.
I am constrained to hear them.
Lucifer. As for these!—
It is a fire of soul in which they burn,
And by which they are purified from sin—
Rid of the grossness which had gathered round them,
And burnt again into their virgin brightness.
All things work round like worlds. The orb of hell
Hath yet its place in Heaven, as thine and all.
But, as a spiritual quality,
As spirit is the substance of all matter—
Hidden or open, heatlike doth inhere
In all existence—or for good or ill.
Look at yon spirit.

Festus. What was it brought thee hither?

Spirit. I was an angel once, ages agone;
But doing good and glorifying not
God, who empowered me, He sent me here
To fire the proud spot from my heart.

Festus. And when
Wilt thou do this, and own thou hast wronged God?

Spirit. I do repent me, and confess it now.
I will not ask God now to let me be
What once I was; but might I only sit
A footstool for some other worthier far
Who owneth now my throne, I should be happy—
Far happier than I was in my proud prayers,
That God would give me worlds on worlds to govern,
And in receiving all their prayers and blessings.
O God! remember me! O save me!

Festus. See!
I do believe there is an angel coming
This way from Heaven.
He comes to me— to me!
Hail, sufferer!
Sinner.
God hath bade me bring thee
Away to Heaven; thy throne is kept for thee;
And all the hosts of Heaven are on the wing
To welcome thee again!
I dare not come:
I am not worthy Heaven.
But God will make thee.
Festus. Spirit— farewell! and may we meet again
In better time and place.
Glory to God!
I go— farewell!— and I will speak of thee,
But Oh, repent! Be humble, and despair not.
[Angel and Spirit rise.
Lucifer. Oh! think, when all are judged, what hosts of souls
Will then be mine at last!— what wings of fire!
Deemest thou yet as mortal?
This is not
As thou didst speak of hell, nor as I judged.
Lucifer. Hell is the wrath of God— His hate of sin.
God hates man's nature; be it said of his
As of all beings!
How hate that He hath made?
The infinite opposition of Perfection
To imperfection leaves nor choice, nor mean.
Thus the demeanor of thy world grieved God,
Till its destruction pleased Him, and its name
Was struck out of the starry scroll; thus all
Creation worketh infinite grief in Time.
When human nature is most perfect, then
Its fall is nearest, as of ripest fruit.
Man's pleasure in the world—to both of which
His nature is made fit—is not of God,
Save theirs on whom His spirit He bestows,
As in a twilight between Earth and Heaven,
A promissory Being unfulfilled—
But still how glorious to the stone-blind world!
This is in time, but in eternity
He raises, remakes, adds to all He hath made
His own immortalizing love and grace,
Which keeps them ever pure as is the sea,
And incorruptible in godly will.
The bliss of God and man originates,
Unites, and ends in self—in Deity:
To whom is neither motive—good—nor end
Greater or less, or other than Himself.
Festus. But how can the Creator glory find
In hell, or creature, good—if God be Love,
Or man a being salvable? Oh, say!
But who comes hither?
Lucifer. It is the Son of God!—
Omnipotent! before whose steadfast feet
The thrones of Heaven, which hoped to have o'er-thrown thine,
But now all strengthless, hopeless, Godless here,
Rose once and ebbed forever, even these
Deep in their fiery abyss of woe
Unbent, unbettered will again rush forth
In all the might of madness and despair,
To prove their hatred of Thee and Thy love.
Salvation is the scorn of angels here.
What dost Thou here, not having sinned?

Son of God. For men
I bore with death—for fiends I bear with sin;
And death and sin are each the pain I pay
For the love which brought me down from Heaven to save
Both men and devils; and the Father makes
And orders every instant what is best.

Festus. This is God's truth: Hell feels a moment cool.

Son of God. Hell is His justice—Heaven is love—
Earth, His long-suffering: all the world is but
A quality of God; therefore come I
To temper these—to give to justice, mercy;
And to long-suffering, longer. Heaven is mine
By birthright. Lo! I am the heir of God:
He hath given all things to me. I have made
The earth mine own, and all your countless worlds,
And all the souls therein; yea, soul by soul,
And world by world, have I redeemed them all—
One by one through eternity, or given
The means of their salvation: why not, then, Hell?

Festus. Every spirit is to be redeemed.

Son of God. Mortal! it has: the best and worst need one
And same salvation. There is nothing final
In all this world but God; therefore these souls Whom I see here, and pity for their woes—
But for their evil more—these need not be Inhelled forever; for although once, twice, thrice,
On earth or here they may have put God from them—
Disowned His prophets—mocked His angels—slain His Son in His mortality—and stormed His curses back to Him; yet God is such,
That He can pity still; and I can suffer
For them, and save them. Father! I fear not,
But by Thy might I can save hell from hell.
Fiends! hear ye me! Why will ye burn forever?
Look! I am here all water: come and drink,
And bathe in me! baptize your burning souls
In the pure well of life—the spring of God.
I come to save all souls who will be saved.
Come, ye immortal fallen! rise again!
There is a resurrection for the dead,
And for the second dead. And though ye died,
And fell, and fell again, and again died,
There is a life to come, a rise for all—
A life to come forever, and a rise Perpetual as the spring is in the year.
A Fiend. Thou Son of God! what wilt thou here with us?
Have we not hell enough without Thy presence?
Remorse, and always strife, and hate of all,
I see around me: is it not enough?
Why wilt Thou double it with Thy mild eyes?
Son of God. Spirit! I come to save thee.
Fiend. How can that be?
Son of God. Repent! God will forgive thee then;
and I
Will save thee; and the Holy One shall hallow.
Repent thou, for thy judgment is at hand;
But if thou slurrest over these means and times,
Which have been given thee for repentance here,
Tremble! This hell is nothing to thy next.
Believethou I can save thee?
Fiend. Son of God!
I do believe it. Let me worship.
Son of God. Come!
Son of God. Come to me! Lo! I will but touch thy brow,
And make thee bright as morning is in Heaven.
Spirit. Angel of light I am again! Look here!
This—this is to be saved!
Lucifer. I like it not.
Son of God. Hear! ye immortals dead! this I can do.
Repent! and be all angels.
Spirit. Oh, believe!
He is God. Worship Him! He comes to save us.
Lucifer. Stand thou beside me: I will speak to them;
Or they will sure believe Him. Hell! O Hell!
Powers of perdition! thrones of darkness!—hear!
Wrath, ruin, torment!—hear me! It is I!
Thanks, fiends! I know ye hate me well, and may:
I tempted, ruined, damned ye every one.
Were ye not proud, now, to be conquered by me?
But wherefore so supine? Am I your lord?
Me do ye doubt? or dare ye Him believe?
What is an angel dressed in shiny white?
Can I not make ye angels? Ay! and more:
I cannot make ye less—nor ye yourselves—
Nor God—nor Son of God. But hark to me!
Be still, ye thunderblasts and hills of fire!
Hell doth out-din itself.—Hell-hearted slaves!
What are ye that I thus should toil for ye,
Who hardly earn the fire that burns ye up?
Power I have proffered, but ye have refused:
Nothing is for ye but your fiery fate.
Kingdoms I have prepared, and ye have spurned.
Slaves! slaves! ye are too much at ease! Ye leave
Me single in the work of woe. I, sole,
Go forth to sow destruction: I, alone,
Reap ruin. Had ye been as I, ere now
The universe had been all hell; and, for
A pit, each fiend had had a world to rule.
Rise! Yet we'll play all Hell against all Heaven!
Up! up! and then at once we will battle God;
And hurling each his orb against the throne,
Strange if we will not scatter it like sand.
To reign is nothing half like to dethrone!
Dethrone! and each is greater then than God.
And will ye, then, give up your hopes of Heaven,
And entrance as young conquerors fresh from spoil,
And choice of thrones won by your death-red hands,
For pitiful repentance, like him yonder?
Forbid it! all the prowess, pride, and pain
Of hell that we have borne with! do ye not?
Meanwhile man's world is straight to be destroyed.
Be glad! be glad! Earth's sons may soon be here.
And here, as earnest of the truth I tell,
Behold this earthling standing by my side!
Speak to them, Festus.

Festus. Nay, I dread them.

Lucifer. Speak!

Great spirits! he scarce is worthy to address ye,
In that I cannot say he yet is damned.

Festus. But I am here; what recks it how or why?
Ye care not, and I know not. It is fate:
The will of God and him who sets me here;
And which I question not. It must be good,
Whether decreed that I be saved or lost.
But I have poor pretensions for this place;
And none, I hope, have worse that are to come.
For I have never mocked the Word of God,
Nor torn it into fuel for my scorn:
Nor doubted, save tremblingly, His being:—
His love to man—His right to be adored,—
Never have hated, never wronged my race,—
Deluded, nor rejoiced in their delusion;
Never have beckoned off the good from good—
Never have mocked nor scattered hopes—nor e'er
Have wasted hearts, nor desolated hearths;
And if I have once, twice—as who hath not?—
Toyed with temptation, yet even he will say
Who standeth there, that I have never given
Up to his burning dalliance my soul.
And yet he is my friend, the Evil One.
And why is wondrous; judge ye wherefore, too.
I have no malice, envy, nor revenge;
None of those petty passions which bad hearts
Scourge red into themselves—for passions are Sufferings—and which to nourish is his want;
Wherein doth lie his power: these I have not.
And, save enjoying earth, I have done never Aught that he could take part in. But he came From God, he said, to give; and I believed;—
Great spirits lie not—doubt not.

Lucifer. He says truth.
But it is not for him nor you to know
The reason of my doings; it is the thing
Unfeared and unforethought which tempts, betrays.
It is I who bait the world to do its will.
As to this mortal, God hath sanctioned all
That I have done, or may do to the end;
Which I have nought to do with. Son of God!
Go on redeeming!—I will go on damning.
God! go on making!—I will go on marring.
Go on believing, man!—I go on tempting.
Saint! angel! cherub! seraph! and archangel!
Go ye on blessing!—I will go on cursing!
I now retract my course to earth; therein
To work out what remaineth of the fate
Of this man, and await his world's destruction.
What next may hap I care not.

Festus. Let us hence!
Lucifer. Where is He?
Festus. There — see! many do believe.
Orb of perdition! thou, too, shalt die out,
And thy red-sheeted flames shall fall for aye.
Thy palpitating piles of ruin, hot
With ever-active agony, and quick
With soul immortal, down whose midnight heights
The wrath of God in cataracts of fire
Precipitates itself unceasingly,
Shall rush into destruction as a steed
Rushes into the battle, there to die.
Thy quivering hills of black and bloody hue,
Death-breathing, shall collapse like lifeless lungs,
And end in air and ashes. Thou shalt be
Dashed from creation, spark-like, from a hand
Scarless: pass like a rolléd syllable
Of midnight thunder from the coming day.
The river of all life, which flows through Heaven,
Shall yet reach thee and overflood thy flames.
Thou shalt no more vex God nor man; nor all
The seekings of the soul shall hunt thee out.
Thy day is sometime over. Be it soon!
And thou the lost world which the world hath lost!

Scene — A Drawing Room.

Festus and Elissa.

Festus. Who says he loves and is not wretched, lies;
Or that love is madness, came mad from his mother.
It is the most reasonable thing in nature.
What can we do but love? It is our cup.
Love is the cross and passion of the heart —
   Its end — its errand. In the name of God,
What made us love, Elissa?
   Elissa. I know not.
I am not happy. I have wept all day.
   Festus. 'Twas thine own fault. What wouldst thou have of me?
I tell thee we must — no, I cannot tell thee.
Nor can I bear those tears. Thou know'st I love thee,
Worship thee; Oh! it's a world more than worship,
The cold obedience which we give to God.
Elissa! turn to me!
   Elissa. I cannot. Go! —
Festus. Thou hadst no need, no business to have loved me.

One loved thee well.

Elissa. I could not help his loving me, nor my loving thee. It was our fate.

Festus. Then Faith hath feed the passion for our death,

And we are sold.

Elissa. Well! Let us die together.

Together we will quit our bodies here.

Festus. Together will we go to God and judgment.

Elissa. Festus! I will, I can love none but thee.

Festus. Thou must not.

Elissa. But I must. I cannot help it. Look at me—heart and arms, I am thine own.

Thou knowest I am and have been. Wilt not love me?

Festus! mine own and only! wilt thou not?

Have I done nothing, suffered and abandoned Nothing, for thee? Oh! I was happy once,

Ere I knew thee. Why wast thou kind to me?

Cruelly kind—or this had never been.

But now thou mayst be cruel if thou wilt.

Hate me! still I am thine: disown me, thine!

Desert me! no—thou canst not. I am thine;

I am—look at me, Festus! look at me;

I am half blind with weeping; and mine eyes

Have not a tear left in them. But I know

How it will end. Thou wilt leave me as I am—

Loveless and lonely.
Festus. Nay, not so; my love
Shall aye be with thee, and my soul with both.
But we must part! Think that I come again.

Elissa. Not be again with thee—nor thou with me!
It is too much. Let me go mad, or die.

Festus. Live, mine Elissa! and thou shalt live with me,
And I will love thee ever as I now love.

Wilt thou?

Elissa. Oh! make me happy! say I may Believe thee.

Elissa. Say it again.

I cannot know too often of my bliss.

But dost thou love me? tell me—wilt thou love me?

Festus. Since I have known thee, I have done nought else.

All hours not spent with thee are blanks between stars.

I love thee! love thee! love thee! madly love thee!

Oh! thou hast drank my heart dry of all love!

It will be empty to aught after thee.

Come, dry thine eyes. Blessings on those sweet eyes!

By Heaven! they might a moment win the glance

Of any seraph gazing not on God.

Elissa. No wonder they drew thine. There is a tear!

Festus. Ay; strange and startling is the first hot tear.
That we have shed for years; and which hath lain
Like to a water-fairy in the eye's
Blue depths—spell-bound in the socket of the soul.
Death brought it not—pain brought it not—nor shame;
Nor penitence—nor pity—nor despair:
Nothing but love could. For a fearful time
We can keep down the floodgates of the heart,
But we must draw them sometime; or it will burst
Like sand this brave embankment of the breast,
And drain itself to dry death. When pride thaws,
Look for floods.

Elissa. Now, thou wilt be very kind
When next we meet? Our time will soon be gone.

Festus. I cannot think of time:—there is no time!
Time! time! I hate thee—with the hate of hell
For aught that's good—but thou art infamous.
I will give thee half my immortality
To keep back for one hour. Leave me, to-night;
And wither me, to-morrow, like a weed.

Elissa. Where is he now?

Festus. In hell,—I hope.

Elissa. What mean'st thou?

He wronged thee never. Say, when cometh he?

Festus. To-night.

Elissa. He comes to sever us, like fate
But shall he part us?

Festus. Never! Let him part
The sun in two first.
Elissa. It was ever thus:
I am made to make unhappy all around me.

Festus. I will not hear of thy being wrong,—it is I.
I am the false usurper. And since one
Out of the three must be a sacrifice,
Let it be me. It shall be.

Elissa. Thou didst swear,
Even now, to love me ever.

Festus. Be it so.
I have sworn—and now and then I keep my oath—
I will not give thee up, so save me, God!

Elissa. Oh! we have been too happy, have we not?
But, now I think of it, we might have known
It could not last. Woe follows bliss as close
As death does life—as naturally, may be.
We might have thought—

Festus. I never thought about it.
My love—Elissa! ah, how cold thy hand is!
Here—warm it on my heart. Nay, let it be.
The hand that is on the heart is on the soul.
And it is thus some moments take the wheel,
And steer us through eternity. Believe me,
Could I but crowd life, love too, in one throb,
I would beat it out, this moment, in thy hand,
And would die blessing.

Elissa. Give me my hand back!

Festus. My sweet one! if this heart hath warmed thy hand,
It hath not beaten in vain—it but returns
A pleasure, and a passion, and a power:
For oft at touch of thine this bosom burns.
Speak to me! keep my name upon thy lips,
Steeped in their rosy star-dew, there where now
Dwells the sweet soul of silence unexpressed,
Possible music; hither turn those eyes,
Within whose glowing depths one streaming star,
Ascendant of the soul, holds radiant rule
And full-orbed dominance, that mine may share
Their dear translated light; Oh! let that cheek,
Just tinged as with the echo of a blush,
Pale as the sumptuous bosom of a rose,
Which else might vie with snow, that crescent brow
Beaming with soul-light, Oh! incline to mine!—
Nay, do not weep. We never trust your tears.
Tears, like the spirits in a magic glass,
Wait on the witchery of fair woman's will.

Elissa. Wrong me not thus. The end of love is woe;
And of woe, death; and of death, death alone.
And there is no redemption for the heart.

Festus. Love hath no end except itself. We only Felt we loved and were happy.

Elissa. Ah! It was so.
Our sole misfortune is, we have been happy:
We never shall be happy here again.

Festus. Nay, say not so. Let us be happy now.
Happy? To fling aside thy wavy locks,
And feed mine eyes on thy white brow — to look
Deep in thine eyes till I feel mine have drank
Full of that soft, wet fire which floats in thine —
Eyes which I ne'er would leave — yet, when most near,
Then most astray I — Oh! to lay my cheek
Upon thy sweet and swelling bosom thus;
Where midst upon the beauty of thy breast
Sits Love, like One between the cherubim —
To crop the red, budding kisses from thy lips —
To name thee, make thee, but one moment, mine —
Delights me more than all that earth can lend
The good or bad — or Heaven can give the saved.
One long, wild kiss of sunny sweets, till each
Lack breath, the lips half bleed, and, come — thou knowest!
I ask but one such — let it last forever!

EliSSA. Now, Festus! this is wrong.

FestUS. What? — what is wrong?
Shall my blood never bound beneath beauty's touch,
Heart throb, nor eye thaw with hers — when her tears
Drop, quick and bright, upon the glowing brow
Plunged in her bosom — because, forsooth, it is wrong?
Let it be wrong! it is wrong, it is wretchedness,
That I would lose both sense and soul to suffer.

EliSSA. How dare we love each other as we do?

FestUS. Give me some wine! more — more, love!

EliSSA. Drink and drain
The bowl! the vintage of a hundred years
Would never slake the memory of shame;
Nor quench the thirst of folly.
Festus. Fill again!

My beauty! sing to me, and make me glad.
Thy sweet words drop upon the ear as soft
As rose-leaves on a well: and I could listen,
As though the immortal melody of Heaven
Were wrought into one word— that word a whisper,
That whisper all I want from all I love.

Elissa. I am not happy, and I cannot sing.
Thou lookest happy. I wish I were so.

Festus. They tell us that the body of the sun
Is dark, and hard, and hollow; and that light
Is but a floating fluid veiling him.
Ah! how oft, and how much, the heart is like him!
Despite the electric light it lives and hides in.

Servant, entering. A singer who was told to come is here.

Festus. Wilt hear him?
Elissa. Yes, love— gladly.
Festus. Show him in.

What have you there?

Singer. Oh! I think, every thing.

Festus. Well, any thing will be enough this once.

The last new song?

Singer. Certainly; here it is. [Sings.

Oh! let not a lovely form
With feeling fill thine eye;
Oh! let not the bosom warm
At love-lorn lady's sigh.
FESTUS.

For how false is the fairest breast!
   How little worth, if true!
And who would wished possessed,
   What all must scorn, or rue?
Then pass by beauty with looks above;
Oh! seek never—share never—woman’s love!

Oh! let not a planet-like eye
   Imbeam its tale on thine;
In truth ’tis a lie—though a lie
   Scarce less than truth divine.
And the light of its look on the young
   Is wildfire with the soul;
Ye follow and follow it long,
   But find nor good nor goal.
Then pass by beauty with looks above;
Oh! seek never—share never—woman’s love!

ELISSA. Methinks I must have heard that voice before.

FESTUS. And I.

ELISSA. Where?

FESTUS. I forget.

ELISSA. And so do I.

SINGER. Oh! let not a wildering tongue
   Weave bright webs o’er thine ear;
Nor thy spirit be said nor sung
   To the air of smile or tear.
And say it hath melody far
More than the spheres of Heaven,
Though to man and the morning star
They sang, Ye be forgiven!
Yet pass by beauty with looks above;
Oh! seek never—share never—woman's love!
Oh! let not a soft bosom pour
Itself in thine! It is vain.
Love cheateth the heart, Oh! be sure,
Worse even than wine, the brain.
Then snatch up thy lip from the brim,
Nor drain its dreamlike death;
For Love loves to lie down and dim
The bright soul with his breath.
Then pass by beauty with looks above;
Oh! seek never—share never—woman's love!

Festus. Come hither, man! I wish to look at thee
A moment. No! it can't be. Yet I have seen
Some one much like thee.

Elissa. It was a brother, may be?
Singer. I have none, lady. Have ye done with me?

Festus. Yes—go! and we will take your song of you.

Servant. Here, follow me. [They go.

Festus. Weeping again, my love?
Thou art, by turns, the proudest and the humblest
Creature I ever met with. The least thing
Dints thy soft heart. Come, cheer thee, sweet one—do!
Oh! if to say, I love, laid all the sins
Of all the worlds upon me, I would say it
Till I were out of breath; and will, till I die.

Elissa. If Love be blind, it must be by his tears;
For love and sorrow alway come together—
Love with his sister, sorrow, by the hand.

Festus. Nay, I will conquer thee again to smile,
Or lose my right to love thee. Let me kneel!
Come! I will have no other gods but thee;
To none but thee will I bow down and worship;
Thy bosom is mine altar—and thine eyes
Are the divinity that preys upon me.
Oh! cruel as the week-day gods of old,
Thou wilt have human victims; not content
With tears and kisses—fire and water—thou
Wilt have the subtler element of life;
Thou needs must live on immortality!
Here—take me then! I offer up myself
A sacrifice to thee.

Elissa. Thou foolish boy!
Where will thy passionate folly end? I love thee.

Festus. Well, then, let me conjure thee! let me swear
By some sweet oath that shall to both be holy,—
By arms which hold, by knees which worship thee!
By that dark eye, the dark divine of beauty,
Yet trembling o'er its lid all tears and light—
Glory and eye of eyes which yet have shone!
By this lone heart which longeth for a mate!
By love's sweet will, and sweeter way! by all
I love — by thyself, myself! let me, let me,
Let me — but draw the lightning from thine eye:—
Kisses are my conductors: do not frown,
Nor look so temptingly angry. I was but trifling.
The cold calm kiss which cometh as a gift,
Not a necessity, is not for me,
Whose bliss, whose woe, whose life, whose all, is love.

Elissa. We both wrong whom we love, love whom we wrong.

Festus. But I am as a dog that fondles o'er
And licks the wound he dies of. Would I could Suffer or feel enough of love to kill!

Elissa. Thou loveth one whom thou oughtest not to love.

Festus. And what of that? Love hath its own belief—
Own worship — own morality — own laws:
And it were better that all love were sin
Than that love were not. It must have by-laws—
Exceptions to the rules of Earth and Heaven—
For it means not the good it doth, nor ill.

Elissa. It is wrong — it is unjust — unkind.

Festus. It is.

But I am half mad and half dead with it.
I have loved thee till I can love nought beside.
My heart is drenched with love as with a cloud.
I have too much of life, that I scarce can live.
I hate all things but thee—shun men, like snakes—
Women, like pits. To me thou art all woman—
All life—all love, and more than all my kind.
I love thee more than I shall love and look for Death, if he takes thee from me. But who dreams
Of death and thee together?

Elissa. I do oft:
And as oft wish dreams would, for once, come true.
The best of all things are dreams realized.

Festus. Dreams such as gods may dream thy soul possess
Forever in the Hadean Eden—Death:
But bless thy lover with reality!
Then thou shalt live forever, and with me.
I have gone round the compass of all life,
And can find nought worthy of thee. I but feel,
That were I—as I ought to be—a god,
I would just sacrifice the sun to thee,
In bright and burning honor of thy love.
Miracles are not miracles with gods.

Elissa. Dearer thou canst not be to me, unless
I die in telling how dear.

Festus. My Elissa!
I—I am bewildered: open but thine arms!
And make me happy and all wise of thee.
My soul is stung with thy beauty to the quick.
Oh! but thou art too good, or else too bad:
Be colder, or be warmer!

Elissa. Leave me!

Festus. Well:
It is most cruel—first to light the heart
With love completely—boundlessly; and then,
Moonlike, slowly to edge aside, and leave
One only little line of all so bright,
Once—teach and unteach—nay, to use more arts
Than would outdo the devil of his throne,
To make us ignorant of all we know:
To take the heart to pieces carefully—
For it is love alone can build the heart—
To root the tree up 'neath whose shade we have lived,
And give us back a sliver. Let it die!

Elissa. Hark! he is coming.

Festus. No! He cannot come;
For I have driven an oath into his heart,
And I have hung a curse about his neck,
Might sink the prince of air into the centre.

Elissa. All I have done, I have done to save ourselves.

Festus. Then let us perish! But unless we sin
We cannot perish. Have! Have! cries a voice,
As of a crowd, within me. I would do aught
To throw this dark desire which wrestles with me.
It answers not to hold it at arms' length:
It must be hurled, dashed, trampled down.—I can't.
Lady! how long am I to love thee thus?
Never did angel love its Heavèn—nor king
Crown, as I thee.

Elissa. I feared how it would end.
Can nothing less than sinning sate the soul?
Can nothing but perdition serve to nest
Our hearts, after so sweet a flight of love?

Festus. The might and truth of hearts is never shown
But in loving those whom we ought not to love—
Or cannot have. The wrong, the suffering, is
Its own reward.

Elissa. Let me not wrong thee, Festus.
Let me not think I have thought too well of thee.
Be as thou wast! What will become of us?

Festus. Be mine! be me! be aught but so far from me!
Give me thyself! It is not enough for me
That I have gazed and doted on thee till
Mine eye is dazzled and my brain is dizzied:
Thou must exhaust all senses; not enough
That in long dreams my soul hath spread itself
Like water over every living line
Of this sweet make, dreaming thou wast all lips;
Nor that it now sinks in the face of thee,
Like a sea sunset, hot and tired with the long,
Long day of love:—it is not enough. I must Have more—have all! For I have sworn to fill
Mine arms with bliss—thus—thus—thus!

ss*
Elissa. Festus!

Lucifer, entering. Friend!

Did ye not know me? It was I who sang.

Elissa. It was he!

Festus. Thou —

Lucifer. Hush! thou art not to utter what

I am. Bethink thee; it was our covenant.

I said that I would see thee once again.

Elissa. Thou didst: and I must thank thee.

Lucifer. Hear me now!

Thou knowest well what once I was to thee:

One who for love of one I loved — for thee —

Would have done or borne the sins of all the world:

Who did thy bidding at thy lightest look;

And had it been to have snatched an angel's crown

Off her bright brow as she sat singing, throned,

I would have cut these heartstrings that tie down,

And let my soul have sailed to Heaven, and done it —

Spite of the thunder and the sacrilege,

And laid it at thy feet. I loved thee, lady!

I am one whose love was greater than the world's,

And might have vied with God's: a boundless ring,

All pressing on one point — that point thy heart.

And now — but shall I call on my revenge? —

It is at hand in armies. Thou art a woman;

And that is saying the best and worst of thee.

I know that vengeance is the part of God;

And can make myself almighty for the moment.
FESTUS.

For what? for nothing. Thou art utter nothing. Thus it was always with me when with thee; And I forget my purpose and my wrongs In looking and in loving. But I hate thee. To say that thou didst love me! Curse the air That bore the sound to me! Forgive me, God! If I blaspheme, it is not at Thee, but her. I'd not believe her were she saved in Heaven! There is no blasphemy in love but doubt; No sin, but to deceive.

Festus. Then is she sinless. She loved thee first—then me. What wouldst thou more? Thy heart's embrace, though close, was, snake-like, cold; And mine was warm, and, what is more, was welcome.

Lucifer. Patience! I spake not, cared not, thought not, of thee. Now I forgive thy having loved another; And I forgive—but never mind it now; I have forgiven so much, there is nothing left To make more words about: but, for the future, I will as soon attempt to entice a star To perch upon my finger, or the wind To follow me like a dog, as think to keep A woman's heart again. Answer me not! Let me say what I have to say and go. Thou art all will and passion; that is thine Excuse and condemnation.
While that will
Was love to thee, I saw no harm, nor thou.
And if my heart hath gained, it was not I
Who put it on — nor could it help going wrong.

Lucifer. Oh! I have heard, what rather than have heard,
I would have stopped mine ears with thunder: words
That have gone singing through my soul, like arrows
Through the air.

Elissa. I never will defend myself.
For I despise defence like accusation —
And now look down on them and thee together.

Lucifer. Now let us part, or I shall die of wrath.

Be my estrangement perfect as my love!

Elissa. Part, then!

Lucifer. Thank God it is for eternity!

Elissa. I do. Away!

Lucifer. Festus! I wait for thee.
I have fulfilled the word between us passed,
So far as is permitted me. Look back:
There is little unaccomplished.

Festus. One thing yet.

Lucifer. And that mayhap anon. Wouldst rather power
To sow in millions or in units reap?

Festus. Spirit, beyond compute, beyond compare,
Both I must have.

Lucifer. So then this mutual love
Must be put by, which is to neither gain,
Honor, nor need.

Festus. Well, I will think of it.

Lucifer. It is thought and said; and I will lead thee where
Thou shalt perceive earth spirit-wise, and know
All nature tributary.

Festus. That were well.
But come, thou art not the first deceived in love;
Yet love is not so much love as a dream,
Which hath, it seems, like guerdon with the thing—
The staring madness when we wake and find
That what we have loved, must love, is not that We meant to love. Perhaps I profited
Too much by thy good lessons.

Lucifer. Lady! ere
I hence, grant yet one favor. Take this rose,
Fresh from its parent stem; make much of it;
And as it fades, let all remembrance fade
Of him who gave.

Elissa. I cast it down at once.
The eagle needs no omens who himself
Is to all ominous; and not with me
Shall memory, like a whirlpool 'neath a fall,
Whose watery resurrection scares the bold,
Revolve the mangled moments of the past
In wearisome dissolution; no! at once—

Lucifer. The furies hint it, and the fates advise;
Like that! well, let it perish.
Go! I follow.

Lucifer, going. Now therefore would I wager, and I might
The great archangel's trump to a dog-whistle,
That whatsoever happens, worse ensues.

Festus. Forgive me, love, for having brought this on thee!

Elissa. The love which giveth all, forgiveth aught.
And thou art more to me than Earth or Heaven.
They have but given life: thou gavest me love,
The lord of life—thou, my life! love, and lord!
Take me again! my kindest—dearest—best!
Him who hath gone I never loved like thee.
There was a desolation in his eye
I could not brook to look on; for it seemed
As though it ate the light out of mine own.
I think that thou dost love me.

Festus. And I think,
For perfect love there should be but one god—
One worshipper.

Elissa. We know the gods of old
Worshipped each other—equal deities.
For the sweet poets surely spake the truth
About the gods; they dare not speak but truth.

Festus. Who but thyself would speak of poetry.
While thou art by? who art the very breathing
Beauty which bards may seek ideally.
And dost thou, then, believe the gods of old—
Those toys and playthings of an infant world?
FESTUS. If I do not believe, I do not scorn them; Nay, I could mourn for them and pray for them. I can scorn nothing which a nation's heart Hath held, for ages, holy: for the heart Is alike holy in its strength and weakness: It ought not to be jested with, nor scorned. All things, to me, are sacred that have been. And though earth, like a river, streaked with blood, Which tells a long and silent tale of death, May blush her history and hide her eyes, The past is sacred—it is God's, not ours. Let her and us do better if we can.

Festus. There are whole veins of diamonds in thine eyes, Might furnish crowns for all the queens of earth. Oh! I could sooner set a price on the sun, My love, than on thy lightest look. Look on me! Speak! if it only be to say thou wilt not. Look! I would rather look on thee one minute, Than paradise for a whole day—such days As are in Heaven. I love thee more and more.

Elissa. To love, and say we love—to suck the sting Out of the heart, and put its poison on The tongue.

Festus. Yet it is luxury to feel Inflamed—to glow within ourselves, like fire-opals. Now, stay thy pretty little tuneful tongue, Nor silver o'er thy syllables! They will not Pass. No, not one more word! I must away; I have staid too long, already, for my word.

Elissa. I cannot part with thee: nay, sit again! Parted from thee I feel like one half riven, And my soul acheth to spring to—as thus!

Festus. There! let me leave, love! let me loose these arms.

Another time, and, ah! well—never mind! We shall be happier—I know we shall.

Thou hast been mine—thou art mine—and thou shalt be!

My parting gift thou wilt not, sweet, refuse, Nor would I proffer aught which emblemed less Than life celestial and the light divine.

Expect me ere it wither; ere the scent, Sweet effluence of its perfectness of leaf, Hath fled its starry censer, look for me. Let the death-destined perish. We shall live.

Elissa. My life is one long loving thought of thee.

If any ask me what I do, I could say I love, and that is all.

Festus. It is enough.

One kiss! another! one more—there! farewell!

Elissa. And he is gone! and the world seems gone with him.

Shine on, ye Heavens! why can ye not impart Light to my heart? Have ye no feeling in ye? Why are ye bright when I am so unhappy?
But Oh! I would not change my woes for thrice
The bliss of others, since they are for thee, love.
Our very wretchedness grows dear to us
When suffering for one we love. Sweet stars!
I cannot look upon your loveliness
Without sadness, for ye are too beautiful;
And beauty makes unhappy: so men say.
Ye stars! it is true—we read our fate in ye.
Bright through all ages, are ye not happy there?
With years, many as your light-rays, are ye not Immortal? Space-pervading, Oh! ye must be,
Spirit-like, infinite. All-being God!
Who art in all things, and in whom all are!—
And it is thus we worship Thee the most;
When heart to heart with one we love we are gods;—
Let us believe that if Thou gavest earth
For our bodies, then the stars were for our souls;
For perfect beauty and unbounded love!
Let us believe they look upon us here
As their inheritors, and save themselves
For us, as we for Thee, and Thou for all!

Scene—The Sun.

Festus. Soul of the world, divine Necessity,
Servant of God, and master of all things!
Here, in the Heaven of Light's eternal noon,
First see I all things clear: from end to end
The divine cycle of the soul of man;
How spirit, soul, mind, life, flesh, feeling, mix,
And how withal they each reciprocate,
As ocean, earth, air, fire, and wind; how flow
The streams of feeling, and the cataracts
Of passion; mine and mountain, this of pride,
And that of covetousness. Man I know;
The human universe, and the divine
And central fate; know all must be fulfilled
Of nature that there is; of sin and strife,
Peace, righteousness, change, self-delusion, self-
Destruction, ere the earth can take new life,
Or man become the minister of God.
The world and man are just reciprocal,
Yet contrary. Spirit invadeth sense,
And carries captive Nature. Be this true,
All good is Heaven, and all ill is Hell.
All things are means for greater good. Thou, Sun!
Art just a giant slave, a god in bonds.
The summit-flower of all created life
Is its unition with Divinity,
In essence, yet existence separate.
High o'er my own existence, here then I
Look down upon the nature and the earth,
Yet mine, whose separate and combined ends
Have still to be evolved. How wide men miss,
While in the lower world of soul and sense,
In aiming even at life-ruling truth—
Formless as air, simple and one as Death.
If Heaven and all its stars depend on Earth,
Then may eternity on time; —not else.
But since now Earth is as a crum of Heaven,
And time an atom of eternity,
Neither depends upon the other, both
One essence being emanant from God,
Whose flowings forth are aye and infinite,
And radiant as the rivers of the skies.
One only truth hath consequence — God's truth
Inspirited in man. Mere human truth
Or falsehood matters not. The world may act,
Believe, or bless, or curse, as best it lists.
Yet men expend life, solemnizing points
Uncertain as the site of Paradise
And area of Hades. Not the less,
There is no disappointment we endure
One half so great as that we are to ourselves.
We make our hearts the centres of all hopes,
All powers, all rewards, remembering not
That centres are imaginary points.
Imaginary circles only too
Are perfect; therefore, draw life as we may,
Round as a world or as an atom round,
And pure as virgin visionary's dream,
Or perfect faith's regenerative wave —
It fails to match the true invisible
Whereof we labor. It is come to this.
One state of life with me hath passed away.
Aught henceforth that may matter be of doubt
To me is matter of indifference. I
Love only that is certain. Me no more
The spirits of the bright invisible
Shall throng round as the winds some mountain top;
Nor watery lightfulness of ghostly eyes,
Belonging heavenly forms informed with light,
Impose their spell of record under pain.
The inspiration quits me—it is gone—
Like a retreating army from the land
Which it hath wasted—the long gleaming mass,
Snakelike, at last hath wound itself away,
And left me weak and wretched. None again
Of all the starry tribes of shining mien—
Swifter than undulations of the light,
A million in a moment, multiform
As atomies of air—shall visit me;
Their word of leave is taken back—henceforth,
Restricted to perfection, earth they quit.
True, albeit, I loved them more than life;
I felt myself made sacred by their touch:—
But they are gone, and there is nought on earth
Left acceptable. Fiery shadows, hence!
I have outbraved ye once. It matters not.
I have left all for one; Truth's countless rays
For Truth itself; the mean for the supreme,
The dubitable for the thronéd power.
Yet thus I cannot rest. The mightiest sphere
Is not for man. The elements of mind
And matter are proportioned in all worlds;
FESTUS.

The father they and mother of all things.
And earth hath favor over crowds of stars.
I must reseek earth. Still what boots it now,
To plunge in pleasure or to passion bow,
The very lion-honey of the heart
Which dwelleth in corruption? Yet, perchance,
'Twere wisdom to extract it while we may.
The oak, as lily, feels the lightest breeze.
The ineradicable seed is sown
Of love in life, and, tide-like, 'twill have way
O'er the impalaced prisoner of the breast.
The thirst for power and knowledge still exists,
And meets with dizzy mixture in the brain.
If suffering could expiate offence,
They who have most enjoyed have most atoned,
It may be, humanly;—but it cannot.
Earth-like, the heart must undergo all change
Ere the superior life be formed therein,
The chastity of heart which loves but God.
Life's sensuous warmth, the spirit's holy chill,
Time's week-day work, have yet to be gone through.
The hortus siccus of a paradise
Is all earth now can boast. To God belongs
The autumn of all nature. But, alas!
Not yet can we o'ercome our nature here,
Would we. If therefore passion strike the heart,
Let it have length of line and plenteous play.
The safety of superior principles
Lies in exhaustion of the lower ones,
However vast or violent. Men and angels
Obey the order of existence. Fate!
Who seeks thee every where will find thee there.

Scene — Garden and Bower by the Sea.

Elissa, alone. Come, Festus, let me think on thee, my love!
And fold the thought of thee unto my soul,
Until it fills it and is one with it.
Ah! these poor arms are far from where they should be;
And this heart farther still. Mine only love!
Why art thou thus so long away from me?
I have whispered it unto the southern wind,
And charged it with my love: why should it not
Carry that love to thee as air bears light?
And thou hast said I was all light to thee.
The stars grow bright together, and for aye,
Lover-like, watch each other; and though apart,
Like us, they fill each other's eyes with love
And beauty: and mine only fill with tears.
Oh! life is less than nothing without love!
And what is love without the embrace of love?
I would give worlds for one more, ere I die.
Festus! come to me. I do think I am dying.
Let me bequeath my life to thee, that so,
In doubling thine, I may live alway with thee.
I know that I am dying. It is my heart
Which makes me live that kills me. But I want
To see him ere I do die. Oh! he will come!
He must know how I love him. It is long—
Long since I saw him: I am ill with waiting.
And I will fancy him coming to me now—
Now he is thinking of me, loving me—
He sees me—flies to me, half out of breath—
His hand is on my arm—he looks on me—
And puts my long locks backwards—God! Thy ban
Lies upon waking dreams. To weep and sleep—
Dream—wake, and find one's only one hope false,—
Is what we can bear, for we do endure it,
And bear with Heaven still. Just one year ago,
I watched that large bright star where it is now:—
Time hath not touched its everlasting lightning,
Nor dimmed the glorious glances of its eye—
Nor passion clouded it—nor any star
Eclipsed—it is the leader still of Heaven.
And I who loved it then can love it now;
But am not what I was, in one degree.
Calm star! who was it named thee Lucifer,
From him who drew the third of Heaven down with him?
Oh! it was but the tradition of thy beauty!
For if the sun hath one part, and the moon one,
Thou hast the third part of the host of Heaven—
Which is its power—which power is its beauty!
Lucifer. It was no tradition, lady, but of truth!
Elissa. I thought we parted last to meet no more.
Lucifer. It was so, lady; but it is not so.
Elissa. Am I to leave, or thou, then?
Lucifer. Neither, yet.
I mean that thou shouldst fear me, and obey.
Elissa. And who art thou that I should fear and serve?
Lucifer. I am the morning and the evening star,
The star thou lovest, and thy lover too;
I am that star! as once before I told thee,
Though thou wouldst not believe me, but I am
A spirit, and a star—a power—an ill
Which doth outbalance being. Look at me!
Am I not more than mortal in my form?
Millions of years have circled round my brow,
Like worlds upon their centres;—still I live;
And age but presses with a halo's weight.
This single arm hath dashed the light of Heaven;
This one hand dragged the angels from their thrones.
Am I not worthy to have loved thee, lady?
Thou mortal model of all heavenliness!
And yet I have abandoned all these spoils,
Cowered my powers, and becalmed my course,
And stooped from the high destruction of the skies
For thee, and for the youth who loveth thee—
And is lost with thee: ye are both, both—lost!
Thou hast but served the purpose of the Fiend.
And thou art but the vessel of the sin
Whose poison hath made drunk a soul to death;
And he hath drunk; and thou art useless now.
And it is for this I come—to bid thee die!

Elissa. I said that I was dying. God is good.
The Heavens grow darker as they grow the purer
And both, as we do near them; so, near death,
The soul grows darker and diviner, hourly.
Could I love less I should be happier!
But it is always to that mad extreme,
That death alone appears the fitting finish
To bliss like that my spirit presses for.

Lucifer. Thy death shall be as gentle as thy life.
I will not hurt thee, for I loved thee once.
And thy sweet love, upon my burning breast,
Fell like a snowflake on a fevered lip.
Thy soul shall pass out of thee like a dream.
One moment more, and thou shalt wake in Heaven!

Elissa. I ever thought thee to be more than mortal.
And if thou art thus mighty, grant me this?—
Since now we love no more—as friend to friend—
Bring him I love, one moment, ere I die.

Lucifer. Thou judgest well; I am all but almighty.
And I have stretched my strength unto its limits
To satisfy the heart of him who loves thee:
In proof whereof, did I not give up thee,
Because he loved thee? I have given him all things
Body or spirit could desire or have.
And even, at this moment, now he reigns
King of the sun, and monarch of the seven
Orbs that surround him — leaving earth alone —
The earth is in good keeping as it is.
I know that he is hasting hither now;
But may not see thee living.

Elissa. It is not thou
Who takest life: it is God, whose I shall be! —
And his, with God, whom here my heart deifies.
I glory in his power as in his love.
But I will, will see him, while I am alive.
I hear him — he is come — it is he! it is he!

Lucifer. Die! thou shalt never look on him again.

Elissa. My love! haste, Festus! I am dying —

Lucifer. Dead!

A word could kill her. She hath gone to Heaven.

Festus. Fiend! what is this? Elissa! — she is not dead.

Lucifer. She is. I bade her die, as I had reason.

Festus. Now do I hate thee and renounce forever! —

Abhor thee — go!

Lucifer. Who seeks the other first?

I am gone.

Festus. Away, Fiend! Leave me! My Elissa!
Scene—A Library and Balcony—A Summer Night.

Festus, alone. The last high upward slant of sun on the trees,
Like a dead soldier's sword upon his pall,
Seems to console earth for the glory gone.
Oh! I could weep to see the day die thus;
The death bed of a day, how beautiful!
Linger, ye clouds, one moment longer there;
Fan it to slumber with your golden wings!
Like pious prayers ye seem to soothe its end.
It will wake no more till the all-revealing day;
When, like a drop of water, greatened bright
Into a shadow, it shall show itself
With all its little tyrannous things and deeds,
Unhomed and clear. The day hath gone to God,—
Straight, like an infant's spirit, or a mocked
And mourning messenger of grace to man.
Would it had taken me, too, on its wing!
My end is nigh. Would I might die outright!
And slip the coil without waiting it unwind.
So o'er the sunset clouds of red mortality
The emerald hues of deathlessness diffuse
Their glory, heightening to the starry blue
Of all imbosoming eternity.
Who that hath lain lonely on a high hill,
In the imperious silence of full noon,
With nothing but the clear dark sky about him,—
Like God's hand laid upon the head of earth,—
But hath expected that some natural spirit
Should start out of the universal air—
And, gathering his cloudy robe around him,
As one in act to teach mysterious things,
Explain that he must die?—that having got
As high as earth can lift him up—as far
Above that thing, the world, as flesh can mount—
Over the tyrant wind, and the clouded lightning,
And the round rainbow—and that having gained
A loftier and a more mysterious beauty
Of feeling—something like a starry darkness
Seizing the soul—say he must die—and vanish?
Who hath not, at such moments, felt, as now
I feel, that, to be happy, we must die?
And here I rest—above the world and its ways;
The wind, opinion—and the rainbow, beauty—
And the thunder, superstition—I am free
Of all;—save death, what want I to be happy?
And shall I leave no trace, then, of my life?
The soul begetteth shadows of itself
Which do outlive their author; and are more
Substantial than all nature, and the red
Realities of flesh and blood, as echo
Is longer, louder, farther than the voice
Of man can thunder, or his ear report.
And oft the world hath deified its echoes.
A year!—and who shall find them? Can it be
The mind's works have been deathless—not the mind?
Or will the world's immortals die with me?—
The sages, and the heroes, and the bards,—
Whose verse, set to the thunder of the seas,
Seems as immortal as their ceaseless music!
O God! I fain would deem Thou livest not:
And that this world hath sprung up from chance seed,
Unknown to Thee; and is not reckoned on.
Hell solves all doubts.—Come to me, Lucifer!

LUCIFER. Lo! I am here: and ever prompt when called for.

How speed thy general pleasures?

FESTUS. Bravely! Joys
Are bubble-like—what makes them, bursts them, too.
And like the milky way, there! dim with stars,
The soul which numbers most will shine the less.

LUCIFER. No matter—mind it not!

FESTUS. Yet, joys of earth!
That ye should ruin spirits is too hard.
Who can avoid ye? who can say ye nay?
Or take his eyes from off ye? who so chaste?

LUCIFER. They have well nigh unimmortalized myself.

FESTUS. Yet have they nought to sate the pining spirit
Which doth enamor immortality.
No! they are all base, impure, ruinous—
The harlots of the heart. Forgive me, God!
I am getting too forlorn to live—too waste.
Aught that I can or do love shoots by me
Like a train upon an iron road. And yet
I need not now reproach mine arm or aim;
For I have winged each pleasure as it flew,
How swift or high soever in its flight.
We cannot live alone. The heart must have
A prop without, or it will fall and break.
But nature's common joys are common cheats.
As he who sails southwards beholds, each night,
New constellations rise, all clear, and fair;
So, o'er the waters of the world, as we Reach the mid zone of life, or go beyond,
Beauty and bounty still beset our course;
New beauties wait upon us every where;
New lights enlighten and new worlds attract.
But I have seen and I have done with all.
Friendship hath passed me like a ship at sea;
And I have seen no more of it. I had
A friend with whom, in boyhood, I was wont
To learn, think, laugh, weep, strive, and love, together;
For we were alway rivals in all things—
Together up high springy hills, to trace
A runnel to its birthplace — to pursue
A river — to search, haunt old ruined towers,
And muse in them — to scale the cloud-clad hills
While thunders murmured in our very ear;
To leap the lair of the live cataract,
And pray its foaming pardon for the insult;
To dare the broken tree-bridge across the stream;
To crouch behind the broad white waterfall,
Tongue of the glen, like to a hidden thought—
Dazzled, and deafened, yet the more delighted;
To reach the rock which makes the fall and pool;
There to feel safe, or not to care if not;
To fling the free foot over my native hills,
Which seemed to breathe the bracing breeze we loved
The more it lifted up our loosened locks,
That nought might be between us and the skies;
Or, hand in hand, leap, laughing, with closed eyes,
In Trent's death-loving deeps; yet was she kind
Ever to us; and bare us buoyant up,
And followed our young strokes, and cheered us on—
Even as an elder sister bending above
A child, to teach it how to order its feet—
As quick we dashed, in reckless rivalry,
To reach, perchance, some long green floating flag—
Just when the sun's hot lip first touched the stream,
Reddening to be so kissed; and we rejoiced,
As breasting it on we went over depth and death,
Strong in the naked strife of elements,
Toying with danger in as little fear
As with a maiden's ringlets. And oft, at night,
Bewildered and bewitched by favorite stars,
We would breathe ourselves amid unfooted snows,
For there is poetry where aught is pure;
Or over the still dark heath leap along, like harts,
Through the broad moonlight; for we felt where'er
We leaped the golden gorse, or lowly ling,
We could not be from home. — That friend is gone.
There's the whole universe before our souls.
Where shall we meet next? Shall we meet again?
Oh! might it be in some far happy world,
That I may light upon this lonely soul,
Hard by some broad blue stream, where high the hills,
Wood-bearded, sweep to its brink — musing, as wont,
With lovelike sadness, upon sacred things;
For much in youth we loved and mused on them.
To say what ought to be to human wills,
And measure morals sternly; to explore
The bearings of men's duties and desires;
To note the nature and the laws of mind;
To balance good with evil, and compare
The nature and necessity of each;
To long to see the ends and end of things;
Or, if no end there be, the endless, then,
As suns look into space; these were our joys —
Our hopes — our meditations — our attempts.
And if I have enjoyed more love than others,
It is but superior suffering, and is more
Than balanced by the loss of one we love.
And love, itself, hath passed. One fond, fair girl
Remains; one only, and she loves me still.
But it is not love I feel — it is pure kindness.
How shall I find another like my last?
The golden and the gorgeous loveliness —
A sunset beauty! Ah! I saw it set.
My heart, alas! set with it. I have drained
Life of all love, as doth an iron rod
The Heavens of lightning; I have done with it,
And all its waking woes, and dreamed-of joys.
No more shall beauty star the air I live in;
And no more will I wake at dead of night,
And hearken to the roaring of the wind,
As though it came to carry one away —
Claiming for sin. Ah! I am lost forever.
To earn the world's delights by equal sins
Seems the great aim of life — the aim succeeds.
Here it is madness, and perdition there.
And, but for thee, I had renounced these joys —
These cursed joys my soul now writhes among,
Like to a half-crushed reptile on a rose: —
Ay, but for thee, I might have now been happy!

LUCIFER. Why charge, why wrong me thus?

When first I knew thee,
I deemed it thine ambition to be damned.
Thine every thought, almost, had gone from good,
As far as finite is from infinite;
And then thou wast as near to me as now.
Thou hadst declined in worship, and in wish
To please thy God; nor wouldst thou e'er repent.
What more need I to justify attempt?

uu*
FESTUS.

Have I shrunk back from granting aught I promised?

Festus. Thy love of knowledge—is that satisfied?

Thy love of knowledge—is that satisfied?

Festus. It is. Yet knowledge is a doubtful boon—

Root of all good and fruit of all that's bad.

I have caused face to face with elements,

Yea, learned the luminous language of the skies,

And the angelic kindred of high Heaven;

The bright articulations of all spheres,—

Impetuous hearted orbs, and mountain-maned,

Aye circling onwards breathless through the air—

And wisest stars which speak themselves in signs

Too sacred to be explicable here;

And now what better am I?—nearer God?

When the void finds a voice mine answer know.

Lucifer. What better or what worse thou canst not tell.

For, good and evil! Wherein differ they?

Do they not both accrue from the same cause,—

As ripeness and decay? Light, light alone

Of hues, how contrary soever, is

The common cause.

Festus. Distracter of God's truth!

Shall not His word suffice the living world?

Lucifer. Thou canst not have lacked joys?

Festus. We seek them oft

Among our own delusions, pains, and follies.
FESTUS. 559

Lucifer. Hath not care perished from thy heart, as did
The viper flung from the apostle's hand?
Festus. Ay; and, like that, all care will cease in fire.

Dark wretched thoughts, like ice-isles in a stream,
Choke up my mind, and clash;—and to no end.
In spite of all we suffer and enjoy,
There comes this question, over and over again,
Driven into the brain as a pile is driven—
What shall become of us hereafter? what
Is it we shall do? how feel, how be?
And there are times when burning memory flows
In on the mind, that saving it would slay,
As did the lava floods which choked of yore
The Cyclopean cities—brimming up,
Brass-like, their mighty moulds. And shall the past,
Thus ruinously perfect, aye remain;
Or present, past, and coming, all be one,
In natural mystery? Like snow which lies
Down-wreathed round the lips of some black pit,
Thoughts which obscure the truth accumulate,
And those which solve it in it lose themselves;
And there is no true knowledge till descent,
Nor then till after. What shall make the truth Visible?
Through the smoky glass of sense
The blessed sun would never know himself.
All truth is one. All error is alike.
The shadow of a mountain hath no more
Substance than hath a dead and moss-mailed pine’s;
But only more gigantic impotence.
Were act mind’s mate, man had a firm hold now
On the immortal future; but we turn
From either skyey end, star-garlanded,
Teeming with light, and from the spirit truths,
Which crown all worlds to gauds and lures of life
All-formed, and beauty’s eyes inspired with tears,
Or fired with mirth conclusive, and so lose
Count of those heavenly spheres we meant at first
To reckon to the last atomic light.
But how shall these the joys and cares of earth
And life’s vain schemes appear to the great soul,
Which hath no friend, no equal, save the world;
When all these constellated systems known
To the keen ken of science, space’s depths,
And the whole mighty Heavens that bind us in,
Hang like a pale speck, doubtful to the eye
In unimagined distance? Is it thus
Ordered of God, lest man’s weak powers should fail,
And the round wall of madness pound us in?
Yea, then the cares, toils, duties, needs of life
Are blessings in the highest to the world.
Eternity! thou holdest in thy hand
The casket of all secrets; death the key.
And now what seem I even to myself?
The impulse of life ceaseth, and we live
On the rebound of being, less and less,
Till the minute momentum wholly ends.
As some vain wind, which, having wasted life
In rounding mountains, and their shadowy woods
Made lyre-like vocal, dies at last at sea,
The sun sole witness, where deep brooding spreads
The uttermost circumference of a calm;
So the soul, struggling through life's death-clouds, ends
In the serene Eternal. May it be!

Lucifer. No life is waste in the great Worker's hand.
The gem, too poor to polish in itself,
Is ground to brighten others. Courage, friend!
Hast thou not had thine every quest?

Festus. Save one.

Lucifer. I proffer now the power which thou dost long for.
Say but the word, and thou shalt press a throne
But less than mine—the scarcely less than God's;—
A throne, at which earth's puny potentates
May sue for slavedoms—and be satisfied.

Festus. I have had enough of the infinities;
I am moderate now. I will have the throne of earth.

Lucifer. Thou shalt. Yet, mind!—with that the world must end.

Festus. I can survive.

Lucifer. Nay, die with it must thou.

Festus. Why should I die? I am egg-full of life;
And life's as serious a thing as death.
The world is in its first young quarter yet;

71
I dare not, cannot, credit it shall die.
I will not have it, then.

Lucifer. It matters not;
I know thou never wilt have ease at heart
Until thou hast thy soul's whole, full desire;
Whenever that may happen, all is done.
Once again, therefore, search the scroll of life;
Mark what is done, what undone. Lo! in love,
Already twice hath judgment passed upon thee.
Say, hath not evil wrought its own revenge,
And death the only guerdon thou hast gained?
Let then mere self-life cease. The heart's career
Is ended. With the world thy part is now.
The depths of feeling, passion, pleasure, woe,
The mysteries and dread delights of spirit,
All thou hast sounded. Now behooves to live
The world life of the future—last the same
One instant or forever. Bury love.
The steed-like world stands ready. Mount for life.

Festus. Well, then—be it now! I live but for myself—
The whole world but for me. Friends, loves, and all
I sought, abandon me. It is time to die.
I am yet young; yet have I been deserted,
And wronged, by those whom most I have loved and served.
Sun, moon, and stars! may they all fall on me
When next I trust another—man or woman.
Earth rivals Hell too often, at the best.
All hearts are stronger for the being hollow;
And that was why mine was no match for theirs.
The pith is out of it now.—Lord of the world!
It will not directly perish?

Lucifer. Not, perhaps.—
Thou wilt have all fame, while thou livest, now.

Festus. I care not; fame is folly; for it is, sure,
Far more to be well known of God than man.
With all my sins I feel that I am God's.

Lucifer. Farewell, then, for a time!

Festus. I am alone.—

Alone? He clings around me like the clouds
Upon a hill. When will the clouds roll off?
When will the sun visit me? O! Thou great God!
In whose right hand the elements are atoms—
In whose eye, light and darkness but a wink—
Who, in Thine anger, like a blast of cold,
Dost make the mountains shake like chattering teeth—

Have mercy! Pity me! For it is Thou
Who hast fixed me to this test. Wilt Thou not save?

Forgive me, Father! but I long to die:—
I long to live to Thee, a pure, free mind.
Take again, God! and thou, fair Earth, the form
And spirit which, at first, ye lent to me.
S—ch as they were, I have used them. Let them part.
I weary of this world; and like the dove,
Urged o'er life's barren flood, sweep, tired, back
To Thee who sent'st me forth. Bear with me, God!
I am not worthy of Thy wrath, nor love!—
Oh! that the things which have been were not now
In memory's resurrection! But the past
Bears in her arms the present and the future:
And what can perish while perdition is?
From the hot, angry, crowding courts of doubt
Within the breast, it is sweet to escape, and soothe
The soul in looking upon natural beauty.
Oh! earth, like man her son, is half divine.
There is not a leaf within this quiet spot
But which I seem to know; should miss, if gone.
I could run over its features, hour by hour.
The quaintly figured beds — the various flowers —
The mazy paths all cunningly converged —
The black yew hedge, like a beleaguering host,
Round some fair garden province — here and there,
The cloud-like laurel clumps sleep, soft and fast,
Pillowed by their own shadows — and beyond,
The ripe and ruddy fruitage — the sharp firs' Fringe, like an eyelash, on the faint-blue west —
The white owl, wheeling from the gray old church,—
Its age-peeled pinnacles, and tufted top —
The oaks, which spread their broad arms in the blast,
And bid storms come, and welcome; there they stand,
To whom a summer passes like a smile:—
And the proud peacock towers himself there, and screams,
Ruffling the imperial purples of his neck.
O'er all, the giant poplars, which maintain Equality with clouds half way up Heaven;
Which whisper with the winds none else can see,
And bow to angels as they wing by them;—
The lonely, bowery, woodland view before—
And, making all more beautiful, thou, sweet moon,
Leading slow pomp, as triumphing o'er Heaven!
High riding in thy loveless, deathless brightness,
And in thy cold, unconquerable beauty,
As though there were nothing worthy in the world Even to lie below thee, face to God.
And Night, in her own name, and God's, again Hath dipped the earth in dew;—and there she lies, Even like a heart all trembling with delight,
Till passion murder power to speak—so mute.
Young maiden moon! just looming into light—
I would that aspect never might be changed;
Nor that fine form, so spirit-like, be spoiled
With fuller light. Oh! keep that brilliant shape;
Keep the delicious honor of thy youth,
Sweet sister of the sun, more beauteous thou Than he sublime. Shine on, nor dread decay;
It may take meaner things: but thy bright look, Smiling away an immortality,
Assures it us—nay, it seems, half, to give.
Earth may decease. God will not part with thee,
Fair ark of light, and every blessedness!
Yes, earth, this earth, may foul the face of life,
Like some swart mole on beauty's breast—or dead,
Stiff, mangled reptile some clear well—while thou
Shalt shine, aye brilliant, on creation's corse,
Like to a diamond on a dead man's hand;
Whence God shall pluck thee to His breast, or bid
Beam mid His lightning locks. What are earth's joys
To watching thee, tending thy bright flock over
The fields of Heaven? Thy light misleadeth not,
Though eyes which image Heaven oft lure to Hell:—
Thy smile betrayeth not—though sweet as that
Which wins and damns. Mother, and maid of light!
That, like a God, redeems the world to Heaven—
Making us one with thee, and with the sun,
And with the stars in glory—lovely moon!
I am immortal as thyself; and we Shall look upon each other yet, in Heaven,
Often—but never, nevermore on earth.
Am I to die so soon? This death!—the thought
Comes on my heart as through a burning glass.
I cannot bend mine eyes to earth, but thence
It riseth, spectre-like, to mock—nor towards
The west, where sunset is, whose long bright pomp
Makes men in love with change—but there it lowers
Eve's last, still lingering, darkening cloud; and on
The escutcheon of the morn, it is there—it is there!
But fears will come upon the bravest mind,
Like the white moon upon the crimson west.
I have attractions for all miseries;
And every course of thought within my heart
Leaves a new layer of woe. But it must end.
It will all be one, hereafter. Let it be;
My bosom, like the grave, holds all quenched passions.

It is not that I have not found, what I sought—
But, that the world—tush! I shall see it die.
I hate, and shall outlive, the hypocrite.
Stealthily, slowly, like the polar sun,
Who peeps by fits above the air-walled world,—
The heavenly fief he knows and feels his own,—
My heart o'erlooks the paradise of life
Which it hath lost, in cold, reluctant joy.
I live and see all beauteous things about me,
But feel no nature prompting from within
To meet and profit by them. I am like
That fabled forest of the Apennine
Which leafless lives; whereto the spring's bright showers,
Summer's heat breathless, autumn's fruitful juice,
Nothing avail—nor winter's killing cold.
Yet have I done, said, thought, in time now past,
What, rather than remember, I would die,
Or do again. It is the thinking on't,
And the repentance, maddens. I have thought
Upon such things so long and grievously,
My lips have grown like to a cliff-chafed sea,
Pale with a tidal passion; and my soul,
Once high and bright, and self-sustained as Heaven,
Unsettled now for life or death, feels like
The gray gull balanced on her bow-like wings,
Between two black waves, seeking where to dive.
Long we live thinking nothing of our fate,
For in the morn of life we mark it not—
It falls behind: but as our day goes down,
We catch it lengthening with a giant's stride,
And ushering us unto the feet of night.
Dark thoughts, like spots upon the sun, revolve
In troops for days together round my soul,
Disfiguring and dimming. Death! O Death!
The past, the present, and the future, like
The dog three-headed, by the gates of woe
Sitting, seem ready to devour me each.
I dare not look on them. I dare not think.
The very best deeds I have ever done
Seem worthy reprobation; have to be
Repented of. But have I done aught good?
Oh that my soul were calmer! Grant me, God!
Thy peace; that added, I can smile and die.
Thy Spirit only is reality:
All things beside are folly, falsehood, shame.
Scene—Colonnade and Lawn.

Festus and Clara.

Clara. At thy desire I come, though hard to me. We have lived separate lives, unlike, unsought Each by the other. Wherefore meet we now? Time was it was not thus. But others came Whose tyrant beauty and more soaring souls Thee dazzled, me eclipsed. Already years Have passed since first we were what now we are, Strangers.

Festus. Nay, by the sun! I swear it—never so; However distant. Oftentimes it is The irresistible weakness of ourselves Which overcometh more than others' strength. Oft hath this heart, allured by glittering rites, And sacred titles, and celestial names, Offered at others' altars, and decreed Wildly, profanely, negligence of thine;— True, I have worshipped idols, and forsworn The loving faith I owed to thee alone;— Canst thou forgive? reconsecrate the heart, Rededicate the temple? Do not all Beliefs, how far soever from God's truth, Circle around the same, in mode prescribed, As round Heaven's secret and all-central sun The constellated skies? And shall then love
Lack like justification, or in vain
Plead the necessity of liberty? —
For truly I was destined to this end,
And in myself believed the most at first.
Faith first and last, immortal love and hope,
Which in the breast dies of reality,
Be each the gracious tenant of this heart.
The love which with the spiritual starts,
Weakening and darkening, strained through gloom and gleam,
Sets oft enough in sense, but ever ends
In its original heavenly purity.
And mortal knowledge, which is error, dies;
And spiritual truth alone outlasts
All nature; love insensibly with Heaven
Here blending, thither wending, thence derived.
Who knows himself in spirit, all things knows,
Above, beneath, around, within himself;
The orb of life owned space, from pole to pole
The horizon of existence. Yea, so far
As nature means, the atom and the all
Commune and know each other, as the slant
Invisible axis of the earth, too fine
For fairy to find footing tiptoe, bears
All superincumbent continents and seas,
Mountains and air-realms. Said I not my soul
Had taken up its freedom, and assumed
The birthright of creation?

Clara. Truly so.
Festus. And, holding in itself the omnitude
Of being, God-endowed, it doth become
World-representative?

Clara. Well, be it thus.

Festus. Thus versant with an absolute life, the spirit
Makes towards its end and great reward, in peace,
O'erpassing all earth's lesser joys.

Clara. Say on!

I would not have thy soul abase itself
By one thought about me.

Festus. Nay, speak not so.

But love's career is over in my heart.
A vaster sphere expands before me. Power
And knowledge I can give thee for thy love,
But scarce repay in kind.

Clara. I hear thy words.
The fragrance of the flower of life is fled;—
Still let it linger where thou laidst it—here!

Festus. It is I who suffer. Suffer therefore me
While I am with thee. The sole love, I feel
That might have blessed me—but why now? what eye
Can see the circuit of an orb at once?
The orb of life, alas! is on the wane.
And much must yet be said, much yet be done.
I cannot tell thee all I know, nor dare;
For wisdom seals the lips which wonder opes.
The dread initiation into light
Saddens the soul it hallows and expands.
But thou, because thou knowest much of truth—

Clara. What is it thou wilt tell me?

Festus. I have seen
What ne'er again may be, nor e'er till now hath been.

Clara. Where didst thou see—and what?

Festus. In space. He took me there,
Of whom I oft have told thee. Midst in air
Was God. I'll tell thee that He told the spheres;
For the great family of the universe
Round Him were gathered as a fire: but we Held back; and, saving God, none did us see;
Though round His throne in sunny halo rolls
A ceaseless, countless throng of sainted souls.

Clara. Say on, love! Let me hear.

Festus. A sound, then, first
I heard, as of a pent-up flood just burst:
It was the rush of God's world-winnowing wing,
Which bowed the orbs as flowers are bowed by breath of spring.
And then a voice I heard, a voice sublime—
To which the hoarded thunders of all time,
Pealing earth's death-knell, shall a whisper be—
Saying these words: Where will ye worship me?
Ay, where shall be your Maker's holy place?
The Heaven of Heavens is poor before His face.
How shall ye mete my temple, ye who die?
Look! can ye span your God's infinity?
Hear, mighty universe, thy Maker's voice!
Let all thy myriad, myriad worlds rejoice!
Lo! I, your Maker, do amid ye come,
To choose my worship, and to name my home.
This heard each sphere; and all throughout the sky
Came crowding round. Our earth was rolling by,
When God said to it—Rest! And fast it stood.
With voice like winds through some wild, olden wood,
Thus spake the One again: Behold, O Earth!
Thy parent, God! it is I who gave thee birth.
With all my love I did thee once endow;
With all my mercy—and thou hast them now.
But hear my words! thou never lovedst me well,
Nor fearest my wrath: dreadst thou no longer Hell?
Dream'st thou that guilt shall alway mock those fires?
That deathless death which Hell for aye expires?
Should all creation its rebellion raise,
I speak, and this broad universe doth blaze—
Pass like a dew-drop 'neath mine angry rays—
Blaze like the fat in sacrificial flame:
And that burnt-offering, when I come to claim,
Its scorching, quenchless mass, all, I will pour
Upon thy naked soul:—canst thou endure
He spake; and, as the fear-fraught words flew past,
Earth fluttered like a dead leaf in their blast.
Am not I God? Answer me! Hope not thou,
Impenitent, to ward my righteous blow.
Yet, come again! my proffered mercy hear!
Rejoice and sing! sweet music in thine ear,
And peace, I speak: seek but to be forgiven:
Repent! and thou shalt meet thy God in Heaven.
Go! cleanse thy brow from blood, thy heart from crime,
And on thy Savior call while yet is time!
Now to this universe of pride and sin
I speak, ere yet I call mine angels in.
Draw nigh, ye worlds!—and lo! their light did seem
Before His eye paled to a pearl's dull beam.
Attend! said God—o'er all He lifts His hand.—
Where will ye set my tent? where shall my temple stand?
And all were dumb. Distracting silence spread
Throughout that host as each were stricken dead.
I made ye. I endowed ye. Ye are mine.
Then trembled out each orb: Thine, God! forever Thine!
All that ye have, within myself have I;
God, am complete; full inexhaustibly.
I dwell within myself, and ye in me,
Not in yourselves; I have infinity.
The every thing in all things is my throne;
Your might is my might, and your wealth mine own:
'Tis by my power and sufferance that ye shine;
I live in light, and all your light is mine.
Be dark! said God. Night was. Each glowing sphere
Dulled. Night seemed every thing and every where,
Save that in utter space a feeble flare
Told that the pits of Hell were sunken there.
Shuddered in fear the universe the while,
Till God again embraced it with a smile.
Divine delight responsive spread through space;
Till, like a serious smile, whose gradual grace
Expands its soul-born sunshine o'er the face,
Lo! all things made were glad. Come now and hear,
Ye worlds! said God, the truth I thus make clear:
My words are mercy, wherefore should ye fear?
And straight, obedient to his sacred will,
One great concentrate globe they crowd to fill;
Systems and suns pour forth their glowing urns;
Full in the face of God the glory burns.
Hearken, thou host! thy trembling hope to raise,
I to all being thus make plain my ways:—
God, the Creator, bade creation rise,
And matter came in void like clouds in skies;
Lifeless and cold it spread throughout all space,
And darkness dwelt and frowned upon its face:
Chaos I bade depart this work of mine,
And straight the mighty elements disjoin.
Then light I lit; then order I ordained,
And put the dance of atoms to an end.
Matter I brake, and scattered into globes,
And clad ye each in green and growing robes:
Your sizes, places, forms, I fixed with laws,
And wrought the link between effect and cause.
Then formed I lives for each, which might inherit
Will, reason, form, and power—not deathless spirit.
Then I made spirits, things of heavenly worth,
Deathless, divine. Round these, from every earth,
I gathered forms and features fit for love,
Trust, pleasure, power, and all I could approve.
One universal nature spread through space,
Free, faulty, human, born for better place.
To every spirit I disclosed my name,
My love, my might, and whence all being came:
To deathless souls I Righteously decreed
Accountability for thought, word, deed.
Then every orb complete, along the sky,
In glory, beauty, order, harmony,
I launched. Souls, worlds, did every thing possess
Which could a mortal and immortal bless.
To all the hope of happier state was given—
For all I keep one common, boundless Heaven.
Ye all have freedom, and ye all do sin,
For ye are creatures: but ye all may win
Life everlasting—everlasting joy,
If ye do but the love of sin destroy:
This only is offence; for sin ye must
Not by my will; but weakness dwells with dust.
Unless ye have sinned, ye cannot enter Heaven.
How shall a sinless creature be forgiven?
And by forgiveness only can ye claim
Hope in my mercy, trust upon my name.
I knew that ye would all to sin be given;
But I, even God, have paid your price to Heaven:
And if ye will not journey on that way—
The truth — the life — what do ye merit? say!
Death is the gate of life; and sin, of bliss:
Mark the dread truth! but mourn your deeds amiss.

Cast off your guilt! abandon folly's path!
Turn to the Lord your God ere hell His wrath!
Turn from your madness, wicked ones, and live!
Take, take the bliss which God alone can give.
God, the Creator, me all beings own —
God, the Redeemer, I will still be known —
God, too, the Judge — the each — the three — the one.

Again the Everlasting cried — Repent!
To bless or curse I am Omnipotent.
And what art thou, created being? Round
That world of worlds His arm the Almighty wound;
The bright immensity He raised, and pressed,
All trembling like a babe, unto His breast.
There, in the Father's bosom, rose again,
Of filial love, the universal strain;
Strong and exultant — blissful, pure, sublime,
It rolled, and thrilled, and swelled in notes unknown to time.
Think ye that I, who thus do ye maintain;
Thus alway cherish ye, or all were vain—
Ye all would drop into your native void,
If by my hand ye were not held and buoyed:
Think ye that I cannot uphold in Heaven,
In righteous state, the souls I have forgiven?
Be this a weightier task? with God, 'tis one
To guide a sunbeam or create a sun—
To rule ten thousand thousand worlds, or none.
Go, worlds! said God, but learn, ere ye depart,
My favored temple is a humble heart;
Therein to dwell I leave my loftiest skies—
There shall my holy of all holies rise!
He spake; and swiftly reverent to His will,
Sprang each bright orb on high, its sphere to fill.
Glory to God! they chanted as they soared—
Father Almighty! be Thou all-adored.
Thou art the glory— we, Thine universe,
Serve but abroad Thy lustre to disperse.
Unsearchable, and yet to all made known!
The world at once Thy kingdom and Thy throne—
Pity us, God! nor chase us quite away
Before Thy wrath, as night before the day.
In Thee, our God, we live; from Thee we came—
The feeble sparks of Thine eternal flame.
Thy breath from nothing filled us all at first,
And could again as soon the bubble burst.
In Thee, like motes in the sunbeam, we move;
Glow in Thy light, and gladden in Thy love.
And midst this praise, earth was the only one
Sullen remained in that grand union
Of joy and harmony. Word spake she none.

Clara. Earth only had been chidden.

Festus. Not alone.

High o'er all height, God gat upon His throne.
Downwards He bent; and, as a grain of sand,
He lifted up our globe. Then from His hand,
As 'twere in pity, bowled the ingrate sphere,
Which rushed like ruin down its dark career.
And high the air's blue billows rolled and swelled
On many an island world mine eye beheld.

Clara. And where and what is he, this mighty friend,
Who to thee, human, thus his might doth lend?
Who bore thee harmless, as thou sayst, through space,
And brought thee front before thy Maker's face?

Festus. I know not where he is. It is but at times
That he is with me; but he aye sublimes
His visits thus, by lending me his might
O'er things more bright than day, more deep than night.
And he obeys me—whether good or ill
His or my object, he obeys me still.

Clara. O Festus! I conjure thee to beware,
Lest thus the Evil One thy soul insnare.
Festus. What! may not a free spirit have preferred
A mortal to his heart — as thou thy bird
Lovest, because it singeth of the sky,
Although it is as far below thy soul
As I 'neath an archangel's majesty?
God will protect the atom as the whole.

Clara. Him, then, I pray: the spirit full must share
The truths it feels with God Himself in prayer.
So guide us, God! in all our works and ways,
That heart may feel, hand act, mouth show Thy praise;
That when they meet, who love, and when they part,
Each may be high in hope, and pure in heart:
That they who have seen, and they who have but heard
Of Thy great deeds, may both obey Thy word!

Festus. Unto the wise belongs the sphere of light,
And to the spirit world-compelling might.
Yon sun, now setting in the golden main,
Shall count me his ere next he rise again.
One farewell round I long to make above,
As now with thee this leave-taking of love.
Once more to circle round the central skies,
And sound the silent infinite, where rise
Creation's outflows, and the new-born light
Smiles babe-like on the lap of ancient nursing night.
Would that the earth had nothing fair to lure,
Nor being more to answer or endure!
But I foresee, fore-suffer. Bound to earth,
Wrecked in the deeps of Heaven, in Death's expiring birth!

CLARA. Is all, then, over? I ask not what hath come
Of those who once were thine; but fear, nor speak.
Fate brooks not to be questioned in the light.
But shall we part? Is this ordained, or not?
Or is the earth-star struggling still with death?

FESTUS. Being of beauty! whose yet unfilled arms
Form an incarnate Eden, and whose eyes
The angel watchers o'er it—mine exiled
And gazing on thee gainless—smile no more.
For if life's feelings flow not now as erst,
It is not that they are vanished like a stream
Sun-dwindled or earth-drained, but that their face
Is frozen 'neath the world's wide winter. No!
The liquid lightning of thine eye no more,
Nor flowery light which blooms upon thy cheek,
Nor delicate perfection of pure form—
A breathing revelation incarnate—
Illumes for me the dusk of life. Night reigns.
My heart's poles now are fixed like earth's in Heaven,
Shining in solid silence to the moon
Starry and icy silence; and all ceased
Their torrid oscillancies. Once it rolled
In tropic splendor. Now experience treads
Deep in the snow of blossoms. Maid of love! Were thy heart now free as a zoneless nymph, And on life's race of rapture mad to start Like her of old, ere dropped the golden pome, 'Twere vain to me; immovable is mine, Still as a statue studying stony tome. Unite we may not. In this fatal life There is no real union. All things here Seem of monadic nature; and with God, All oneness and sole allness lives alone. Still even in this — Time's age penultimate — And in my heart's exhausted mine, I feel — But I forever have forsworn it — both The magic might of beauty and the fierce Deliciousness of love. Yes! I must be Alone in sacrifice, alone in soul. I hold life's feast, death's fast, indifferent. There is divorce between my heart and me; And I have neither bride nor brethren — I; But I achieve my end — the end of all. From this is no appeal to death, nor fate, Nor the just Gods; herein are all at one. Love me not therefore, now; but when with me The great cessation happens, when the poles Are icing, and this tyrant of life's realm Totters to execution and well-earned Ruin — attend me; whether in the flesh Or in the spirit, be with me; and mark, One birdlike thought through death's white void shall fly
Right to thy bosom home, the thought of thee.
Cherish it there as mine, and royally
In its snow palace. It will bear the gaze
Of all the star souls and the spirit stars
Which will the living land of light indwell.
I feel earth slacken in rotation. Time
Lays down his weary length, as though the work
Wherefore he had his hire were finished. Go!
Now there is nothing left for us on earth,
Save separation.

Clara. Still I love thee, still.
But this is not the end.

Festus. Go! I have said it;
I am henceforth alone. My thought of thee
Above all passionate fire-peaks and above
The sacred snowline of my heart, where soul
And spirit in ecstatic stillness join,
Bides in perpetual purity. Farewell!

Scene—Elsewhere.

Festus, alone. I feel as if I could devour the days
Till the time came when I shall gain mine end;
God shall have made me ruler, and all worlds
Signed the sublime recognizance. Till then,—
Even as a boat lies rocking on the beach,
Waiting the one white wave to float it free,—
Wait I the great event;—too great it seems Yet, Lord! Thou knowest that the power I seek
Is but for others' good and Thine own glory,
And the desire for it inspired by Thee.
So use me as I use it. Thou hast passed
Thy word that such I shall enjoy, and then
My mission is accomplished in this world.
I go unto another, where all souls
Begin again, or take up life from where Death broke it at. I cannot think there will be Like disproportion there between our powers
And will, as here: if not, I shall be happy.
I feel no bounds. I cannot think, but thought
On thought springs up, illimitably, round,
As a great forest sows itself; but here
There is nor ground nor light enough to live.
Could I, I would be everywhere at once,
Like the sea, for I feel as if I could
Spread out my spirit o'er the endless world,
And act at all points:—I am bound to one.
I must be here, and there, and every where,
Or I am nowhere. Sense, flesh, feeling, fail
Before the feet of the imperious mind,
To which they are but as the dust she treads,—
Windlike treads o'er, uplifts and leaves behind.
How mind will act with body glorified
And spiritualized, and senses fined,
And pointed brilliant-wise, we know not. Here,
Even, it may be wrong in us to deem
The senses degradations, otherwise
Than as fine steps, whereby the queenly soul
Comes down from her bright throne to view the mass
She hath dominion over, and the things
Of her inheritance; and reascends,
With an indignant fiery purity,
Not to be touched, her seat. The visible world,
Whereby God maketh Nature known to us,
Is not derogatory to Himself
As the pure Spirit Infinite. A world
Is but, perhaps, a sense of God's, by which
He may explain His nature, and receive
Fit pleasure. But the hour is hard at hand,
When Time's gray wing shall winnow all away,
The atoms of the earth, the stars of Heaven;
When the created and Creator mind
Shall know each other, worlds and bodies both
Put off for aye; man and his Maker meet
Where all, who through the universe do well,
Embrace their heart's desire; what things they will
And whom remember; live, too, where they list;
And with the beings they love best, and God,
Inherit and inhabit boundless bliss.
Hear me, all-favoring God! my latest prayer;
Thou, unto whom all nations of the world
Lift up their hearts, like grass-blades to the sun;
Thou who hast all things, and hast need of nought;
Thou who hast given me earth and all it holds,
Give me, from out Thy garner stored with good,
Some sign, Lord! while I live, in proof to earth
My prayers are with Thee; that they rend the clouds,
And, rising through the sightless dark of space,
Reach to Thy central throne. Oh! let me feel—
What was my constant dream in my young years,
And is in all my better moments now—
My hope, my faith, my nature's sum and end,
Oneness with Thee and Heaven. Lord! make me sure
My soul already is in unison
With the triumphant. Ah! I surely hear
The voices of the spirits of the saints,
And witnesses to the Redeeming Truth;
Not, as of old, in scanty scattered strains,
Breathed from the caves of earth and cells of cities,—
Nor as the voice of martyr choked with fire,—
But in one solemn Heaven-pervading hymn
Of happiness impregnable, as when
From the bright walls of the Son's city they Looked on the war of hell, host upon host,
Foiled by God's single sword before their gates
Of perfect pearl;—nearer and nearer now!
This is the sign, O God! which Thou hast given,
And I will praise Thee through eternity.

The Saints from Heaven.
Call all who love Thee, Lord! to Thee;
Thou knowest how they long
To leave these broken lays, and aid
In Heaven's unceasing song;
How they long, Lord! to go to Thee,
And hail Thee with their eyes,—
Thee in Thy blessedness, and all
The nations of the skies.

All who have loved Thee and done well,
Of every age, creed, clime,
The host of saved ones from the ends
And all the worlds of time:
The wise in matter and in mind,
The soldier, sage, and priest,
King, prophet, hero, saint, and bard,
The greatest soul and least.

The old and young and very babe,
The maiden and the youth,
All re-born angels of one age—
The age of Heaven and truth;
The rich, the poor, the good; the bad,
Redeemed alike from sin;
Lord! close the book of time, and let Eternity begin.

Festus. Will ye away, ye blessed ones? To God
I then commend ye, and my soul with yours.
And midst the light in which ye live, Oh! mind
Of all the sunless days and starless nights
Which myriads pass on earth, and pray for them!
Oh! pray for those who in the world's dark womb
Are bound, who know not yet their Father, God!—
Lord of all earth, all worlds, all Heaven! lift up
My spirit to Thy glory! Let me share
The comfort of Thy love, and while ordained
To the great task I have to go through, let
No more misgivings, fears, nor mortal doubts,
With the cold dew of darkness, chill the soul
Which Thou hast hallowed with Thy love, and which,
Like molten gold within its mould, hath made
The thing that holds it precious;—or if, Lord!
For Thine own purpose Thou wilt suffer such,
May they pass quick and perish tracelessly;
So, too, all thoughts of earth and pangs of death
May I o'ercome at last, and with Thy chosen,
Seraphs and saints, and all-possessing souls,
Which minister unto the universe,
Enthroned in spirit and intensest bliss,
Succeed to Heaven forever.

Guardian Angel. Mortal, hear!
The soul once saved shall never cease from bliss,
Nor God lose that He buyeth with His blood.
She doth not sin. The deeds which look like sin,
The flesh and the false world, are all to her
Hallowed and glorified. The world is changed.
She hath a resurrection unto God
While in the flesh, before the final one,
And is with God. Her state shall never fail.
Even the molten granite which hath split
Mountains, and lieth now like curdled blood.
In marble veins, shall flow again when comes
The heat which is to end all; when the air
Is as a ravening fire, and what at first
Produced, at last consumeth; but the soul
 Redeemed is dear to God as His own throne,
And shall no sooner perish. Hearken, man!
Wilt thou distrust God? Doubt on doubt no more.
Prepare thee for the power and lot sublime
Where to the Lord hath called thee. He hath heard
The prayers with which thou hast entreated Him,
And bids me tell thee, shrink not, doubt not. He
Will comfort and uphold thee at the end;
For after God the Chooser, God the Slain,
Cometh the God of Comfort to the heart,
Whose action and effect is ministrant
Forever after — consummating all.

Festus. I fear, I fear this miracle of Death
Is something terrible. But go to God,
Thou angel, and declare that I repent
Of all misdeeds; that but for His own grace
I should repent of my whole life; that on
That grace, which now hath sanctified the whole,
I trust for all the rest of it, and then
Forever; that I am prepared to act
And suffer as He bids, and in all things
To do His will rejoicing.

Angel. It is done.

Festus. Oh! I repent me of a thousand sins,
In number as the breaths which I have breathed.
Am I forgiven?

Angel. Child of God, thou art.

It is God prompts, inspires, and answers prayer;
Not sin, nor yet repentance, which avails:
And none can truly worship but who have
The earnest of their glory from on high—
God's nature in them. The world cannot worship.
And whether the lip speak, or in inspired
Silence we clasp our hearts as a shut book
Of song unsung, the silence and the speech
Is each His, and, as coming from and going
To Him, is worthy of Him and His Love.

Prayer is the spirit speaking truth to Truth;
The expiration of the thing inspired.

Above the battling rock-storm of this world
Lies Heaven's great calm, through which, as through a bell,

Tolleth the tongue of God, eternally
Calling to worship. Whoso hears that tongue Worships. The Spirit enters with the sound,
Preaching the one and universal word,
The God-word, which is spirit, life, and light;
The written word to one race, the unwrit
Revealment to the thousand peopled world.
The ear which hears is preattuned in Heaven,
The eye which sees prevision hath ere birth.
But the just future shall to many give
Gifts which the partial present doles to few;
To all the glory of obeying God.
I go. Thy God is with thee. We shall meet
Again in Heaven, no more to part.

Festus. Thou art gone!
'Tis sweet to feel we are encircled here
By breath of angels as the stars by Heaven;
And the soul's own relations, all divine,
As kind as even those of blood;—and thus
While friends and kin, like Saturn's double rings,
Cheer us along our orbit, we may feel
We are not lone in life, but that earth's part
Of Heaven and all things. Praise we, therefore,
God!
O all ye angels, pray and praise with us!—

Scene—A Gathering of Kings and Peoples.

Festus, throned. Princes and Peoples! Powers
once, of earth!
It suits not that I point to ye the path
By which I reached this sole supreme domain—
This mountain of all mortal might. Enough,
That I am monarch of the world—the world.
Let all acknowledge loyally my laws,
And love me as I them love. It will be best.
No rise against me can stand. I rule of God;
And am God's sceptre here. Think not the world
Is greater than my might—less than my love—
Or that it stretcheth farther than mine arm.
Kings! ye are Kings no longer. Cast your crowns
Here—for my footstool. Every power is mine.
Nobles! be first in honor. Ye, too, lose
Your place, in place: retrieve yourselves in good.
Peoples! be mighty in obedience.
Let each one labor for the common weal.
Be every man a people in his mind.
Kings—nobles—nations! love me and obey.
I need no aid—no arms. Burn books—break swords!
The world shall rest, and moss itself with peace.
Kings. Tyrant, we love thee not; and we as one
Man will resist thee.
Festus. Well I know it. Mark!
Ye are all nations, I a single soul.
Yet shall this new world order outlast all.
Behold in me the doomsman of your race.
Will, reason, passions, all shall serve and aid,
Yea, your most secret qualities and powers.
Nobles. Reason rebels against thee, and condemns
Tyrant and slave alike; exalting this,
Deposing that, adjusting all; as yet
Hope we and mean to do with thee and these.
Festus. And seek ye to gainstand the faith in
God?
O blindest rulers! will ye never learn
Your proper region and due dominance?
Whatever ye rule, I rule over you.
All unobstructed power is sanctified.
Divine rule is a tyranny of good.
Mine shall be like it. Tyrant! well; I am.
I glory in the title; reverence
Myself for that it is accorded me.
What is above this soul of mine but Heaven?

PEOPLES. The opposite of rule divine is best
For man. Power gives temptation, which in turn
Sets aside honor, social duty, law,
And right; creates abuse, and abuse, strife,
Confusion, retribution, bloodshed, sin.
Though for a season cloud and meteor
Usurp the heights of air, yet soon the stars
Their peaceful reign resume: and now at last,
Since earth hath wiser waxed, the people theirs.
Therefore, descend thou and make room for us;
Or else thy powers submit to perfect proof,
And our approval ratified by all.

Festus. Man's conscience is an angel or a fiend,
According to his deeds. What have I done?
I was the youngest born of Destiny,
The favorite of Fate, and Fortune's heir;
My word for once was law and prophecy.
Speak, spirit! have I forfeited my star?

Lucifer. Storms give to dust a privilege to rise
And fly in all men's faces— even kings'!

Festus. What if a million molehills were to league
Their meannesses together with due pomp,
And to some mountain say, In the name of God!
Whither dost thou aspire? Does any deem
That great imperial creature would descend
From those sublimest solitudes of Heaven,
Where it had dwelt in snowy sanctity
For ages, ere the mud-made world below
Was more than half conceived, to parley there
At its own footstool, and lay down its crown
And elemental commune with the skies,
Because its height was so intolerable,
And its supremacy termed tyranny?
Why look ye all amort? Is doomsday come?
Stand forth, and speak, sole servant of my throne!
If aught thou hast to settle and explain—
Or straightway send these nations to their homes.

Lucifer. Ye mighty once—ye many weak, give ear!
I and my god—for god he sure he must be,
In human form, who sitteth there enthroned—
For readier rule, and for the good of all,
Have cast again the dynasties of earth
According to the courses of the air:—
Therefore, from East, and West, and North, and South,
Four element-like ministers shall bend
Before his feet. Hearken, thou unkinged crowd!
Ye have not sought the good of those ye governed.
The people only for the people care.
Ye seem to have thought earth but a ball for kings
To play with: rolling the royal bauble, empire,
Now East—now West. Your hour and power is past.
Ye are the very vainest of mankind,
As loftiest things weigh lightest. Ye are gone!
Nations, away with them! Nor do ye boast!
Ye find that power means not good, not bliss.
But ye would wed delusion:—now, ye know her.
And she is yours for life—and death—and judgment.
There is no power, nor majesty, save his:
His is the kingdom of the world and glory.
His throne is founded centre-deep by Heaven;
And the whole earth doth bless him. Unto all
He hath laid out one perfect, level law—
His will. For as the people cannot rule
Themselves, so neither may a crowd of kings:
And hence hath been the evil of the earth—
Now ceased forever. War will be no more.
His is the sway of social, sovereign peace:
His tyranny is love and good to all:—
His is the vice-royed, vouched-safe sway of God:—
And he will turn the world, at will; as light
Turneth the world round. Greet your Lord, and Depart, ye nations!—
Festus. Hark! thou fiend! dost hear? go!—
Lucifer. Ay! it is the death groan of the sons of men—
Thy subjects—King!
Festus. Why hadst thou this so soon?
Lucifer. It is God who brings it all about—not I.
Festus. I am not ready—and—it shall not be!
Lucifer. I cannot help it, monarch! and—it is!
Hast not had time for good?
Festus. One day—perchance.
Lucifer. Then hold that day as an eternity.
Festus. All around me die. The earth is one great death bed.
Clara. Oh! save me, Festus! I have fled to thee,
Through all the countless nations of yon dead—
For well I knew it was thou who sattest there—
To die with thee, if that thou art not death:
And if thou wert, I would not shrink from thee.
I am thine own, own Clara!
Festus. Thou art safe!
Here in the holy chancel of my heart—
The heavenly end of this our fleshly fane—
I hold thee to communion. Rest thee safe!
Clara. Men thought I was an angel, as I passed;
And caught up at my feet—but I 'scaped all.
I knew.—I was sure, that I should die by thee.
The heart is a true oracle—I knew it!
Festus. Then there is faith among these mortals yet.
Thy beauty cometh first, and goeth last—
Willow-like. Welcome!
Clara. Oh! I am so happy!
Festus. I speak of thee as of the dead;—the dead are alway faithful.
Clara. I will stay with thee—
Though angels beckon—may I? Let me, love!
I dare not, cannot, take mine eyes from thee,
For fear of looking on the dead. Dear Festus!

Festus. Thou art the only one hast answered me,
Love to love—life to life.

Clara. Oh! I am dying!
Give me one kiss—the kiss of life and death—
The only taste of earth I will take to Heaven.
Here! let me die, die in it!

Festus. Last and best!
Now am I one again. Oh! memory runs
To madness, like a river to the sea.
Happy as Heaven have I been with thee, love!
Thine innocent heart hath passed through a pure life,
Like a white dove, wing-sunned through the blue sky.
A better heart God never saved in Heaven.
She died as all the good die—blessing—hoping.
There are some hearts, aloe-like, flower once, and die—
And hers was of them.—Thrall art thou, and free:
Free of immortal life, though bound of death.
Not the emotional surface of the sea,
Whose form from things without is ta’en, but more
The deep, essential quiet of its bed
Thy soul resembled in the pure profound.
Thy love to me was as the morning dew,
Earth’s liquid jewellery, wrought of air,
Young Nature’s christening; whose every bead,
Round as the globular genesis of things,
And bright as Heaven's own gems in diamond set,
Emblemed its pure perfection o'er this heart,
Now sun-parched, thunder-scorched; yet stricken thus
Feeling myself each hour, each pulse I live
More mightily drawn to join and glory in
All being's everlasting sense of God.
I see the universe made clear with light,
Holy with spirit, pure with Deity;
Man, the dear son of God, to God returned,
And earth's renascent nature throned in Heaven.
The voice of ages, syllabled in suns,
Pronounces God's unceasing benison
Upon His bright creation. Time is touched
On all hands by the Eternal, and the world
Is bounded, rounded, ended but by Heaven.
Therefore the soul in death resilient
Looks back to whence its impulse came, to God;
And all things lovely and divine that here
It loved in spirit are with it conjoined,
And mingled with the future of the stars,
And blissful occupation of all space.
As pending time, the past and future, cause
Chief reasons, and the present but a point,
So in eternity all's presentness.
Hence, therefore, from me now all thoughts of earth;
Be they as in a lake of lightning quenched;
In lone annihilation lie entombed;
And memory's pall be buried with the bier.
There lies my soul's love. Ah! all life hath ceased.
And silence reads the dead world's burial tale.
And Death sits quivering there, and watering,
His great, gaunt jaw at me. When must I die?

Lucifer. Say! dost thou feel to be mortal, or immortal?

Festus. Away! — and let me die alone.

Lucifer. I go:
And I will come again; but spare thee, now,
One hour, to think —

[Foes.

Festus. On all things. God, my God!
One hour to sum a life's iniquities! —
One hour to fit me for eternity —
To make me up for judgment and for God! —
Only one hour to curse thee! Nay, for that,
There may be endless hours. God! I despair, —
And I am dying. Let me hold my breath!
I know not if I ever may draw another.
I feel Death blowing hard at the lamp of life.
My heart feels filling like a sinking boat;
It will soon be down — down. What will come of me?
It is as I always wished it; — I shall die
In darkness, and in silence, and alone.

Even my last wish is petted. God! I thank Thee;
It is the earnest of Thy coming — what?
Forgiveness? Let it be so: for I know not
What I have done to merit endless pain.
Is pleasure crime? Forbid it, God of bliss!
Who spurn at this world's pleasures, lie to God;
And show they are not worthy of the next.
What are Thy joys we know not—nor can we
Come near Thee, in Thy power, nor truth, nor justice:
The nearest point wherein we come towards Thee
Is loving—making love—and being happy.
Thou wilt not chronicle our sand-like sins;
For sin is small, and mean, and barren. Good,
Only, is great, and generous, and fruitful.
Number the mountains, not the sands, O God!
God will not look as we do on our deeds;
Nor yet as others. If He more condemn,
Shall He not more approve? A few fair deeds
Bedeck my life, like gilded cherubs on
A tomb, beneath which lie dust, decay, and darkness.
But each is better than the other thinks.
Thank God! man is not to be judged by man;—
Or, man by man, the world would damn itself.
What do I see? It is the dead. They rise
In clouds! and clouds come sweeping from all sides,
Upwards to God: and now they all are gone—
Gone, in a moment, to eternity.
But there is something near me.

SPIRIT. It is I.

FESTUS. Go on! I follow, when it is my time.
Not perfect yet the complement of Heaven.
There is no shadow on the face of life:
It is the noon of fate. Why may not I die?
Methinks I shall have yet to slay myself.
I am calm now. Can this be the same heart
Which, when it did sleep, slept from dizziness,
And pure rapidity of passion, like
The centre circlet of the whirlpool's wheel?
The earth is breaking up; all things are thawing.
River and mountain melt into their atoms:
A little time, and atoms will be all.
The sea boils; and the mountains rise and sink
Like marble bubbles, bursting into death.
O thou Hereafter! on whose shore I stand—
Waiting each toppling moment to engulf me—
What am I? Say, thou Present!—say, thou Past!
Ye three wise children of Eternity!
A life?—a death?—and an immortal?—all?
Is this the threefold mystery of man?
The lower, darker trinity of earth?
It is vain to ask. Nought answers me—not God.
The air grows thick and dark. The sky comes down.
The sun draws round him streaky clouds, like God
Gleaning up wrath. Hope hath leaped off my heart,
And overturned it. I am bound to die.
God! why wilt Thou not save? The great, round world
Hath wasted to a column beneath my feet.
I will hurl me off it, then; and search the depth
Of space, in this one infinite plunge! Farewell
To Earth, and Heaven, and God! Doom! spread thy lap;
I come—I come! But no! may God forbear
To judge the tempted purpose of my heart!
Me hath He 'established here, and He will save; And I can smile destruction in the face. Let His strong hand compress the marble world, And wring the starry fire-blood from its heart; Still on this earth-core I rejoice in God; I know Him and believe in Him as Love, And this divinest truth He hath inspired,— Mercy to man is justice to Himself. He His hand opened, and the world was born. He shuts it, and the essential nothingness, Embodied, dies its everlasting death, The infinite conclusion of all things. Open thine arms, O Death! thou fine of woe And warrantry of bliss! I feel the last Red mountainous remnant of the earth give way. The stars are rushing upwards to the light; My limbs are light, and liberty is mine. The spirit's infinite purity consumes The sullied soul. Eternal destiny Opens its bright abyss. I am God's! God. Man, die!
Scene — The Skies.

God, Angels, Angel of Earth, Lucifer.

God.
The age of matter consummates itself.
All things that are shall end, save that is mine.
As with one world, so shall it be with all;
For all are human, fallible, and false,—
As creature towards Creator must be aye.
But for the whole prepare ye, not the less
Grade upon grade of glory, sons of God!
The world begins and ends with Paradise,
The garden and the city of the blest.
And earth shall live again, and, like her sons,
Have resurrection to a brighter being;
And waken like a bride, or like a morning,
With a long blush of love to a new life.
Another race of souls shall rule in her,
Creatures all loving, beautiful, and holy.
Go, angel! guide her, as before, through Heaven.

Angel of Earth. On! on! my world again!
   Away we fly
   Through Heaven's blue plain,
   Like thought through the eye.
Ye angels, keep your Heaven!
I, earth. For that with God I have striven,
   And have prevailed.
I come once more,
I come to thee, Earth!
Like a ship to shore.

Lucifer. Have not I triumphed o'er the earth that was?

GOD.
Prince of the powers of air! thy doom is nigh.
The prison-place of spirits is for thee—
As for all others thou hast wronged, for a time—
But those who, by my favor, die not. Him
Conduct, ye angels, into Hades; there
To wait my will while the world's Sabbath lasts

Scene—The Millennial Earth.

Saints and Angels worshiping; Festus.

Saints. To Thee, God, Maker, Ruler, Savior, Judge!
The Infinite, the Universal One;
Whose righteousnesses are as numberless
As creature sins; who Giver art of life;
Who sawest from the first that all was good
Which Thou didst make, and sealed it with Thy love,
Thy boundless benediction on the world;
To Thee be honor, glory, prayer, and praise,
And full-orbed worship from all worlds, all Heavens!
May every being bless Thee in return
As Thou dost bless it; every age and orb
Utter to Thee the praise Thou dost inspire.
Let man, Lord! praise Thee most as all redeemed,
As many in the saints, as one in Thee!
Oh! may perpetual pleasure, peace, and joy,
And spiritual light inform all souls,
And grace and mercy in bliss thousand fold
Enwrap the world of life. May all who dwell
On open earth, or in the hid abyss,
Howe'er they sin or suffer, in the end
Receive as beings born at first of Thee
The mercy that is mightier than all ill.
May all souls love each other in all worlds
And all conditions of existence; even
As now these lower lives that dwell with man
In amity, rejoicing in the care
Of their superior, and in useful peace,
Upon the common earth no more distained
With mutual slaughter — no more doomed to groan
At sights of woe, and cruelty, and crime.
Lo! all things, now rejoicing in the life
Thou art to each and givest, live to Thee;
And knowing others' nature and their own,
Live in serene delight, content with good,
Yet earnest for the last and best degree.
Their hands are full of kindness, and their tongues
Are full of blessings, and their hearts of good.
All things are happy here. May kindness, truth,
Wisdom, and knowledge, liberty, and power,
Virtue, and holiness o'erspread all orbs
As this star now—the world be bliss and love—
And Heaven alone be all things; till at last
The music from all souls redeemed shall rise,
Like a perpetual fountain of pure sound
Uprising, sparkling in the silvery blue—
From round creation to Thy feet, O God!

Angel. The earth is all one Eden. Pity, sure.
That it should ever end.

Saint. I say not so;
Although I have a thousand plans in hand,
Some interwoven with the farthest stars—
Each one of which might ask a year of years
To perfect.

Angel. True; our Maker knoweth best
What thought or deed may best belong to time
Or to eternity.

Saint. All prophecy
Hath said the earth shall cease, and that right soon.

Festus. 'Tis like enough. Beauty's akin to Death.

Angel. Behold, our sister Graces of the skies,
Faith, Hope, and Love, descend! Methinks, of late,
Ye chiefly dwell on earth.

Love. Where lives and reigns
The Son of God, there are we ever seen,
Successive, as the seasons to the sun.

Saints. Well are ye known and welcome in all worlds.
Wherever lofty thought or godly deed
Is lodged or compassed, there your blessings rest.

Hope. How sweet, how sacred now, this earth of man's,
The prelude of a yet sublimer bliss!—
I marked it from the first, while yet it lay
Lightless and stirless; ere the forming fire
Was kindled in its bosom, or the land
Lift its volcanic breastwork up from sea.
The deluge and idolatries of men
I viewed, though shuddering, and with faltering eye,
E'en to the incarnation of Heaven's Lord,
And dawning of His faith; that faith which was
An infant, and anon a giant; was
A star, and grew a Heaven-fulfilling sun;
Which was an outcast, and became, ere long,
A dweller in all palaces; which hid
Its head in dens of deserts, and sat throned,
After, in richest temples high as hills;
Which was poured out in mortal blood, and rose
In an immortal spirit; as a slave
Was sold for gold and prostrated to Power;—
And now that lowly bondmaid is a queen;
And lo! she is beloved in Earth and Heaven;
And lieth in the bosom of her Lord,
The Bride of the All-worshipped, one with God.

Love. We even of divinest origin
In infinite progression view all worlds;
And we are happy.
FAITH. The dead sleep, as yet;
But their time cometh, and the bonds of death
Already slacken round the living soul;
The mortal sleep of ages, which began
When Time sank down into his slumberous west,
Thins even now o'er the reviving eyes
Gathering their Heaven-lent light, no more to wane
In woe or age; never be quenched in tears,
Like a star in the sea. 'Tis as I ever knew;
My life is to receive and to believe
The Word and words of God.

LOVE. I, who am Love,
And Grace, and Charity, rejoice with you;
Whither ye wend, I with ye; whether here,
Or on the utmost rim of Light's broad reign—
The least and last of stars which even seems
To tremble at its insignificance
In presence of Infinity; where yet
No angel's wing hath waved, nor foot of fiend
Left its hot imprint;—still, in all do we Find fit delight and honor, as now here.
Now Earth and Heaven hold commune, day and night;
There's not a wind but bears upon its wing
The messages of God, and not a star
But knows the bliss of earth.

FESTUS. The earth hath God
Remade, and all its elements refined,
Fit for sublimer being. Flesh hath passed
Its fiery baptism, and come forth clear
As crystal gold: all that of vile or mean
Pertained to it hath perished atomless.
Earth, like a diamond, basks in her own free light;
Unfed, unaided, unrequiring aught.
All now is purity, and power, and peace.
The first-born of creation, they who hail
Archangels as their brethren, mountain-like
Reign o'er the plains of men, converting all;
Reaping the fields of immortality,
Each one his sheaf, for Him, the Harvest-Lord,
To whom belongs earth's whole estate and life,
And every world's.

Angel. And He shall garner all.
The awful tribes which have in Hades dwelt,
Past count of time, await their rising. God's Great day, the Sabbath of the world's long week,
Is at high noon; and Christ hath yet to come
To judge and save the living and the dead.

Saint. The shadows of eternity o'er-cast
Already Time's bright towers. The Heavens shall come
Down like a cloud upon a hill, and sweep
Their spirit over earth, and the whole face
And form of things shall be dissolved and changed.
Nothing shall be but essence, perfect, pure,
And void of every attribute but God's.
This even is too gross for that which is
To come. The holy hath both Earth and Heaven.
Festus. Nor pain, nor toil of mind or frame, nor doubt,
Nor discontent, nor enmity to God,
Disturb the steady joy the spirit feels;
Nor element can torture, nor time tire;
Nor sea, nor mountain make, or bar, or fear;
Sickness, and woe, and death are things gone by;
Destroyed with the destruction of the world:—
Shadows of things which have been, nevermore
To waste the world's bright hours, nor grate the heart
Of mighty man; now fit for thrones and wings;
Ruler of worlds, main minister of Heaven,
Inheritor of all the prophecies
Of God fore-uttered through the tongues of Time,
Ages of ages. Evil is no more.

Archangel. And does earth satisfy thee now?

Festus. As earth.
There is a brighter, loftier life for man
Even yet, the very union with God.

Archangel. God works by means. Between the two extremes
Of Earth and Heaven there lies a mediate state,—
A pause between the lightning lapse of life
And following thunders of eternity;—
Between eternity and time a lapse,
To soul unconscious, though age-lasting, where
Spirit is tempered to its final fate;
Within or between worlds, repose or bliss,
Divested, man shall mix with Deity,
And the Eternal and Immortal make
One Being. As in earth's first paradise
God's Spirit walked with man, and commune made
With him; so in the second, after death,
Man's spirit walks with God in an elect
Existence, and a vigil of the great,
The holy day which is to break in Heaven.
Thither the Lord of Life went, in the hour
That Hell by Earth revenged itself on Heaven,
With one soul penitent accompanied;—
Nor long remained He there, yet long enough
To cheer earth's faithful, who received Him then
In silent, unknown blessedness of soul,
With time-outwearing hope that yet in Him
They should partake the Godhood of His love.
And with Him rose then, in prophetic proof
Of His Divinity, many a deathless ghost,
Triumphant o'er that blind revenge which wrought,
Hell! thy destruction—thy salvation, Earth!

Festus. That such will be, the just well know;
and all
Earth's great events and changes tend thereto;
Its fiery dissolution in the past,
And supernatural recommencement now
Under the universal creed of Christ.
The chosen and the world-redeemed partake
His personal and spiritual reign.

Archangel. And this shall last, till, like the setting sun
Deserting earth, He shall retire to Heaven,
With all His captive victors in His train,
Triumphant, and translated evermore
Into the hierarchal skies. Wilt see,
While yet time is, earth's shadowy world within—
The inward living death she bears about
Her heart, hath ever borne — and, augur-like,
Explore the ominous bowels of the earth?
To me are given the secrets of the centre,
The keys of earth, to lock and to unlock,
Coffer-like. I it was who seized and bound, —
At His behest who wills and it is done, —
Even on their thrones, the mighty thou wilt see.

Festus. Angel of Heaven! I would view these things.

Archangel. Nor these alone, but other wonders yet.
The valley where Death's dark wings brooded o'er,
A God-offending night, unvisited
By sun or star, where but the fatuous fire
Of man's weak judgment wandered, till God's Son
Laid o'er the black abyss a bridge of light,
And married Earth to the main land of Heaven—
This shalt thou see, Death's grave; and over him,
And over it, that monument of light,
Enlightening earth. The gods and fiends of old,
And all the fictions of the heart of man,
Imagined of the future past for aye,
Thou shalt inspect. Behold this mountain! We Festus. Must pass through it; for under lie the gates
Of the invisible regions whereunto
We tend, for a brief season.

Festus. On, then!

Archangel. Bare
Thy marble breast, O mountain, to its depths!
An angel and a man divine demand
A way through these foundations.

Festus. And the rocks
Open like mists before thee.

Archangel. Follow me!

Scene—Hades

Archangel, Festus, Death, Lucifer.

Festus. Almighty God! sustain me. This is Death;—
And this—I knew not, angel! he was here—
Is Lucifer—the fallen, like a bolt
Of thunder forged in intramundane air,
Self-buried in the centre. Lucifer!
Wake from thy sea-like sleep; in peace or wrath,
Rouse from thine age-long trance; arise and see;
The representatives of Earth and Heaven
Stand by thee. As for me, I blame no more
The part thou tookest in my mortal life;
'Tis gone,—nor spurn thee for delusions dead.
The blood that hath been spilt is sunk in earth,
And run into the rivers, and dried up
Into the air;—and there's an end of it.
What good hath come of it alone I bear
At heart. And we have both offended God.
Let me, though not in nature to forget,
Forgive, what every one hath sometime felt—
The Devil's burning gripe upon his heart.
I see thee with compassion, half with hope.

LUCIFER. Mortal! I bow to thee, and would do to
The least and lowest spirit God hath made;
But still the curse that I am cursed with
Outlasts the element:—outlives all time.

FESTUS. All curses cease with time; all ill, all woe
Blessings star forth forever, but a curse
Is like a cloud—it passes.

LUCIFER. 'Twas by him—
You angel, only not almighty, there!
As with a chain of mountains I was bound
And hurled into this unformed, nebulous life;
Stripped of all might when mightiest, struck down
While triumphing the loftiest,—enslaved
When most a monarch o'er both earth and hell.
And made a shadow among shadows here.
It recks not. Let the impenetrable soul
Be ground as through a mill, I only know
In action, or inaction, equal woe—
Suffering, doing, being, one extreme.
Pass on! we meet again.
Festus. And when we do,
May God forgive, as I!—
Archangel. Behold there, Death!
Throned on his tomb—entombed in his throne;
Just as he ceased he rests for aye—his scythe,
Still wet out of its bloody swath, one hand
Tottering sustains the other strikes the cold
Drops from his bony brow: his mouldy breath
Tainteth all air.
Festus. I dread him now no more,
Nor hate. He is a vanquished enemy.
Archangel. Listen! he speaks.
Death. To you, ye sons of God,
My latest words I utter. Unto Him
Who ever lives, and hath for aye destroyed
Me and my reign, give ye this crown usurped,
And lay it at His feet; and this dulled dart
Which was my sceptre. To the conqueror
Belong these trophies. All the progeny
Of time will soon cease. Lo! the end's at hand.
Archangel. Thus shall it be, O Death! and thus it is.
Festus. And who are these gigantic, awful shades
Which fill the midst—the present of the place?
Archangel. These are the mighty nothings man
Made; the dread unrealities by whom
He swore, to whom he prayed, and at whose shrines of old
He sacrificed a thousand times a day:—
His brother falsehoods these, men like himself,
Which mere imagination changed to gods,
Some for their good deeds, others for their bad:
Bel, Odin, Bramh, and Zeus, the lords of death,
And fire, and judgment, waiting here their death
And fiery judgment — Time and Titan — war —
Beauty, and strength, and light, and the long roll
Of creatural powers and passions deified; —
Who gave their names to stars which still roam round
The skies, all worshipless, even from climes
Where their own altars once topped every hill.

Jove. Before the Christian cross and Moslem mosque
My marble fanes have fallen, and my shrines
Shrunk like a withered hand ages ago.
But now all signs and sacred domes for gods
To dwell in are extinct. The world is all
One Temple of the Truth.

Bramh. The ages feigned,
That made Time groan to think how old he was,
And deities in millions, are no more.
Ageless eternity, and God the sole,
The royalty of Heaven, is at hand.

Boodh. All things that are shall nothing be at last.
Save what’s resolvable in Deity.

Festus. And all yon lesser shades, which move lik moons,
Half darkened by the greater — half illumed —
Are priests and prophets of the mightier ones?
Archangel. They are; — and farther round thine eye can mark
The myriads of adorers of each god,
Confused and prostrate, as their souls awake
To the demoniac madness of their creeds.
Behold! they kneel to those they hailed on earth
As makers — as omnipotent — eterne —
And cry for help, for comfort; none have they
To give to others or themselves. The false,
The base, the brutish deities give way,
And all their sacred follies in their train,
Before the earthquake truth, ingulfing all.
Woe to the false gods, woe! to prophet, priest,
And worshipper, all woe!

Festus. Hark! round the earth
Each soul hath found a tongue, and uttereth woe.
Lo! from their thrones the man-made gods descend,
And rend their robes, and trample on their crowns,
And hurl away their sceptres. Woe to all
The gods and idols of the heart of man!
Their sun is set forever in the night
Which was ere Light was. Surely it is more
To be true man or woman than false god
And falser prophet. God alone the true,
The God of Heaven, shall be witnessed to
And worshipped.

Archangel. Witnessed, worshipped, too,
By all: the faithful and the faithless — saint
And sinner.
Festus. Lo! the nations of the dead,
Which do outnumber all earth's races, rise,
And high in sumless myriads overhead
Sweep past us in a cloud, as 'twere the skirts
Of the Eternal passing.

A Voice. Souls, arise
To deathless life!

Archangel. It is God speaks. Let us hence.
The general judgment is in hand,—God's hand.
The souls of those whom God loves circle us.
For thee, thy lot thou knowest. As a seed
Buried in earth doth multiply itself
Full fifty fold, so will thy nature, when,
Changed, it lifts head in the air divine of Heaven.

Festus. Out of the depths of earth and the world's womb
Thine unborn angels seek thee, God, all Love!
Now is Thine hour for which all hours were made,
All life created, all things else ordained;
Be it the hour of mercy, Lord! to all,
For Thy Son's sake, who, for the sake of man,
Came down from Heaven into the pit of earth,
And lived as one of us, and died;—He died
The death of all at once of every age;
The world's accumulated weight of woe,
From its first life unto its last, which none
But the Omnipotent could bear—He bore;
And all for us. God became man that man
Might become God. Oh, favor infinite!
Now reap the righteous, righteous but in Him
Any, their guerdon. Evil to repay
With good was Christ's command, and Earth with
Heaven
Is thus the great example of His word.
Enough for sinners this, for all which live.
Do Thou, Lord! be with us. In Thee we live;
Our treasure, trust, and triumph is in Thee.
Behold the day of our salvation come
Unto the countless all Thou hast redeemed!
The ages sweep around me with their wings,
Like angered eagles cheated of their prey.
Reach forth your arms, ye angels! wreathe anew
Your starry crowns. Earth was betrothed to Heaven.
Upon her natal day. I hear them come;
I hear the armied torrent of their wings
Hitherward streaming. Lo! the glowing Heavens
Are rushing to receive us. Oh, rejoice
All ye that are immortal—and whate'er
Hath been predestined to eternal end,
The day determined ere all time was dawns'

Scene—Earth.

Angels and Saints—An Angel descending; Festus.

Saint. Whence art thou?
Angel. I? from Heaven, and thither tend;—
One moment here to bid ye to prepare.
Our Lord the Eternal Son comes hither, girt
With His victorious hosts, to judge the world.

SAINT. What victory hath our Almighty gained?
ANGEL. One final, over Death and Hell. Shout:
Earth!

Thy freedom is accomplished, and thy foes
Brought down to endless ruin.

SAINT. Angel, speak!

We burn to learn the tidings of this war,
Whereof thou tell'st, and doubtless wast a part.

ANGEL. Hot from the fight I come. This lightning blade
Hath holpen well to thin the infernal rout,
Which back hath fled to hell, howling like winds.
But let me, at your will, ye peaceful saints,
Relate what happened to us, from first to last.
The time was come in Heaven when God the Son,
Bowing His head before the Omnipotent,
Who doubled every blessing infinite
Wherewith He had enriched His Only One
From first, rose from His glorious throne, and stepped Into His sun-bright car, calling aloud
His angels to attend Him while He went
To judge the earth, as foreordained of old;
That Heaven and Earth might view the majesty
And mercy of the God of all. We came,
Selectest spirits, countless—crowded bright
As the great stream of stars which flows through Heaven
Fast by the foot of God, each wave a world—
Eager to eye this act of glory long
Talked of in Heaven, and now to be achieved.
Forth from the starry towers, and world-wide walls
Of Heaven, we sat in high and silent joy,
And journeyed half our way through Heaven, when lo
A sight which checked the foremost, flaming ranks,
That halted frontwise, working doubt at first,
But triumph after. Shielded and drawn up close,
Behind a broken and decaying world,
From which the light had vanished like the light
Out of a death-shrunk eye, sat Lucifer—
Midst in the powers of darkness, and the hosts
Of hell, enthroned sublime; and all were still
As ambushed silence round the foe of God.
But Oh 'how changed from him we knew in Heaven,
Whose brightness nothing made might match nor mar:—
Who rose, and it was morn; — who stretched his wing,
And stepped from star to star; — so changed he showed Most like a shadowy meteor, through which
The stars dim glint — woe-wasted, pined with pain.
And by his side there sat or shrank a shape
We angels knew not, but the Son of God
Knew him, and called him Death; whom, when he saw,
Arousing, after, out of sleep intense,
That unrealed tyrant drew his mortal dart,
And drave it through himself,— a shade, shade-quelled
Then to that chief of mischief and his fiends,
Who, thick as burning stones that from the throat
Of some volcano foul the benighted sky,
Shot up triumphant into air as they
Beheld our ranks move on, thus spake our Lord,—
Not wrathfully, but sternly pitying:
Hell's wretched remnant! wherefore crouch ye here?
Is it to sue destruction, or to bar
My passage? If it be, in both ye err.
And will ye trust yourselves again to war
With me, Almighty? Have I not overcome
Ye separately, both? Speak, brutal Death!—
Fit follower and fellow to all woes,—
Wherefore this instantaneous haste from hell,
And both from Hadean bondage, thus again
So soon to compass mightiest wickedness,
And tempt extremest wrath? Speak, head of hell!
To Him thus Lucifer: Almighty Son!
Thy power I defy not; but in peace
I war with fate. My life is to destroy.
Evil hath more activity, if good
More strength: and one must wear the other out.
The more august the sin, so much the more
Is my necessity. Yon Earth hath been
The battle-plain of Heaven and Hell. From Thee,
Who knowest all things, it were vain to hide
My purpose, which for a thousand years, the year
Of bondage, hath grown in me and lived on,
Toad-like within a rock—vital where all
Beside was death—to seize the nascent souls
Of men as they re-rose from death to life,
And sweep them off in midst of all these hosts,
Assembled for that cause here as Thou seest,
To hell;—the universal race of man.
But if ordained that not on them, but Thee
And Thine, old hate shall satisfy itself,
Approach no nearer; for we live by death;—
Or turn the tide of fate, Thou sole who canst!
Ceasing thereat, his host upraised a shout
Which shook the stars, and made them ring again.
Our Lord to him then spake thus, mild as Spring
Addressing Earth when smiling she lets fall
All flowerets from her lips: 'Tis well there is a God
Lo! to what base extremes infernal pride
Can push a princely spirit once in Heaven.
Thee we will not destroy now, for thine hour
Hath yet to come—when least thou thinkest it.
God's wrath thou hast endured in punishment,
Not yet His power. Away! I warn ye hence,
Ere wrath ride forth again. To Him the fiend
Answered: God rules not us the unordered damned,
Nor recks of hell. For ages past belief,
Unless by those who, like ourselves, denied
Thine own eternity—by creature mind,
However lofty, hardly compassed—we
Have borne our pain without remorse, or sign
Of pity from our Maker. Shall we now
Believe, whilst thus confronting Him again,
He means us better? Never worse than now. Therefore I say to ye, On! mightiest fiends, On! Let us reap companions for our woes, Or earn annihilation! At the word, His fiery phalanx rushed to bar the way Or Him whose ways are over all His works.

A million spears blazed forth their answer bright, As of as many tongues. Serene our ranks Stood as the stars o'er thunder. God the Son Sate in His orbèd car, and breathed on them: And they were rolled up like the desert sands Before the burning wind,—throne wrecked on throne, All ruined and foredone. Pursue! He cried, Nor let them near the earth I go to judge. And we pursued, as many as He chose, And chased from sphere to sphere that wretched wreck Of falsest fiends;—and I, it seems, am first Of all my victor brethren to declare The triumph past and coming, and to cheer Your hearts with tidings of our Lord, to whom Be glory for His universal deeds, And to Him, only God!

Saint. Behold where comes Another warrior-angel from on high; Like angels, always singly or in hosts.

Angel. It is the most dread Azrael, unto whom The sword of Death is given as a boon.
Saint. What sayst thou, heavenly one?

Azrael: To the extreme bound
Of Light's domain we chased the flying foe,
Who on the confines of the lower air
Once rallied at their leader's stern command,
Whom more they fear, or seem to fear, than God.
They halted, formed, and faced us. I and mine,
As on we came in order, full career,
Exalted by success, hoped ardently
One more convincing contest; but in spite
Of future woe, or the tempestuous threats
Of the great fiend who marshalled them, each eyed
His neighbor pale; their trembling shook all air;
And each one lift his arm, but no one struck.
Awhile in dead throe-like suspense they stood,
Or like the irresolution of the sea
At turn of tide—then wheeled and fled amain,
And in one mass immense broke down from Heaven,
Cliff-like;—there let them lie! such fate have fiends.
And we returned, hoping to meet, as charge
To all was given, the Lord our glory here.

Archangel. Let all the dead rejoice! their Savior comes.
Scene—The Judgment of Earth.

The Son of God, the Archangel, Saints and Angels.

Archangel. Let all the dead rejoice! their Savior comes;
With clouds of angels circled like a sun,
Belted with light, and brighter than all light.
Lo! He descends and seats Him on His throne,
Alighting like a new-made sun in Heaven.
The world awaits Thee, Lord! Rise, souls of men,
Buried beneath all ages from the first;
Ye numbered and unnumbered, loathed and loved,
Awake to judgment! Rise! the grave no more
Hath power upon ye than the ravening sea
Upon the stars of Heaven. Ye elements!
Give back your stolen dead. He claimeth them
Whose they both were and are, and aye shall be.

Son of God. I come to repay sin with holiness,
And death with immortality; man’s soul
With God’s Spirit; all evil with all good.
All men have sinned: and as for all I died,
All men are saved. Oh! not a single soul
Less than the countless all can satisfy
The infinite triumph which to me belongs,
Who infinitely suffered. Ye elect!
And all ye angels, with God’s love informed,
Who reign with me o'er Earth and Heaven, assume
Your seats of judgment. Judge ye all in love,
The love which God the Father hath to you—
For His Son's sake, and all shall be forgiven.

SAINTS. Lord! let us render back to Thee the love
Which is Thine own: none else is worthy Thee.

SON OF GOD. Behold this day I dwell with ye on Earth,
E'en to the last; the next shall be in Heaven,
Where ye shall meet the Father, and remain
In the eternal presence, He through me
Blessing all spirits overflowingly.

SAINTS. Dear Lord, our God and Savior! for Thy gifts
The world were poor in thanks, though every soul
Were to do nought but breathe them, every blade
Of grass and every atomy of earth
To utter it like dew. Thy ways are plain
Only in Thine own light. And this great day
Unveils all nature's laws and miracles—
All to Thee all as one. Thy death was life;
Thy judgment is all mercy, Lord of Love!
The world's incomprehensible no more
To man, but all is bright as new-born star.

SON OF GOD. The Book of Life is opened. Heaven begins.
Scene—The Heaven of Heavens.

The Recording Angel, Lucifer, Festus, Angels.

The Recording Angel. All men are judged save one.

Son of God. He, too, is saved. Immortal! I have saved thy soul to Heaven. Come hither. All hearts bear themselves to me, as clouds unbind their bosoms to the sun; And thine was wealthy in the gifts of good. And, if its guilt and glory lay in love, Let light outweigh the darkness! Thou art saved.

Saints. Rejoice! Rejoice!

Festus. Could I, Lord! pour my soul out, In thanks, even as a river rolling ever, It would be too scant for what I owe to Thee.

Son of God. Nay; immortality is long enough, As life, or as a moment is, to show Thy love of good, thy thanks to me and God. One heart-throb sometimes earneth Heaven—one tear.

Festus. My Maker! let me thank Thee, I have lived, And live a deathless witness of Thy grace. And Thee, the Holy One, who hast chosen me, From old eternity, while yet I lay Hid, like a thought in God, unuttered—Thou, Who makest finite full with the Infinite,
As is a womb with an immortal spirit,
Oh! let me thank Thee that I witness to Thee
And Thou, mid-God! my Savior, and my Judge.
Sun of the soul, whose day is now all noon—
Who makest of the universe one Heaven—
The Holy Ghost doth praise Thee. Praise Thyself!

Lucifer. Is he not mine?

God.
Evil! away, for aye!

In the beginning, ere I bade things be—
Or ever I begat the worlds on space,
I knew of him, and saved him in my Son,
Who now hath judged; for, fraught with Godhood, He
Yet feels the frailties of the things He has made;
And therefore can, like-feelingly, judge them.
For I abide not sin; and in my Son
There is no sin—not that He takes away.
It is destroyed forever and made nothing.

Son of God. Spirit, depart! this mortal loved me
With all his doubts, he never doubted God;
But from doubt gathered truth, like snow from clouds.
The most, and whitest, from the darkest. Go!

Lucifer. I leave thee, Festus. Here thou wilt be happy.
To be in Heaven is to love forever
God—and thou must love here

Here thou wilt find

* A A A A
All that thou canst and oughtst to love; for souls,
Re-made of God, and moulded over again
Into his sun-like emblems, multiply
His might and love: the saved are suns, not earths.
And with original glory shine of God.
While I shall keep on deepening in my darkness,
With not one gleam across the gloom of being.

Festus. Let us part, spirit! It may be in the coming,
That as we sometime were all worth God's making.
We may be worth forgiving; taking back
Into His bosom, pure again — and then,
All shall be one with Him, who is one in all.

Lucifer. It may be, then, that I shall die. Farewell.
Forgive me that I tempted thee!

Festus. I am glad.

God.
Stay, spirit! all created things unmade
It suits not the eternal laws of good
That Evil be immortal. In all space
Is joy and glory, and the gladdened stars,
Exultant in the sacrifice of sin,
And of all human matter in themselves,
Leap forth as though to welcome Earth to Heaven —
Leap forth and die. All nature disappears.
Shadows are passed away. Through all is light.
Man is as high above temptation now, —
And where by grace he always shall remain
Festus.

As ever sun o'er sea; and sin is burnt
In hell to ashes with the dust of death.
The worlds themselves are but as dreams within
Their souls who lived in them, and thou art null.
And thy vocation useless, gone with them.
Therefore shall Heaven rejoice in thee again,
And the lost tribes of angels who with thee
Wedded themselves to woe, and all who dwell
Around the dizzy centres of all worlds,
Again be blessed with the blessedest.
Lo! ye are all restored, rebought, rebrought
To Heaven by Him who cast ye forth, your God.
Receive ye tenfold of all gifts and powers.
And thou who cam'st to Heaven to claim one soul,
Remain possessed by all. The sons of bliss
Shall welcome thee again, and all thy hosts,
Whereof thou first in glory as in woe—
In brightness as in darkness erst—shalt shine.
Take, Lucifer, thy place. This day art thou
Redeemed to archangelic state. Bright child
Of morning, once again thou shinest fair
O'er all the starry armaments of light.

Lucifer. The highest and the humblest I of all
The beings Thou hast made, Eternal Lord!

Angel. Behold they come, the legions of the lost,
Transformed already by the bare behest
Of God our Maker to the purest form
Of seraph brightness.

The Restored Angels. His be all the praise.
And ours submissive thanks. When evil had done
Its worst, then God most blessed us and forgave.
Oh, He hath triumphed over all the world,
In mercy, over Death, and Earth, and Hell!
Son of God. All God hath made are saved.
Heaven is complete.
Guardian Angel. Hither with me!
Festus. But where are those I love?
Angel. Yon happy troop?
Festus. Ah! blest ones, come to me!
Loves of my heart on Earth, and soul in Heaven!
Are ye all here, too, with me?
All. All!
Festus. It is Heaven.
Angel. Come, let us join our souls into the song
Of glory, which the saved all sing, to God.
The Saved. Father of goodness,
Son of love,
Spirit of comfort,
Be with us!
God who hast made us,
God who hast saved,
God who hast judged us,
Thee we praise.
Heaven our spirits,
Hallow our hearts;
Let us have God-light
Endlessly.
Ours is the wide world,
Heaven on Heaven;
What have we done, Lord,
Worthy this?
On! we have loved Thee;
That alone
Maketh our glory,
Duty, meed.
Oh! we have loved Thee!
Love we will Ever, and every
Soul of us.
God of the saved.
God of the tried,
God of the lost ones,
Be with all!
Let us be near Thee
Ever and aye;
Oh! let us love Thee
Infinite!

Festus. So, soul and song, begin and end in Heaven,
Your birthplace and your everlasting home.

Angels. In Heaven extolled are now all souls of Earth,
And each particular essence at Thy word,
O God! rejoins the pure and pious skies.
All government, rule, empire is at last
United here, the kingdom sole of Heaven,
Meant from the first for universal rule.
In boundless bliss all creatural power is now
Essentially and evermore absorbed.
Henceforth the holy offspring of the word
Of all-sustaining grace shall teach the souls
Victors through God, eternal virtue's truth,
Adding celestial might to every thought
Hallowed by Thee, by Thee all thought inspired.
The Gods are one God, and all power is His.
High over all, and deep in all, dost Thou
Ever rule one thing by another; still
On all Thy throne is based, and round all Thou
Stretchest the line unlimited of Heaven.
Divine and holy is Thine every work,
Eternal only as ordained by Thee,
Unknown but to Thyself, who dost remain
Steadfast in love, though Heaven and Earth rebel.
All sway is Thine, Lord! Heaven and Earth are one
In universal glory: world by world
Night renders up to Thee the fruit of light,
Sown in her bosom, reaped and ripened here:
Unutterably happy to approach
Perfection in the Infinite, how far,
How high soever, still to Thee allied.
All blessing God! who with Thy boundless love
Dost deify the Heavens, and make the soul
Of man expand with immortality,
Now we with him in fourfold joy rejoice,
And all the heavenly hierarchies of light,
Ineffable, adore Thy grace supreme.
All sanctifying Lord of love and might,
Let whole creation testify to Thee
As vice to virtue, darkness to the light,
Hell thus to Heaven, and man to Deity!—
Glory to Thee, our God, who all to prove,
Of Earth the law, of Heaven the grace above,
Dost make the great I am, the all I love.

The Holy Ghost. Time there hath been when only God was all;
And it shall be again. The hour is named,
When seraph, cherub, angel, saint, man, fiend,
Made pure, and unbelievably uplift
Above their present state—drawn up to God,
Like dew into the air—shall be all Heaven;
And all souls shall be in God, and shall be God,
And nothing but God, be.

Son of God. Let all be God's.

God.
World without end, and I am God alone;
The Aye, the Infinite, the Whole, the One.
I only was—nor matter else, nor mind,
The self-contained Perfection unconfined.
I only am—in might and mercy one;
I live in all things, and am closed in none.
I only shall be—when the worlds have done,
My boundless Being will be but begun.
L'ENVOI.

Read this, world! He who writes is dead to thee,
But still lives in these leaves. He spake inspired:
Night and day thought came unhelped, undesired,
Like blood to his heart. The course of study he Went through was of the soul-rack. The degree
He took was high: it was wise wretchedness.
He suffered perfectly, and gained no less
A prize than, in his own torn heart, to see
A few bright seeds: he sowed them—hoped them truth.
The autumn of that seed is in these pages.
God was with him; and bade old Time, to the youth,
Unclench his heart, and teach the book of ages.
Peace to thee, world!—farewell! May God the Power,
And God the Love, and God the Grace, be ours!
This book is due on the last date stamped below, or on the date to which renewed. Renewed books are subject to immediate recall.